BRIGHT SAYINGS.

Easter novelties—last year's bonnets.

The egotist is never at a loss for a subject for conversation.

Everything is smooth sailing with us when we have no difficulty in raising the wind.

A man feels down in the mouth when buying a horse and sometimes much more so after buying it.

The conundrum, Is Marriage a Failure? is one of the things some people gave up during Lent.

It is the man who wouldn't shovel off the snow or clear the ice off his sidewalk who sneaks out of the way when his wife speaks of taking up the carpet.

Carl Dunder's Philosophy.

Sometimes a young man comes to me und says he like some advice ash to his future. I say to him:

"Shpeak der truth—be honest—be temperate und keep oudt of debt.

He goes right away and tries to be nominated for office, und maybe in six months he vhas in shail for embezzlement. Therefore I think it vhas best to shpeak to young mans who want advice:

"Go und do shust like you want to do und you will be all right."

Sometimes a girl brings me her album and says she likes me to write in it. I like to oblige her, und so I write:

"If you expect to be happy in der parlor you must practice economy in der kitchen.

Der next time I see dat album dot page vhas cut oudt und dot girl vhas telling people dot some old Dutchman's vhas shust to cranky to live. Therefore I belief it vhas better to write in dot album:

"Find a rich and foolish young man —marry him—sit down in der parlor —let de kitchen go py Halifax und you will lif one hoondred years und take all der happiness dere vhas."

Sometimes an oldt man comes to me und says he likes to get married again to a young girl, und he would be glad if I tell him how it vhas. It vhas pleasure for me to say:

"Dot man who vhas feefty years old und haf seex shildren vhas an idiot asylum to marry himself by a girl of eighteen.

Dot oldt man says he vhas eafer so much obliged, und he goes right off und marries dot gal und in 4 weeks all his shildren was turned oudt doors. Somepody shpeaks about Carl Dunder, und he says I don't know so mooch ash dot bird's nest of last year. Therefore, it vhas better for me I tell him:

"It vhas all right, Mister Schmidt —marry at once—It vhas your duty —young wives like oldt husbands— never mind dose shildrens—you vill be so happy ash never vas."

I vhas tired. Let somepody advise herself.—Detroit Free Press.

He Played to Lose.

He was a keen, sharp looking young man, and he said to the lady of the house on Second avenue as he stood in the hall:

"Madame, I have called for the suit of clothes which needs brushing and fixing."

"What suit?" she asked.

"Your husband's Sunday suit, ma'am. He called as he went down this morning."

"And he said I was to let you have them?"

"Yes'm."

"Did he appear in good health and spirits?"

"Why, certainly."

"Look and act natural?"

"Of course. Why do you ask?"

"Because he has been dead eighteen years, and I have some curiosity on the subject!"

"I—I have made a mistake, perhaps!" stammered the young man.

"Perhaps you have. The man you saw go out of here an hour ago is my brother. You may have better luck in the next block with the old fashioned confidence game. Good morning!"—Detroit Free Press.

Time's Revenge.

Husband—I must raise $1,300 to-morrow or my note will go to protest, and if my creditors once get started after me I am a ruined man.

Wife—Don't fret dear. You can surely raise that on my diamonds. You know you said they were worth $3,000 at the lowest valuation.

And as the memory of the awful lie he had told the day he gave her that $27 set of gems rose up before his guilty conscience, the miserable man betook himself into the outer darkness with an exceedingly bitter cry.—Terta Haute Express.

Wonderful Popularity.

The fact that the sale of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets exceeds that of any other pill in the market, be it great or small, is on account of the fact that they are tiny, little, sugar-coated granules, and that in most cases one little "Pellet" is sufficient for a dose; that they are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless; and for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, and all diseases arising from derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels, they are absolutely a specific. A gentle laxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

The total cost of the war of the rebellion was about $7,000,000,000,000.

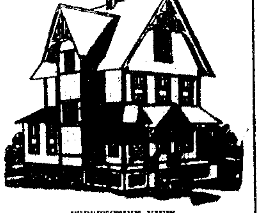
A COTTAGE FOR $1,460.

DESCRIPTION AND PLAN OF A MODEST AND TASTEFUL HOUSE.

Together with a Somewhat Detailed Statement of the Merits It Possesses—It Would Make a Pleasant Home for a Family of Moderate Means.

The building season is well opened, and designs for tasteful houses cannot fail to be interesting. The one presented this week was furnished The Manufacturer and Builder, from which it is here copied, by Palliser, Palliser & Co., New York, and a house is now being built from it in Sing Sing, N. Y. In compactness of arrangement the plans leave little to be desired. It is designed that the cellar shall extend under the whole house, and water is to be furnished from a well or spring.



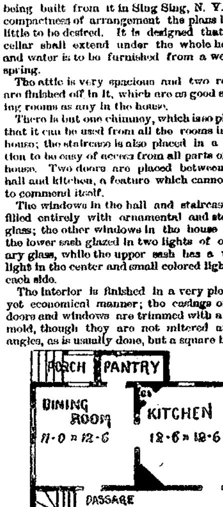
PERSPECTIVE VIEW.

The attic is very spacious and two rooms are finished off in it, which are as good sleeping rooms as any in the house.

There is but one chimney, which is so placed that it can be used from all the rooms in the house; the staircase is also placed in a position to be easy of access from all parts of the house. Two doors are placed between the hall and kitchen, a feature which cannot fail to commend itself.

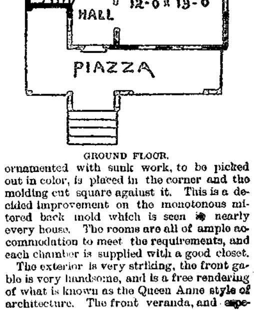
The windows in the hall and staircase are filled entirely with ornamental and stained glass; the other windows in the house have the lower sash glazed in two lights of ordinary glass, while the upper sash has a white light in the center and small colored lights on each side.

The interior is finished in a very pleasing yet economical manner; the casings of the doors and windows are trimmed with a back mold, though they are not mitered at the angles, as is usually done, but a square block, ornamented with sunk work, to be picked out in color, is placed in the corner and the molding cut square against it. This is a decided improvement on the monotonous mitered back mold which is seen in nearly every house. The rooms are all of ample accommodation to meet the requirements, and each chamber is supplied with a good closet.



GROUND FLOOR.

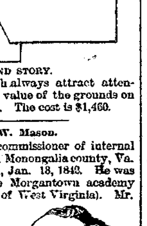
The exterior is very striking, the front gable is very handsome, and is a free rendering of what is known as the Queen Anne style of architecture. The front veranda, and especially the hood over the entrance, is very pretty—in fact, this is one of the prettily designed cottages which always attract attention and add to the value of the grounds on which they are built. The cost is $1,460.



SECOND STORY.

John W. Mason.

John W. Mason, commissioner of internal revenue, was born in Monongalia county, Va. (now West Virginia), Jan. 18, 1843. He was graduated from the Morgantown academy (now the University of West Virginia). Mr. Mason has been a schoolmaster, a soldier, is now a lawyer, and this is his first public office. He taught school until he was 25 years old. When the war broke out he joined the Union army, enlisting in the First West Virginia light infantry. He took part in the principal battles of West Virginia and the great valley of Virginia, serving with distinction until he was honorably discharged in September, 1864.



JOHN W. MASON.

Upon leaving the army he took up the practice of law and succeeded. He made Grafton, W. Va., his home, and for twenty-two years practiced law there. In 1882 he was a candidate for congress in the Second district, but was defeated by only ten votes. His opponent was the Hon. W. L. Wilson. In 1886 he was made a member of the Republican national committee and was a member until 1888.

He was defeated at the last election for supreme judge.

Hard on Bicycles.

Granite paving has its great advantages, and vice versa. Among others of the latter is the fact that it has nearly destroyed bicycling. The granite is so fatal to rubber tires that it requires so much to keep a machine in repair that but few can enjoy the sport. It will be but a few years before the two wheeled vehicles will have disappeared from our streets entirely.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

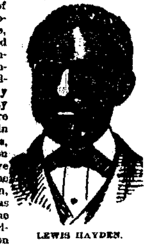
DEATH OF A NOTED EX-SLAVE.

Lewis Hayden, Whose History Was Very Eventful.

Lewis Hayden, who recently died at his home in Boston, was one of the noted colored men and fugitives of the "hard old times" of 1855-60. He was born a slave, lived long as a fugitive and opponent of national law, then for a quarter of a century as a freeman and finally died while in the service of the state of Massachusetts. He was born near Lexington, Ky., Dec. 2, 1811, and at the age of 10 was traded for a team of horses. Belonging to very intelligent people, he early acquired a high idea of the value of education and learned to read amid many difficulties. One day, in early manhood, while plowing in the fields he formed the design of running away and reaching Canada; that evening he confided the design to his wife, and thenceforward all their talents were given to plans for escape.

While employed at a hotel Mr. Hayden had cautiously gathered from guests all that he could of the north, and finally he and his wife, in the guise of servants to an eloping young couple, reached and crossed the Ohio. The managers of the "underground railroad" rapidly whirled them away to Canada, where they had to remain but a few months, as there was then no "Fugitive slave law." In 1844 he located in Boston, and his story was so vivid that the Anti-Slavery society placed him on the platform. In 1849 he engaged in the clothing business. The next year the noted law for retaking fugitives was passed, and his life of anxiety, toil and philanthropy began.



LEWIS HAYDEN.

A mere outline of his achievements would fill a column. He aided William Lloyd Garrison in his newspaper and other works. He was one of the party that rescued William and Mary Crafts (fugitives) from the United States marshals and ran them off to Canada. He led the attack on the United States court room when the once famous "Shadrack" was rescued, and another attack in which the well remembered Batchellor, a slave catcher, was killed. For the first he was arrested, and after an able defense by John P. Hale and Richard Dana he was acquitted. In other cases no bill of indictment could be procured, as the anti-slavery feeling was rapidly growing. He was an enthusiastic promoter of John Brown's schemes, and was the first man in Massachusetts to openly advocate the enlistment of colored troops. In conjunction with Garrison, Phillips and others he succeeded in having the separate schools for the colored abolished and colored children freely admitted to the common schools of Massachusetts.

From 1858 until his last sickness, Mr. Hayden served as official messenger in the state department of Massachusetts, devoting most of his spare time to labors for his race. His only son was killed during the war, near New Orleans, and his wife survives him. Personally he was a very pleasant, earnest looking and gentlemanly man, a very dark mulatto and generally taken for a full negro by those not familiar with the finer variations of race. His standing was so high in Boston that many eminent citizens attended his funeral, and memorial services were held in all the colored churches.

The pope's income for the year 1888 amounted to $2,520,000, of which $1,860,000 came from St. Peter's pence, and $660,000 from the interest of moneys invested out of Italy. The outlay of the Vatican only amounted to $1,700,000.

Interest in the story that treasure was buried many years ago in a hill in Kansas City is being revived there by the proposition of a railroad company to grade the district for a depot. The money was hidden, the story goes, by a Mexican gambler, and several unsuccessful searches have been made for it, one in 1873 by a Mexican.

A Madman at Large!

He is a well-known citizen, and his nearest and dearest friends do not suspect his insanity. How do we happen to know about it? Listen; his appetite is gone; he is low spirited, he don't sleep well, he has night-sweats, he is annoyed by a hacking cough. These symptoms are the forerunners of consumption and death, and yet he neglects them. Is it any wonder that we call him a madman? If you are his friend tell him to get a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery without delay. It will cure him if he takes it in time. It will not miraculously create new lungs when the old ones are nearly gone, but it will restore diseased ones to a healthy condition. Tell him about it, and warn him that in his case delay means death.

A NEW paper in Syracuse the Graphic is the latest addition seeking for public favor there. It presents a fine typographical appearance, is printed on good calandered paper and as much of its space is devoted to local affairs it will doubtless be well patronized.

THE TIMES can be purchased at the postoffice news room, at Sullivan's post office news room at Oswego Falls and at Pollay's store, Lower Oswego Falls. The best way however is to subscribe and have it sent regularly to your address at $1.25 per year, or take advantage of one of our combination offer.

FOUR days and twenty-one hours is the arrangement now made for running trains from New York to San Francisco over the Union Pacific. It would have made our forefathers stare had they heard that the trip from the Pacific slope to the British Isles could be made in about eleven days. What an age for annihilating time and space!

THE enterprising New York World, the paper that has attained the greatest success ever gained in modern journalism welcomed President Harrison in its columns in fourteen languages Monday, appeared printed in ye characters of 100 years ago on antique paper, Tuesday and in the national emblems, red, white and blue to-day. "The World do move."

THE life of Vice President Morton was endangered by a collision on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad Friday at Baltimore. The accident was not very serious as both trains fortunately were running slowly. Both baggage cars were shattered and four employes of the road injured. Among other distinguished passengers aboard were Gen. Schofield and staff and Gov. Foraker of Ohio and staff. They were on their way to New York.

BOOMERS in Guthrie, Oklahoma, the city which sprung into existance in a day are scared and well they may be. Their high hopes are blasted. A small pox epidemic threatens them. A simoon swept the desert Friday and almost buried them in red dust. Murders are being committed. The brackish river water is poisonous and pure water costs 10 cents a glass. Hundreds of dissappointed people are returning to their homes in Kansas and other states. Alas for the hopes that have been for naught.

ROBERT P. PORTER, editor of the New York Press, who has been appointed Superintendent of the Census, will receive a salary of $6,000 and will have $6,000,000 to disburse. He has a chief clerk at a salary of $2,500, ten chiefs of divisions at $3,000 each and sixty other clerks of various classes. There will be 175 supervisors who will receive an average of about $350 each. There will be also some thirty thousand enumerators who will be paid according to the number of names they turn in.

New York's Great Centennial Celebration.

Nothing could be in more striking contrast than the difference between the simple and unostentatious manner in which George Washington journeyed from Mt Vernon to New York 100 years ago to take the oath of office as the first president of the United States and the splendid magnificence with which his successor, Benjamin Harrison, was welcomed when he came to New York Monday to participate in the centennial anniversary of the inauguration of the government.

Never before in the history of the country has there been such a display of flags and bunting as that which is now seen in New York city. The city is literally clothed in the red, white and blue of the national emblem, there being everywhere evidence of heaviest expenditure of money for decorations. The city was probably never more crowded than it was yesterday when every street and avenue through which the military and civic parades passed was a swaying mass of humanity while buildings, windows, balconies &c. were filled to their utmost capacity.

On Monday the first day of this great demonstration it was a battle between sun and clouds for the supremacy and although the former seemed to have gained the victory the atmosphere was cold and damp-ening and the rain of the preceeding day was a disagreeable feature of the event as it had a bad effect in its ravages upon the flags and bunting which had been flung to the uncanny breezes last week.

The arrangements for the naval parade on Monday were carried out to the letter under the command of Admiral D. D. Porter. The steamer Dispatch took aboard President Harrison and his party at Elizabethport and the greatest naval parade ever witnessed begun. The general formation of the line was a column consisting of the naval division, the revenue division and the yacht division, making up the largest fleet of ships ever seen in this country, the President's vessel passed. Each ship fired a full President's salute of twenty-one guns. On the arrival of the Dispatch at the foot of Wall street the President was rowed to the shore by the fastest baage in the navy manned by a crew of shipmasters from the marine society of the port of New York.

On reaching the shore President Harrison was received by Governor Hill, Mayor Grant, Hamilton Fish, president of the centennial committee and William G. Hamilton, chairman of the committee on states.

The old banner which was borne before Washington in 1789 and which has been preserved with reverence for 100 years was carried before President Harrison's carriage on the march up Wall street to the Equitable building where a grand reception was held.

After the reception and banquet at the Equitable building the President and his party proceeded to the City Hall where where another public reception was held.

The evening event was the grand ball the large Metropolitan opera house presenting a scene of unprecedented gayety. President and Mrs. Harrison, Ex-President and Mrs. Cleveland, attended occupying boxes. All that money could do to make this a success was done and the results seem to have been decidedly satisfactory.

The second day opened with a clear sky, cool breezes and a city full to overflowing with people.

The thanksgiving services at St. Paul's chapel was attended by the celebrities where the address was given by the Rt. Rev. Henry C. Potter Bishop of New York, the prayer of thanksgiving being the same as was used in all Episcopal churches of the country.

The sub-Treasury was the next point of which interest centered Here 100 years before George Washington took the oath of office as first President, a beautiful poem written by John Greenleaf Whittier, entitled "The Van of Washington" was read the orator of the day, Hon. Chauncey M. Depew gave a historical review of the first century of constitutional and federated government in this land, filled with glowing pictures of men and scenes of the formation period.

Following Mr. Depew, President Harrison amid the applause of the assembled multitude spoke. Archbishop Corrigan pronounced the benediction and the exercises at the historic Sub-Treasury were ended. The moment these exercises closed the military parade started. There were about sixty thousand soldiers in line led by Major General Schofield with his staff and corps of aids.

It is reported as the greatest military parade of modern times, and took five hours and twenty-five minutes to pass a given point.

Up to Broadway as far as the eye could reach, the sidewalks were literally blockaded with people, while the windows, doorways and roofs of the buildings were simply a mass of humanity. As the gergeous pageant began to move up Broadway all the patriotism in this mass which had been pent up now come forth. Cheers rend the air, handkerchiefs and banners held in the hands of the populace began waving, and New York and its many thousand visiotors were happy. The scene was one never to be forgotten.

It is estimated that 100,000 persons were unable to see the parade from the stands specially built for that purpose.

The reviewing stand was at Madison Square, where the Presidential party made their way from the Sub-Treasury and reviewed the vast procession.

In the evening the grand centennial banquet took place in the Metropolitan opera house where 35 tables were arranged in horseshoe fashion, each with a seating capacity for 800.

The illustrious assemblage of Americans partook of the feast which is said to have cost $25,000.

Mayor Grant was the presiding officer. After dinner speeches were made by Governor Hill, ex-President Cleveland, General Sherman, [illegible]nor Lee of Virginia, Chief Justice Fuller, Senator Daniel, ex-President Hayes, Senator Everts, James Russell Lowell, President Elliot of Harvard college and President Harrison.

During the evening there was a fine pyrotechnic display at the various Parks, Squares and at the Battery. The fire works cost over $11,000.

To-day the scene changed. The soldier gave way to the artisan and the great industrial organizations form a pageant in New York city that closes the grandest demonstration this country has ever witnessed.

Wide Awake.

The May Wide Awake has two contributions that make this issue of special interest. One is a long and thrilling tale by Jessie Benton Fremont, of a personal California adventure in the wild mining days of 1840.

As a foil to this dramatic narrative, is "The Household of Andrew Jackson" (Children of the White House Series). It is enriched with twenty illustrations.

Every one who enjoys a good anecdote, well told, turns first each month to the new department "Men and Things."

Trowbridge's popular serial "The Adventures of David Vand and David Crane" reaches its last and best chapters.

A new serial, "Sybil Fair's Fairness," by Chas. Talbot, author of "Romulus and Remus," "Royal Lowrie," "Honor Bright," etc., will open wish the new volume in June. "Five Little Peppers Midway," Margaret Sidney's charming serial, comes to a pause in this number. But "Five Little Peppers Further On," will delight all readers through the second half of the year.

Many other articles, stories and poems fill the number, the more noticeable ones being a ballad of a boy's perilous ride during the Civil war, a "Behavior Letter," by Mrs. ex-Governor Claflin, "An English May Day," by Mrs. F. A. Humphrey, "Walking," by Miss L. I. Guiney, etc.

Wide Awake is 20 cents a number, $2.40 a year. D. Lothrop Company, Boston, Publishers.

THE CENTURY.

A new volume of this great magazine begins with the May number, the frontispiece of which is one of Mrs. Foote's pictures of the Far West, "Cinching Up." Then follow two of Cole's engravings of the old Italian masters, with accompanying articles by W. J. Stillman and the engraver himself.

The most timely papers in the number are a series on "Samoa; The Isles of the Navigators." The first is by Dr. H. W. Whitaker of the United States Navy, and is profusely illustrated. The second, also illustrated, is on "Our Relations to Samoa," by Mr. George H. Bates, who was Commissioner of the United States in 1886, and who, since this article was written, has been reappointed Commissioner by the present Administration. The third paper in this series is a brief one by Captain Erben of the United States Navy, who commanded the "Tuscarora" when it took Steinberger to Samoa in 1875.

The readers of War literature will be especially interested in the chapters of the Lincoln History, the article on "The Western Soldier," and "Open Letters" and editorials on "Soldiers' Memorial Services." "Fraternization—The Blue and the Gray," and "General McClellan's Baggage-Destroying Order." The Lincoln History deals this month with "The President and the Draft," "Vallandigham," and "The Peace Party at the Polls." The first chapter is of unusual interest, containing as it does an address to the nation at large by President Lincoln, which address he finally resolved to suppress. It now sees the light for the first time, being printed from Mr. Lincoln's MS. It is a constitutional argument on the draft and covers over two pages of THE CENTURY. The May number contains besides the above its usual quota of excellent articles that materially assists in making the unparalled success that The Century enjoys.

Scribner's Magazine.

This magazine holds its position in the first ranks of the foremost American magazines. The May number will interest and instruct readers of many and varied tastes. Men of letters, lovers of good fiction and poetry, railway men, amateur and professional photographers and sportsmen will find articles which will strongly appeal to them. The variety and excellence of the engravings will delight those who appreciate good art.

Among the highly illustrated articles are "The Land of the Winanisha" dealing with different kinds of fishing. "Count Leo Tolstay Twenty-Years Ago," "The Freight-car Service," by Theodore Voorhees, Asst. Gen. Supt. of the New York Central and "Photography" by John Trowbridge.

[illegible] Arbor Day.

Acting under the law of 1888, the Superintendent of Public Instruction submits some suggestions which it is hoped may be of service to the schools in observing the first Arbor Day in this state, which will occur on Friday, May 3, accompanying the same with original songs and poems which have been contributed for this use, together with appropriate selections from various authors who have written on subjects in harmony with the spirit of the day.

The primary purpose of the Legislature in establishing "Arbor Day," was to develop and stimulate in the children of the Commonwealth a love and reverence for nature as revealed in trees and shrubs and flowers. In the language of the statute "to encourage the planting, protection and preservation of trees and shrubs" was believed to be the most effectual way in which to lead our children to love nature or nature's God, and to see the uses to which these natural objects may be put in making our school grounds more healthful and attractive.

The object sought may well command the most thoughtful consideration and the painstaking efforts of school officers, teachers and pupils in every school district, and in every educational institution, and of all others who are interested in beautifying the schools and the homes of the state.

It will be well not only to plant trees and shrubs and vines and flowers where they many contribute to pleasure and comfort, but also to provide for their petpetual care, and to supplement such work by exercises which will lead all to a contemplation of the subject in its varied relations and resultant influences. It is fitting that trees should be dedicated to eminent scholars, educators, statesmen, soldiers, historians or poets, or to favorite teachers or pupils in the different localities. On this occasion, however, it would be especially appropriate to dedicate one tree in each district to Washington.

The opportunity should not be lost, which is afforded by the occasion, for illustrating and enforcing the thought that the universe, its creation, its arrangement, and all its developing processes, are not due to human planning or oversight, but to the infinite wisdom and power of God.

Our school exercises, and particularly those of an unusual character, should be interspersed with selections, songs and acts which will inspire patriotism. Upon the same week in which Arbor day first occurs, the Nation will celebrate the Inauguration of Washington, "the more perfect Union" and the full organization of the National Government. It will be a great and magnificent outburst of praise and song and exultation, appropriate to the successful rounding out of the first hundred years of the Nation's life. Let this fact have some place and exert some influence in our Arbor Day exercises.

CHOOSING THE STATE TREE.

A prominent educator makes the suggestion that interest in Arbor Day exercises may be increased by requesting the school children of the state, and all others taking part in the observance of the day, to vote upon the question: "What is the State Tree?"

This feature may excite a pleasant diversion which will afford profitable study and results, and teachers are, therefore, requested to make such arrangements for taking the vote suggested, as may be convenient and advisable, forwarding the result of such vote to School Commissioners of City Superintendents of Schools, giving number of school district and name of town or city, who will compile the results and forward to the State Superintendent for public announcement through the press.

ARBOR DAY NOTES.

In 1887, 412 districts in Connecticut planted 4,159 trees and shrubs.

Arbor Day originated in Nebraska in 1872. It has since been established in thirty-four states and two territories.

Statistics show that there has been planted in Nebraska since Arbor Day was instituted 355,560,000 forest, shade and fruit trees.

In 1887 304 schools in Florida are teported as participating in Arbor Day exercises, and 5,129 trees were planted.

In the report of the Minister of Education of the Province of Ontario for the year 1887, he says; "Arbor Day has now become one of the most interesting and profitable holidays of the year. In 1885, 38,940, and in 1886, 34,087 trees were planted."

ROBERT A. GUNN, M. D., Dean and Professor of Surgery of the United States Medical College, Editor of "Medical Tribune," author of "Gunn's New Improved Hand-book of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," says over his own signature in addressing the proprietors of Warner's Cure: "I cannot be true to my convictions unless I extend a helping hand and endorse all I know to be good and trustworthy. Your graphic descriptions of diseases of the kidneys and liver have awaken the the medical profession to the fact of their great increase. Physicians have been experimentally treating this disease, and while casting about for an authorized remedy, their patients have died on their hands."

WASHINGTON, April [illegible], 1889.

The average Government clerk does not strain either his physical or mental powers in the service of his country. He is rather prone to being absent, sick as often as he dares, and to day-dreaming when he is present. Of course there is a respectable minority who work hard, but as like as not you will find no further observation that there are often men whose education and ability are not sufficient to enable them to do even a decent amount of work without great effort. These statements are true of both sexes, and of all offices where extensive technical knowledge is not demanded.

But there is one employe in each department who has to work early and late, to take his work and worry home with him, and be waylaid by all sorts of people at all sorts of times, on matters of shop. This employe is known to the other alleged public itself as the Honorable Secretary.

The Honorable Secretary has a hard time of it, and the more inexperienced he is in public life the more he suffers, always of course considering the relative importance of the various departments. Thus by the importance of his department and his unfamiliarity with routine departmental work, Secretary Noble is probably the most overworked man in Washington, and even his magnificent physique is beginning to show the strain. He is very accessible and listens to visitors on unimportant business with the same courteous attention that he accords to really weighty matters. In a few months he will either have broken under the strain or ordered minor affairs attended to by minor officials. I believe that substantially all his waking hours are given to the affairs of his office, which you will remember includes the greatest number of widely different bureaus of any of the executive Departments. Think of a Secretary having charge of patents, pensions, parks, labor, education, indians and lands, and a dozen other things, all in a jumble.

Secretary Blaine performs his labor with more ease than any other member of the Cabinet. His faculty for doing vast amounts of work without the appearance of strain is due no less to his magnificent ability than to his long training. Mr. Blaine's mind is an instantaneous camera and a single flash fixes the details of any affair upon his mind. So far as quickness is concerned, he is the model secretary. Whether it be an obscure consulship or an important treaty his mind acts with lightning rapidity. Mr. Blaine does not usually arrive at his office before 11 o'clock, but he always brings with him a budget of papers that has received his attention the night before at his apartments in the Normandie.

The burly figure of Secretary Windom enters the Treasury Department at 9 o'clock in the morning and the grind begins. He remains all day, until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, in his office, listening to the endless procession of visitors with their bewildering variety of requests and complaints. And in these days Mr. Windom finds need for all the arts he learned while in the Senate and while formerly Secretary of the Treasury. His smile never deserts him. Even the Secretary's private office is continually crowded, and he has to take important visitors to one side, and in the little nook where the windows overlook the river and the far Virginia hills, a great many annoying problems have been solved.

Attorney General Miller is at his desk from 8 o'clock in the morning to 6 o'clock in the afternoon, and he goes back to the department at 7:30 to remain until 10 o'clock, attending to the business that has been virtually settled in the interviews of the day. He has not contracted the habit of taking work home with him.

Secretary Proctor is rather out of the office-seekers beat, and his department is less closely associated with the business interests of the country. Therefore his life is not an unpleasant one and the silence of many of his hours is only broken by the click of the type writer and the sound of his own voice dictating to his stenographer. He is a very nervous man and dictates badly from a natural inclination to do his writing himself. In fact it may be said of the majority of public men that half of their slipshod sentences are the result of dictation, an art very hard to acquire and never acquired by one in ten of the men who attempt it.

The same comparative safety from visitors is Secretary Tracy's privilege, but Secretary Rusk's callers are numerous, and the name of Postmaster General Wanamaker is legion. He seldom leaves his office before 6 p. m.

[illegible] For Every Ill[illegible]

[illegible] What is required as a family medicine, one that will relieve and cure those ailments which are liable to come at any season and to attack both sexes and all ages. Amid the host of articles that are offered to the public for this purpose, nearly all are useless or worse than useless. It is no vain boast to say that the medicine herein mentioned is of a very different character. What it has done is known to multitudes of persons whom it has cured of weary and painful diseases. It has saved time, money and many dear and precious lives. Now please understand as the life is in the blood so disease and death are in the blood. Get the poison out of the blood and life and health will at once return to every part of the body. Dr. Brown's Sarsaparilla does this work quickly and surely through its direct and positive action upon the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver and skin. For all waste and corrupt elements must be cast off by means of these channels. Rheumatism, scrofula, bronchitis, gout, consumption, malaria, catarrh, hay fever, all skin affections and eruptions are diseases of the blood.

George H. Wish, of the firm of Truxton & Wish, Bangor, Me., was afflicted with a scrofulous humor which caused troublesome sores upon both his legs. Many remedies were used and several physicians consulted, without result. After taking Brown's Sarsaparilla a short time he was better, and soon the eruption disappeared and he is now all right. Death of H. M. Hubbard.

On Saturday morning the people of this community were startled and pained to learn of the death of H. M. Hubbard at his home near Horse Plains. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia, though he has not been strong for some months past.

The deceased came to the Pacific slope as early as '52 and more than twenty years ago made his home at Blackfoot City, in Deer Lodge county which was then one of the prominent towns of the territory. From there he moved to this county where he held several positions of trust. Last fall he was elected probate judge but failing health would not permit him to assume the duties of that position. He was a man, liberal-minded, generous and kind and many a sigh of regret will be breathed from the hearts of the old-times who knew him here in the "sixties" when they here the sad news, Hubbard is dead."

We quote the above from the Missoula, Montana Gazette of April 24.

Assault at Oswego.

Last Friday night three men, supposed to be union sailors, went at midnight on board the schooner John Scheutte of Toledo, which had a "scab" crew, and attacked the mate, Joe Josephs of Toledo, and beat him with belaying pins and clubs. They then took him ashore, pounded him to insensibility and threw him into a cellar of a burned house. He crawled out, more dead than alive, and got to a house near by. He identified Alexander Skillen, the president of the Lake Seamen's association, who has been arrested, as one of the assailants. Josephs may die. Skillen was committed without bail to await the result of Josephs' injuries. The crew had been driven from the vessel previous to the assault. Skillen claims an alibi.

Three men Michael Donovan, Andrew Hageny and William Putnam were arrested in Phœnix Monday as accomplices in the crime. They were here in Fulton over Saturday and if Fulton officers had been notified they could have been secured then.

The McGibeny Family.

This celebrated family will reach Fulton, on Tuesday, May 7th, in their elegant palace car and on the evening of that day will give one of their justly renowned entertainments at the opera house.

The Troy Press of recent date gives them the following complimentary notice:

"Rand's Opera House has seldom contained a larger and more cultivated audience than that which assembled last night to listen to the celebrated McGibeny family. Although having been on the road for fifteen years this is their first visit to Troy. The McGibeny family is entitled to all that has been said in their behalf, for from the oldest to the youngest they seem to have been formed to entertain the public. They embrace one of the most skillful musical combinations that has ever appeared before a Trojan audience. One of the most attractive features about these people, is their unostentatious and unassuming manner. Theirs differs from most entertainments, being pure in tone and unobjectionable in class, and just the sort of a concert that pleases everybody, from the little child to the aged parent.

Lester & Worden have the agency for and are using a new wall preparation for wall tinting and decoration styled "Plastico." We have seen some of this work and have no hesitancy in saying that Plastico seems admirably adapted to the purpose of producing upon ordinary walls at a moderate cost the beautiful effects of the various grades of relief work both light and heavy, so deservedly popular at the present time. The cement being of a hard, stone-like nature susceptible of receiving varnish or paint, renders such work permanent, each coat strengthening and improving the wall upon which it is laid.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

A Young Man Probably Fatally Injured at Foster Bros. Knife Factory.

Shortly after 10 o'clock this forenoon a young man named Willie Johnson age about 17 years was caught in the shafting while attempting to put on a belt at Foster Bros. Knife Works.

It is thought that his right arm was caught by the belt and he was hurled around with the shaft which makes about 200 revolutions per minute, until the speed could be shut down. At each revolution his left arm which was free struck the floor about 18 inches above the shaft. It was a shapeless mass and was amputated. When the speed was stopped his right arm was between the belt and pulley and his legs twined around the shaft. This position saved his life if he recovers from the injuries received the full extent of which are not yet known. He was taken to his boarding house kept by Mrs. Allen at the corner of State and Third streets in this village. Where Drs. Lake, Marsh and Miller amputated the left arm above the elbow and bandaged the many bruises.

The doctors have hopes of his recovery.

MASONIC THANKSGIVING.

They Celebrate Their Freedom From Debt All Over the State.

The general features of the exercises of Hiram lodge No. 144 F. & A. M. held in the opera house last Wednesday evening, were the same as those of the 717 Masonic lodges scattered over the state. In all these lodges promptly at 8 o'clock services were opened with prayer followed by the singing of Old Hundred, the reading of Grand Master Lawrence's address of thanksgiving and congratulation. Then followed such addresses, musical programs and literary exercises as each lodge might wish.

In this village the masons turned out in large numbers and were well entertained by interesting addresses by Revs. J. C. Breaker and B. Brunning. T. Ferris, W. M. of the lodge had charge of the exercises. The Grand Master's address was read by N. N. Stranahan and music for the occasion was excellently rendered by Messrs. Gilbert and Allen and the Misses Rankin and Worden, with Mrs. Emerick at the piano. The weather was inclement and the attendance consequently was not large.

LOCAL CELEBRATION.

Centennial of Washington's Inauguration.

The hours between 9 and 11 a. m. yesterday were given up in the village for hours of rejoicing that the century stone in our country's government was reached and to-day was under most favorable auspices. The stores were closed between the above mention hours. At 8 a. m. the church bells sounded, again at 8:30 and again at 9 when many had made their way to the Presbyterian church where Centennial exercises were held. The large organ pealed forth a patriotic air under the skillful manipulation of Mrs. F. A Emerick before the double quartet consisting of Messrs Gilbert, Allen, Rice, Cooper, Goodjon, Hodges, Buck and J. J. Coit sang an appropriate selection.

Divine blessing was asked by the Rev. J. C. Breaker followed by the reading of Pres. Harrison's proclamation by Rev. B. Brunning. Scripture reading by Rev. D. M. Rankin followed. A prayer, impressive and comprehensive, was offered by Rev. Chas. Olmstead.

The orator of the day H. E. Nichols was then presented to the audience by Mr. Chase. Mr. Nichols gave a well written biographical sketch of Washington, placing him before the audience as an infant and tracing his career from infancy to the time one hundred years ago when he landed in New York, then the nations capital, to take the oath making him the first president of the United States.

His services as a volenteer under Braddock in the French and Indian war. His unflinching, integrity and devotion to the country whose wrongs were so vividly expressed by the eloquent Patrick Henry. His suffering at Valley Forge brought on by the destitute condition of his soldiers. His battles in the Revolution which under his guiding hand changed the destiny of this nation and finally freedom gained. Washington laid aside his sword and went to his Mt Vernon home in hopes to pass the remainder of his life in gratitude and peace, only to be called again to act as its first chief magisfrate. These and other acts were ably considered by the orator of the day. Afterward short addresses or remarks were made by Revs. Breaker, Brunning, Rankin, Olmstead, Chase and Messrs. Smith of Fulton, Craine and W. B. Howard of Volney. The excercises closed with "America" the Old Doxology and benediction by Dr. Rankin.

THE FULTON TIMES

Wednesday May 1, 1889.

WORTH KNOWING.

Every farm ought to have its experimental patch.

"There is no clover seed in the world so good as that raised on a sandy soil," affirms a Wisconsin farmer.

For late sweet corn leading growers pronounce the Evergreen all that could be desired.

A correspondent of Orchard and Garden pronounces the Mikado one of the best tomatoes he has ever grown, very large, smooth, solid and of excellent quality.

The opinions expressed at a recent meeting of the Ohio State Horticultural society were almost unanimous in favor of four foot drainage.

Nearly one thousand women have entered for the Rural New Yorker's women's potato contest. The list includes all classes and ages and represents every State in the Union.

The fact is beyond dispute, says a prominent Illinois dairyman, that the fine aromatic flavor of butter, and also its keeping qualities, depend upon the management of the cream from the time it is separated from the milk until it goes into the churn.

A good system of rotation enables the farmer to grow, at little or no expense, his fertilizers in the soil where they are needed. It also more than doubles the value of the manure applied if used intelligently and judiciously.

The silo convention recently held at Cleveland, O., was attended by over 500 dairymen, stockmen, farmers and others interested in silos and ensilage. The general verdict rendered was to the effect that silos have have come to stay.

Hogs fed on corn alone can scarcely be altogether healthy. When farmers come to properly realize, if they ever do, that a mixed diet is necessary to health, the country may perhaps bid a long farewell to hog cholera and its attendant evils.

No branches, large or small, should ever be cut away from a tree without a reason for it, is The American Agriculturist's rule for pruning. One should be able to say to himself why it will be better for the tree to remove a certain branch than to let it remain.

"The best land you have got is not any too good for strawberries, but any land that will raise a first class crop of corn or potatoes will raise a good, fair crop of strawberries," says a prominent berry grower.

Grains of Corn

Better two vigorous stalks than four weak ones because crowded and sparingly fed.

For cut worms, try a mixture of two parts of salt to two parts of land plaster, dropping a little at each hill.

One warm day does not make the proper season for planting any more than one swallow makes a summer.

The man who waited to begin cultivation until he could see the plants, found that the weeds were earlier than he.

Select seed carefully and keep selecting. Build up. Pedigree in corn is just as valuable as pedigree in the Shorthorn or Poland China.

A study of the methods by which three times the average yield of corn was made shows that there is an unusual amount of work expended in preparing the seed bed.

Don't plant before the ground is thoroughly warm. By gaining a week in the time of planting you are apt to lose two weeks in the time of harvesting and twenty per cent. of the crop.

Drilling produces the larger yield and profit, except on very foul ground. If you have purchased such ground you will be excused for planting in hills until you can cleanse the land.

There cannot be a good crop without a good stand; and there cannot be a good stand without good seed—seed that will do more than germinate: that will produce inherently vigorous plants as well.

Corn may do well on hilly land (though the crop must be uneven,) but nearly always the land will lose heavily by the denuding action of rain—often so heavily as to make grass or small grain a more profitable crop.

In the northern States, to lengthen the season would be to increase the crop nine years in ten. Hence the first measure to increase the yield on land not thoroughly drained naturally is through the artificial drainage.

If the 1888 corn crop was loaded on two-horse wagons, 33 bushels to the load, and the wagons were placed 26 feet a part, or as nearly as possible in a string, the string of wagons would reach twelve times around the globe—300,000 miles!

Nothing promises to so revolutionize the present waste of corn fodder in the West as the new but growing practice of cutting the field corn close to the ground as soon as the kernels are well glazed and putting the whole crop directly into the silo, either whole or cut into half-inch lengths, ears and all.—American Agriculturist.

WILLIAM ROBERTS, M. D. F. R. C. P., of the University of London, Eng., says: "Passive congestion of the kidneys may be present, in which the urine contains not a trace of albumen, while the symptoms of intense venous congestion, dropsy, orthopnœa and and pulsating jugulars are present. The urine becomes scanty, high-colored dens." Warner's Safe Cure has cured thousands of these symptoms, often called diseases, by putting the kidneys in a healthy condition."

The Empress of Austria is said to be fond of speaking English.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation, you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable; small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

There are 60 women dentists in the

The Ayrshire Breed of Cattle.

The Ayrshire is eminently a dairy breed. The cows are active and hardy, and will flourish and give good yield of milk under conditions that would starve pampered cattle. They have great power of endurance, healthy appetites, good digestion and ready adaptiveness to all vicissitudes of situation and climate. They are remarkably free from tendency to disease; tuberculosis and other affections of the respiratory organs being unknown among them. They are long lived, often improving in milking qualities up to ten years of age.

The general form of the Ayrshire cow has been described as resembling a hand-saw, with the small end forward. The head is fine and lean; face rather long and slightly dishing; horns slim and waxy; neck fine and slim; udder large and well spread out rather than pendent; teats small, often too small for convenient milking. The characteristic colors are red and white, though brown is not unusual. The reds are of various shades, from light brick color to deep cherry, and the white is in spots of various forms and sizes, but never mingled into a roan. The average standard weight is about one thousand pounds.—American Agriculturist.

Pointers About Presidents.

James Buchanan was the only bachelor president.

John Quincy Adams was the most baldheaded of any of the Presidents.

Cleveland was 48 at the time of his inauguration, being younger than any other of our presidents, except Grant.

Harrison, Taylor, Lincoln and Garfield died in office—the first two from sickness and the last two by assassination.

Seven Presidents were chosen for two terms Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln and Grant.

Grant was younger at his first inauguration than any other man on attaining to the Presidency. He was 47 years old.

Washington, Jefferson, Madison and Filmore (second time) married widows. The woman whom Jackson married was divorced from her first husband, Robards.

Grover Cleveland, like John Quincy Adams, came to the Presidency after the Government had been twenty-four years in the hands of the party opposed to him in politics.

Washington delivered the shortest inauguration address at his second inauguration. It consisted of 134 words. William Henry Harrison's inaugural was the longest of any—8,578 words.—Baltimore Herald.

The Boy Was a Stranger to Pain, and Puzzled Cincinnati Doctors.

John Walsmith, aged fourteen, died recently, and an autopsy on his body has shown the physicians who have discussed his case for some time what was the matter with him. Dr. Bohlander, who made the autopsy, says that an examination of the boy's brain showed an abnormal amount of white matter and little gray matter.

"As a result," says the doctor, "the nerves of motion were unusually active and those of sensation dull. He was strong as a giant, but had no physical feeling. He could place his hand, and has done so, on a hot stove and see it roast. Nothing seemed to materially injure him or give him pain. He has been run over by one of John Robinson's circus wagons, has fallen from the top of a bridge, and once walked out of a second-story window. Any one of the casualties would probably have killed a boy in a normal condition. I have sewed up great cuts while he sat and amused himself. In his stomach we found last night a strange mixture, consisting of a green ball of yarn, marbles, nickels, a large undigested apple-core and other small articles. The cause of his death was a ball of green yarn. It is about an inch in diameter, elongated at one end by the contraction of the cardiac muscle in the effort of nature to pass it into the stomach. It would have gone in if a needle had not been crosswise in it. It stuck at the stomach entrance and killed the boy.—N. Y. World.

John Bright left an estate variously estimated from £250,000 to £750,000.

RHEUMATISM

For More than Twenty-five Years.—A Complete Recovery.—The Means Used.

I had Inflammatory Rheumatism. For nearly a year I had to be fed and turned in bed. I could find no relief. My stomach was ruined and cut to pieces with powerful medicines taken to effect a cure so that I was compelled to live on bread and water. I suffered for twenty-five years in this way. I was induced to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y., and thanks to this medicine. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is my best friend. With it I am enabled to enjoy a good night's rest. Also food, such as meat and pastry, which I have been deprived of for years, showing that the Favorite Remedy has no equal for the cure of Indigestion and Dyspepsia as well. If any should doubt this statement I will send the ready proof at once.—Garrett Lansing, Troy, N. Y.

I Am Now Well,

It is my pleasure and absolute duty toward those who are struggling for very life against the deadly to add my testimony to the already weighty evidence of the wonderful efficacy of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. My wife was a hopeless case, abandoned by the physicians. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was [illegible]

Home Evidence

No other preparation has won success at home equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla. In Lowell, Mass., where it is made, it is now, as it has been for years, the leading medicine for purifying the blood, and toning and strengthening the system. This "good name at home" is "a tower of strength abroad."

People of Lowell

It would require a volume to print all Lowell people have said in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Albert Estes, living at 28 East Pine Street, Lowell, for 15 years employed as boss carpenter by J. W. Bennett, president of the Erie Telephone Company, had a large running sore come on his leg, which troubled him a year, when he began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The sore soon grew less in size, and in a short time disappeared.

Jos. Dunphy, 214 Central Street, Lowell, had swellings and lumps on his face and neck, which Hood's Sarsaparilla completely cured.

Praise Hood's Sarsaparilla

Mrs. C. W. Marriott, wife of the First Assistant Fire Engineer of Lowell, says that for 16 years she was troubled with stomach disorder and sick headache, which nothing relieved. The attacks came on every fortnight, when she was obliged to take her bed, and was unable to endure any noise. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after a time the attacks ceased entirely.

Many more names could be given had we room. On the recommendation of people of Lowell, who know us, we ask you to try

A Heroe's Reward.

A nice property in Saratoga, has just come into possession of F. M. Christie as the result of an heroic, if not a romantic incident which occurred ten years ago.

In the summer of 1879 Christie, with many others, was crossing the river on a small ferryboat plying between Troy and West Troy to see a game of base ball. On the trip a young lady was accidentially pushed overboard, and Christie plunged into the water and saved her from drowning.

The young lady proved to be Miss Alice Gibbons, daughter of a rich Boston merchant, and who was visiting her aunt in West Troy.

Soon afterward Mr. Gibbons came on from Boston, sought ought out Christie and offered to reward him by the gift of a nice sum of money. But Christie refused the money, saying that he felt amply rewarded in saving a human life. A fortnight later Christie received an express package, containing a gold watch and chain bearing a suitable inscription. Subsequently Miss Gibbons married John Henderson of Boston, who died two years later, leaving his widow in affluent circumstances.

Two weeks ago the widow died, and in her will she made Christie heir to a considerable property in Saratoga as an act of gratitude for his saving her life ten years ago.—Schenectady Reflector.

The Land of Topsy-Turvy.

There's a land we often visit, in our dreams we wander there,
Where things happen up side-downly, as they never do down here.
'Tis the land of topsy-turvy, but its very far away;
Where everything is inside out, and it's pitch dark all day.
The sun shines out at midnight, all day the star lets blink;
Pure water there is very black, clear as crystal is the ink.

In this land of topsy-turvy, where everything's reversed,
And bad deeds are rewarded, and best is always worst,
There are no rates nor taxes, there's work for every one;
The queen is always visible to every mother's son.
The cows lay eggs for breakfast, the hens produce fresh milk,
And ladies wear cloth trowsers, and men wear frocks of silk,

No girls e'er powder faces and carriage wheels are square;
The comic press produces jokes. Oh, would that I were there!
Food's not adulterated, all literature is pure,
The butchers' charges all are just, and doctors sometimes cure.
The horses ride in coaches grand, and men are chased by hares;
The attics all are underground, the cellars are upstairs.

They don't like strawberries and cream, they Call their physic "nice;"
They have coal fires to freeze things, to warm themselves use ice.
Their snow falls in the summer, in winter it's so warm;
Umbrellas they all carry then, but use none in a storm.
The ceilings all are on the ground, the floors are up above;
They always marry those they hate and murder those they love.

The owls are sweetest singers, nightingales "twi-to-whoo;"
The pretty doves all say "baa," the pet lambs always "coo,"
The railway engines always walk, the cabs all go by steam.
Now milk produce treacle, they skim coal-tar for cream,
The railroad trains are fixtures—a rule they never vary;
Instead of which their stations, all are never station-ary.

When people sleep they walk about, when awake they go to bed;
They put their hats upon their feet, and boots upon each head.
Their coats they wear upon their legs, and trowsers on their backs;
A boy can be called Mary Jane, a lady christened "Jack."
The poorest people ride first-class, the rich ones travel third.
(There's not a fourth or they would go by that so I have heard.)

The morning papers all come out late in the afternoon;
The Christmas books are published on the twenty-fourth of June.
The ladies are all husbands, and the men are always wives;
They cut their drinks with spoons or forks, and eat their wine with knives.
A hollow place they call a hill, a rising ground a vale;
They brew their meat in bakers' shops, on trees they grow their ale.

'Tis owners of the goods that buy, the purchaser who sells;
Plums are found inside the stones, nuts grow outside the shells.
The branches of the trees are in the ground, roots in the air.
Potatoes grow on bushes and they dig for grape or pear.
The bread's laid on in leaden pipes, the gas comes in a crate;
The straight thing's bent or circular, a ring is always straight.

Their honey comes from blocks of wood, and shavings come from bees;
Canaries swim in ocean's depths, the fishes roost on trees.
They say work's finished ere they start, when over it's begun;
Instead of going one, two, three, the clocks go three, two, one,
They keep their cases in their books, and cloths put under tables;
A falsehood there is called a fact, and all true stories fables.

They keep their coal in china plates, in scuttles stand their fruit;
They call "a bully" amable, a gentle girl "a brute".
Their mourning color's scarlet, their underclothes are black;
The drakes and ducklings growl and roar, and lions say "quack! quack!"
The sober men all spirits drink, the topers lemonade;
They put the roofs on houses ere the foundation's laid.

A hansom cab has sixteen wheels, the growler has but one;
The mice and rats run after cats, and people weep at fun.
They lay their carpets on the walls, hang pictures on the floor;
Their cannons go off noislessly, they kill no one in war.
All children are obedient and gentle to each other;
A little boy is never rude, nor tries to tease a brother.

The metal steel is very soft and feather beds are hard.
The roads are watered o'er with scent; they clean their teeth with lard.
A pretty name's "an insult" an insult—compliment!
Ships run on land keel upwards and landlords pay the rent.
Gins, brandies, rums are very weak, tea twenty over proof;
The chimney pots are in the rooms their grates upon the roof.
Their powder puffs are made of lead, collars as garters wear;
Their oil's adhesive, and with glue they lubricate their hair;
The sun it cools a person through, the rain keeps people dry;
And if they want to do a thing, they never have to try.
The rabbits "cock-a-doodle" and the kittens say "he-haw!"
The turkey buzzards whistle loud on that far distant shore.
The tom-cats sing in harmony, and oysters say "bow-wow!"
And puppy dogs sing in the the trees and elephants "meow,"
In that land of topsy-turvy, where everything's reversed,
And bad deeds are reward, and the best is always worst.—Little Wide-Wake.

That Tired Feeling

Season is here again, and nearly every one feels weak, languid and exhausted. The blood, laden with impurities which have been accumulating for months, moves sluggishly through the veins, the mind fails to think quickly, and the body is still slower to respond. Hood's Sarsaparilla is just what is needed. It is, in a [illegible]

THE PROPER THING.

Very handsome long wraps are of black faille.

Black grenadines are revived for summer dresses.

Swiss belts of jet beads are worn with black lace or net dresses.

Very large flower brocades will be used for rich evening dresses.

The directoire redingote is the feature of many stylish morning toilets.

Extremely short wraps of lace and ribbon made in pointed shapes are worn.

Byzantines and smooth lined bareges are among the rivals of old-time fabrics.

Silk will take quite a prominent place in dressy, out-door attire the coming season.

A novelty for traveling cloaks is the monk's gown of brown carmelite wool enveloping the wearer from head to foot.

A new bit of picturesque neck dressing is a ruff of large pleats of very rich lace, or lace corresponding with the gown, which is tied together in front with two narrow ribbons of silk of velvet.

The figured linen, batiste and cambric shirt waists worn last year, and these box-pleated and made of plain linen or cambric, finished with brier-stitching at all the edges, will be in high favor again next season.

Corsages will be long, notwithstanding the assured success of the empire bodice, which is really a long corsage, with its lenght hidden by a very wide sash. Sleeves are fulled upon the shoulders or slashed, with a pretty, bright, second sleeve showing beneath.

Traveling grown are made in very simple but stylish ways in checked cheviot, large-plaided, all-wool French cashmere, silk serges, mohair and soft, fine cloths in gray and dull blue shades. There is also a kind of shot brilliantine or mohair very much used, shading from blue to gray, gray to resede, olive to old rose, and other harmonizing variations.

PHYSICAL COURAGE.

An Attribute That Is Seldom Found in Man Without a Flaw.

It was not long ago, says a writer in the Pittsburg Dispatch, that I heard of a gallant soldier, who undoubtedly made a splendid name for himself by acts of great bravery in the late war, and who yet was nearly scared to death by the irruption of a harmless, necessary cat from its hiding place under the soldier's bed. He told the story himself, and confessed most candidly that he was frightened by the feline intruder.

A clergyman who had pluck enough to swim across a dangerous river when he was a youth, and since then has shown his brave spirit by ministering to the poor parishioners during the cholera epidemic of 1849, I think, in London, and in numberless other great ways, is periodically made a perfect coward whenever the not very formidable wasp or yellow jacket flies anywhere near him. This person is remarkably fond of fishing for trout with the artistic fly, and I have known him to put up his rod and desert a pool where the fish were rising on all sides, just greedy for surface food and asking to be caught, because a wasp or two persisted in hovering over his creel.

Allegheny County boasts a brave little woman, possessed of culture, gentleness and all the sweetest of womanly traits, who is eminently unlike the majority of her sex in that she can break glass balls with a rifle at ten yards and has been known to make things very lively for burglars with a revolver, who yet has the customary feminine dread of the smallest mouse and who will faint at the sight of a pin scratch.

One of the most unpleasant scares a friend of mine has ever experienced occurred recently during a railroad journey by night. I will let her tell in her own words:

"Just before I fell asleep while I was on the brink of dreamland, and when I was still dimly conscious that my husband was snoring melodiously, I saw the curtains of our berth, or rather felt them move. That waked me a little, and I strained my eyes to watch the pale streak of low lamplight which marked the dividing line of the curtains. They slowly parted, and I saw a hand come in and then an arm. The hand unbuttoned all the clasps of the curtains and then I saw it stretch out toward the netting where some of my husband's clothes were. The whole thing struck me as rather humorous, and proceeding in that view I reached for one of my shoes under the bed, but by chance took hold of one of my husband's. I gripped the shoe tightly, and, sitting up, dealt as savage a blow as I could at the arm in sight. The blow didn't fall quite true, but an exclamation of pain and a hurried scuffle of feet down the aisle told me that the owner of the arm didn't want any more boot. He didn't get any booty except from my hand."

"Who was the thief?" I asked.

"That is the strange part. Though I waked my husband at once and he investigated all he could, we never found out the rascal. I suspected a colored porter, but I couldn't prove it."

'DITTO.'

A Girl Who Got the Best of a Traveler.

There were three or four unoccupied seats in the car but he stood for a moment, grip in hand, near the door and then walked to a seat in which a young lady sat alone and sat down beside her with an impudence that astounded all other passengers. The girl looked up at him and around the car and evidently realized the situation, for she took pencil and tablet from her reticule and made ready for him. After about five minutes the man looked to her and observed.

"Beg pardon if I am mistaken but don't you live in Utica?"

She looked up in a furtive way and wrote on the tablet and handed him:

"I am deaf and dumb."

"Ah! By George!" he sighed as he read it; "that's too, too bad! Deuced pretty girl to have such a misfortune. Well, I'm left after all my smartness. Saw her at the window before I got on and carried out the plan to a dot. Deaf and dumb, eh? First one I ever struck!"

He nodded his head to her to signify that he understood and he would have been glad to change seats if he could have done so without loss of dignify. As the train thundered on he perused the contents of a couple of newspapers, yawned awhile and then bought and finished a novel and finally, after a ride of four mortal hours, the whistle blew and he reached for his grip with the remark:

"I'll be hanged if I ain't glad this stupid ride has come an end at last."

"Ditto!" quietly replied the girl, as she turned on him.

"You—you——!" he gasped, as he stood there looking down upon her with twelve kinds of emotion galloping over his countenance.

"Good-bye," she said and he backed out and dropped to the platform like a man retreating from a mule's hind legs.—N. Y. Sun.

THE late Dr. Dio Lewis, in speaking of Warner's Safe Cure, said, over his own signature: "If I found myself the victim of a serious kidney trouble, I would use Warner's Safe Cure." He also said "the medical profession stands dazed and helpless in the presence of more than one kidney malady."

STATISTICAL FACTS.

Reliable Information on a Variety of Interesting Topics.

A German statistician says: There are at present 3,064 languages spoken by the inhabitants of our globe, whose religious convictions are divided between 1,000 different confessions of faith. The number of males is nearly equal to that of the females. The average duration of life is 33 years. One-fourth of the populataion of the earth die before attaining the seventeenth year. Of 1,000 persons only one reaches the age of 100 years, and not more than six that of 65 years. The entire population of the globe is upward of 1,200,000,000, of whom 35,-314,000 die every year; 96,480 every day; 4,020 every hour; 67 every minute and one and a fraction every second; on the other hand the births amount to 36,792,000 every year; 100,-800 every day; 4,200 every hour; 70 every minute; 1 and a fraction every second. Married people live longer than the unmarried, the temperate and industrious longer than the gluttons and idle, and civilized nations longer than the uncivilized. Tall persons enjoy a greater longevity than small ones. Women have a more favorable chance of life before reaching their 50th year than men, but a less favorable one after that period. The proportion of married persons to single ones is as 75 is to 1,000." Persons born in the spring have a more robust constitution than those born at other seasons. Births and deaths occur more frequently at night than in the day time. It may finally be added that only one-fourth of the male inhabitants of the globe grow up to carry arms or to perform military service.

APHORISMS.

Nothing sharpens the arrow of sarcasm so keenly as the courtesy that polishes it. No reproach is like that we clothe with a smile and present with a bow.—Chesterfield.

Shun idleness; it is the rust that attaches itself to the most brilliant metals.—Voltaire.

Those who seek happiness in ostentation and dissipation are like those who prefer the light of a candle to the splendor of the sun.—Napoleon I.

A weapon is anything that can serve to wound; and sentiments are perhaps the most cruel weapons man can employ to wound his fellow man. —Balzac.

It is never the opinions of others that displease us, but the pertinacity they display in obtruding them upon us.—Foubert.

He who thinks himself good for everything is often good for nothing. —Picard.

The Eiffel Tower.

The great Eiffel tower, which is destined to be one of the chief attractions of the Paris exposition is constructed entirely of iron and steel. Its height is something over 300 meters, or in the neighborhood of 1,000 feet. Other structures in the near vicinity, which would be considered high in an isolated location, are dwarfed into mere pigmies in comparison. It is only at some distance from the base of the tower that its dimensions can be realized, and even then the eye has difficulty in taking in the immensity of its proportions. A building of ordinary size could easily be placed under each of the gigantic archways which form the first stage of the ascent.

That Offer of $5,000.

Our readers will doubtless call to mind the offer so widely advertised for the past ten years by H. H. Warner & Co., the proprietors of Warner's Safe Cure and Warner's Log Cabin Remedies, that they will pay $5,000 to any person who would prove to an impartial referee that they ever published a testimonial that was not genuine so far as they knew.

This offer had the ring of honesty about it, and as the matter has an especial interest just now we give a copy of the offer as it appears in the Messrs. H. H. Warner & Co's pamphlet:

☞AN OFFER OF $5,000.☜

Every Testimonial published by us is Bona Fide, and, so far as we know, is absolutely true. To any one who will prove the contrary to an impartial referee we will give $5,000.

H. H. WARNER & CO.
Rochester, N. Y., January 2, 1888.

We ask the reader's careful attention to the following testimonials, as bearing on the offer, and their unbiased opinion of the same with reference to the $5,000.

IOWA CITY, Ia., June 30, 1888.—Some time since my daughter had a severe attack of Rheumatism. She was persuaded to take one bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, and one of Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure, and has entirely recovered. We think it wonderful as twice before she had been confined to her bed for months with it.—MRS. SYLVANUS JOHNSON.

CAPE VERDE, Arizonia, Oct. 27, 1888. —For nearly a year I suffered from Gravel, and was under the treatment of a doctor. I took a great deal of medicine, but it all seemed to fail. I then began with Warner's Safe Cure, and after using one bottle of it began to get better; got another bottle, and took half of it. The gravel stone left me, and I began to mend. I am now feeling as well as I ever did in my life.—MRS. DOLLY MASON.

231 Myrtle Ave., BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 1888.—In 1886 I was attacked with kidney disease, and suffered for twenty years, applying often for advice to medical men of high standing, without any apparent relief. In 1886 I was advised to try Warner's Safe Cure, and after having used fifteen bottles of it I completely cured, and am happy to state that I have never felt the disease since in any form.—P. B. MCMULLEN.

NEWARK, June 20, 1888.—Last winter I was attacked with severe kidney difficulty, which incapacitated me for work, severe pains in the small of the back, attended with almost constant aching on the slightiest exertion. I suffered much pain, the passage of water was a severe trial, accompanied with much scalding and redness of the urine. I felt I was suffering from premonitory symptoms of Bright's Disease. I procured a bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, and after taking the first bottle I felt so much improved that I continued to take it to the extent of four bottles. I am now a new man, able to do a good hard day's work, with no reoccurrence of any trouble of the kidneys.—MANDEVILLE W. PLASS.

There is no getting away from such testimony as the above. The offer is genuine. In fact Messrs. H. H. Warner & Co. have always requested that doubters should write direct to persons giving testimonials, (enclosing stamp) and who are of necessity, in the great majority of cases, totally unaquainted with the firm.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no medicine. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George E. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

THE enterprising Elmira Tidings now in its eighth year has moved to Buffalo and hereafter will be known as the Buffalo Illustrated Saturday Tidings. It has moved to a great business and news centre and we wish it increasing success.

PRESIDENT HARRISON has appointed D. S. Alexander, of Buffalo, U. S. District Attorney in place of Daniel Lockwood. This appointment was made against the advice and recommendation of both New York senators, and all Western New York politicians, the President acting on a maxim recently expressed by him, viz: "You expect me to look out for your friends. Do not be provoked if now and then I look out for my own."

THE recent censures from the pulpit by such men such men as Bishop Potter of New York, Bishop Huntington of Syracuse and Rev. Dr. Millard of Rochester on political appointments to office by President Harrison are attracting wide attention. It is evident that the people desire as office holders more than the mere politician and if persons thus appointed have no other recommendation than familiarity in manipulating caucuses and conventions it is a serious question in the present temper of the people whether any party is strengthening itself and establishing its tenure of power by such appontments. The question to be considered is not entirely nor should it be the alleged faithful party services of the applicant for office as much as the character and fitness of the person and his acceptability to the people in general. No person has a right to ask or seek appointment to office whom a majority of his own party, to say nothing of the people at large, would repudiate at the polls if the office were an elective one. Unless the Republican party takes warning it may find itself hurled from power at the next National election.

DR. T. HEMAN BREHMER, an eminent German authority, says: "Consumption is always due to deficient nutrition of the lungs, caused by bad blood." At the Brompton Hospital for consumptives, London, Eng., a statement has been published that 52 per cent. of the patients of that institution have unsuspected kidney disorder. This explains why the proprietors of Warner's Safe Cure claim that they have received many testimonials which they have not published, because of the incredulity with which they would be received were it claimed that Warner's Safe Cure cures consumption. But the fact is that if your kidneys be cured and put in a healthy condition they expel the uric acid and poisonous waste matter, and prevent the irritation of the delicate substances of the lungs, thereby removing the cause. When the effect is removed the symptoms of kidney disease, which is called consumption disappears, and with it the irritation which caused it.

A "Put and Call."

This is a funny phrase to the uninitiated but all the brokers understand it. They use it when a person gives a certain per cent. for the option of buying or selling stock on a fixed day at a price stated on the day the option is given. It is often a serious operation to the dealer but there is a more serious "put and call" than this; when you are "put" to bed with a severe cold and your friends "call" a physician. Avoid all this by keeping in the house Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The great cure for pulmonary and blood diseases. Its action is marvelous. It cures the worst cough, whether acute, lingering, or chronic. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Short Breath, Consumption, Night-sweats and kindred affections, it surpasses all other medicines.

For a short [illegible] exercises held in the different rooms of the Fourth street school were a success.

In the Academic department, Prof. Clapp's room, there was not an elaborate but certainly a very beautiful display and arrangement of flowers, while the American flag was conspicuously present in festoons.

The exercises were very good. The reading of the law was done by Prof. Clapp, Frank Dilts followed with the appropriate recitation "Woodman Spare that Tree." Then came the recitations, "The Ivy Green" by Clara Paine and "Groves" by Daisy George.

A talk was then given by William Townsend followed by another on Oklahoma by H. Crombie Howe which was excellent.

The voting on the selection of the state tree caused no small amount of political work and engineering on the part of the scholars. After the count the following result was announced by the tellers. Maple 93; Elm 60; Oak 9.

Rev. J. C. Breaker had been invited to make an address and did so in his usual scholarly manner. It was of a high moral order and was relieved by very admirable illustrations. F. E. Bacon president of the Board was called upon and he had every appearance of being the happiest man in America because the school was making such excellent headway under Prof. Clapp and his well qualified corps of teachers. A recitation was well given by Clara Chase and Nellie Jenkins read an essay an historic trees which was so favorably received by both the school and the large number of visitors present that they voted unanimously to have it published. Here it is:

CELEBRATED TREES.

Probably no country in the world has such a multitude of famous trees as America. The student of English history will recall the tree in which Charles II. hid from his pursuers, the Royal Oak, and perhaps one or two others; but in America, there are dozens of trees whose names are household words throughout the length and breadth of the land. Perhaps the most famous of these is the Old Liberty Elm, on Boston Common, under which Washington took command of the Continental Army on the morning of July 3, 1775. We can imagine the scene under the budding branches of the old tree on that bright spring day, the crowds of people that thronged the Common, the sea of eager faces turned toward the spot where stood the stately figure of the Father of his Country, the gay apparel of the officers grouped around him, as at the end of a brief speech, he drew his sword, and formally took command of the Continental Army. Full well did Washington realize the significance of that step. It was no rash undertaking, hastily entered upon for the sake of self-aggrandizement; it had been considered long and deeply, prayed over, and finally entered upon with fear and trembling, but with a heart fully convinced that this course was a rightous one in the sight of the Supreme Judge of the world.

The great Charter Oak, at Hartford, stands a living memorial to the brave Captain Wadworth, who scrupled not to risk the lose of his life, to uphold the freedom of the colonies against the exactions of England. The story connected with it is well-known: how Andros marched into the assembly and demanded the Charter; how the Assembly, unwilling to give it up, protracted their debate until evening, when, at a preconcerted signal, the candles were blown out, and William Wadsworth, seizing the Charter from the table, hastily concealed it in a hollow oak, whence it was brought in triumph two years later, when James II. was deposed, and Andros seized and imprisoned.

The great elm at Shackamaxon, now Kensington, the northwest suburb of Philadelphia, where Penn met the Indians to make a treaty, is another historic tree. The scene that was enacted under its branches on that day must have been one that would have been inspiring to an artist. The portly form of Penn, in broad brimmed Quaker hat and long skirted coat, with the long hose and low shoes that were so conspicious a part of the male costume in those days; the tawny faces of the Indians, in their deer-skin blankets and the flaunting feathers in their flowing scalp-locks, their great copper earrings and armlets; and in the back ground, the fat, jolly Dutch merchants, standing by the presents that were to bind the treaty;—altogether must have made a striking picture.

The tree near which the unfortunate Andre was captured still stands. Near by, kind hearts have raised a monument to the man whose fate, although he was an enemy and a spy, roused the deepest feelings of pity in all minds.

The tree planted by the Cary sisters on the turnpike between College Hill and Mount Pleasant is now a stately sycamore. In its branches the birds of the air build their nests, and under its boughs the traveller rests from the scorching sun and blesses the two women who in childish sport planted the young shoot that has developed into this noble monarch of the fields; and has gained an undying fame by being linked with their names.

The weeping willow over Cotton Mather's grave, near Bunker, Hill, taken from the tree that shaded the grave of Napoleon, at Helena, attracts thousands of visitors, who perhaps pay more attention to the tree than to the mound at their feet, which holds all that is mortal of the greatest scholar of his time, whose attainments were tersely expressed in the epitaph on the monument of his grandfather, Richard Mather:

"Under this stone lies Richard Mather,
Who had a son greater than his father,
And also a grandson greater than either."

The elms of Hartford are the admiration of all strangers; while the giants on Boston Common have been made famous by the pens of the Alcotts, father and daughter.

Then there is the "spreading chestnut tree," immortalized by Longfellow in his poem of the Village Blacksmith. It was a [illegible] thought of the school children of [illegible] [illegible] stood in the poet's library, along with others of his most cherished possessions—the ink-stand of Coleridge, the pen presented him by the beautiful Helen of Maine, the plaid which was the personal garment of Thomas Carlyle, and was by him presented to Longfellow, and the waste-basket of Ireland's great lyrist, Thomas Moore.

The immense magnolia planted by Washington at Mount Vernon is viewed annually by thousands of people who come to the tomb of the great hero of America. The work of his hands live after him, and in this case, at least, "the good is not interred with his bones."

At Hamilton's home there is a circle of trees that he planted soon after the adoption of the Constitution. There are thirteen trees, one for each of the original states. Each tree was named by him, and in their growth they have kept pace with the states for which they were named, New York being the largest, and Rhode Island the smallest. This group, to Hamilton, was a constant reminder of the perils through which the country had passed, before the Union was fully established, and a continual incentive to the strongest and most patriotic efforts to preserve it unchanged.

And when the old Liberty Elm, the Charter Oak, Washington's Magnolia, and Hamilton's significant circle, shall have gone the way of all created things, may it still be the highest ambition of every American to insure the perpetuity of that Union which their fathers gladly and unhesitatingly gave the best years of their lives to establish.

IN Guy's (London) Hospital Reports, vol. 1, page 396, is found the statement: "Simple hypertrophy (enlargement) of the heart, especially of the left ventricle, is found without valvular incompetency. In this numerous class the cardiac is secondary (a symptom) to the renal affection." This explains why Warner's Safe Cure is effectual in cases of heart disease. It removes from the blood the kidney acid which causes the heart disease.

Volney Centre.

(Special Correspondence to THE TIMES.)

The children of the Volney Centre school celebrated Arbor Day with appropriate ceremonies. They procured two maple trres which they placed in a cart decorated with flowers and then formed a procession, headed by Roll Somers and Bert Satterlee, who furnished the music for the occasion, and promenaded the streets. Afterward they planted their trees one of which was named Wm. Baldwin, in honor of the School Commissioner, and the other Geo. Washington.

The body was badly decomposed but the clothing corresponded in every particular. Dr. I. C. Curtis of this village who had fixed the teeth of Bassett went to Oswego Saturday to ascertain whether it was his body or not. He was thoroughly convinced that it was. The body was taken to Hannibal for burial.

[illegible] A. Mathews, the [illegible] prison missionary, of Onarga, Ill., visited the jail at Wenona, Ill., found the man doing nothing and without reading matter. This caused him to think how many good papers and magazines all over our land are thrown away, that might be used as a means of reform, besides dispelling the gloom of the convict's cell. He receives no salary and has no income, but is supported by free will offerings of those interested in prison work, and never makes a debt until he knows where the cash is to come from. Forty prisons in twenty different states, also many county jails, city prisons, almshouses, etc, receive his attention. Books, magazines, religious, literary, scientific and agricultural papers, also old school books, scrap books, bibles and testaments are collected and distributed to the various prisons, so as to cheer and instruct the inmates.

Dear reader, gather up such reading matter and send to Onarga, so it will be said of you, in that day. "I was sick and ye visited me." You can send small packages by mail, prepaid, or if you can get up a barrel or box of such readings and will notify him before shipping, he will send a written order, when the railroads will carry it free to him. He especially requests that nothing be sent him except prepaid packages, without first obtaining the necessary order from him for free transportation. He has no money to pay freight, and the railroads will not carry free unless application is made by him.

During the year he has received by freight 105 boxes containing 13,126 pounds; 61 barrels containing 6,249 pounds; 40 sacks containing 2,282 pounds; 9 packages containing 214 pounds.

By express 111 packages containing 2,208 pounds; 95 parcels containing 1,191 pounds; 1,366 packages containing 1,448 pounds.

His labors include 25,000 miles of travel and sermons to thousands of coviets. There is a Prison Band and Mission connected with his work. The fee for membership in the Band is one dollar annually, and the members get the yearly report of his work. Ten dollars at one time, constitute, a life membership in the Band. These bands are of great value to him in the prosecution of his work.

Washington, May 2.

Yesterday morning brought President Harrison back to the White House, tired and worn and paler than ever, from the tedious ceremonies at New York. He did not appear in his office until later in the day and the office seekers and tourists who are unusually numerous, being on their way home from the Washington centennial, were unable to see him. It is expected that to-morrow a number of minor changes in the departments will be made and a sort of reign of terror be inaugurated. The rumor may not, however, have any better basis of fact than when first started a month ago.

Apart from church services in the morning there were no ceremonies here celebrating the centennial of Washington's inauguration. Department business was, of course absolutely suspended and a mad desire to go out in the country seemed to take possession of the people, a freak that left the city streets deserted. The races at Ivy City divided the palm of popularity with two big excursions to Mt. Vernon, to which hundreds of people made their first pilgrimage. The sward at Mt. Vernon was as beautiful as need be, the trees all in leaf and most of the flowers in bloom.

The White House was deserted and even the noise of the type-writer was no longer heard in the land. The footfall of a solitary watchman vibrated lonely through the deserted corridors, and not even an Easter bridal party had the hardihood to enter the portals. Secretary Blaine was the only head of department in the city. He sat in his hotel reading, receiving his friends and telling every inquirer in strong English that the newspaper who had said that he had suffered a partial stroke of paralysis were willful and malignant liars.

The death of Chairman Barnum raises immediate conjecture as to his possible successor. Among the older Democrats their curiosity gives way to genuine sorrow for his death. To that element in the party Mr. Barnum was almost a political demigod and no hope of finding so good a man for his successor is entertained. Senator Pugh and Ex-Attorney General Garland say that Senator Gorman of Maryland will be selected. The only objection to Senator Gorman is that he is not a man of first class ability. Senator Gorman made his reputation originally by securing places for his constituents in the Washington navy yard and the government printing office and latterly by his zealous adherence to the plan of campaign which filled northern protection states with southern free trade speakers. The disastrous results to the Democrat party all the world knows, and the folly of sending such men as Mr. Mills of Texas to speak in northern cities shall never be repeated. It is possible that Senator Gorman's hopes will be dashed to the ground and a wholesale and radical reorganization of the National Committee be affected. In such an event, there will be enough quarreling in the party to give a zest to the next year.

The local papers are ringing the praises of a Dutch detective on the city force name Raff. A week ago the body of a colored girl was found several miles from the city, bearing evidences of violence. A dozen detectives, amateurs and professional, were at once on the trail. The inimitable Raff found a colored man who had washed a wagon in the creek near by on the day the murder was probably committed. He was arrested and the proud detective assured the world that he had solved the mystery. A day later an enterprising reporter succeeds in securing a picture of the body. It is printed in the Evening Star. The next morning a citizen reports to the police that the picture resembles one Eliza Foster, the mistress of a mulatto named Thomas, who had frequently quarreled with her of late. The citizen has also discovered that the Foster woman disappeared about the time the murder was committed and was heard quarreling with Thomas on the street the night before. The detectives go to Thomas' house and find him serenely chewing hog and hominy. They thrust the photograph under his nose. His hands drop to his side; the half-chewed food falls from his open mouth; the face is contorted; he is in a palsy of fear. In a day he breaks down and confesses, and the man who was wrongfully accused is released. Still the detectives receive all the credit of course the newspaper that had the sense to secure the picture and the citizen who reported his suspicion are only humble instruments through which the astute detective worked.

The readers of THE TIMES will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

A man in Windsor wanted to learn just what profession he would have his son enter, and so he put him in a room with a bible, an apple and a dollar bill. If he found him when he returned reading the bible he would make a clergyman of him; if eating the apple a farmer; if interested in the dollar bill, a banker. When he did return, however, he found the boy sitting on the bible with the dollar bill in his pocket, and the apple almost devoured. He will make a politician of him.—Ex.

The centennial inauguration of George Washington as President of the United States was observed here on April 30th. The bells in the place rang, and the typewriter factory and cheese factory blew their whistles. In the afternoon the school under the lead of the teachers, with martial music by the pupils of the school, marched from the school building to the town hall and had instructive and interesting exercises which included singing, recitations and reading the story of the inauguration of the first President of the United States.

Our school observed Arbor day, as suggested by the Supt. of Public Instruction. Prof. Moore read the law in regard to the matter. Rev. A. P. Pheeny conducted the religious exercises on the occasion. Twenty-eight beautiful trees were planted on the school grounds. One tree was dedicated to the memory of the late Prof. A. W. Bugbee, the first principal of our union school. W. A. Davy and John Harter two of our former students who died the past year had a memorial tree planted and dedicated to their memony. There was a tree planted and dedicated to each of our present teachers, also one tree to each of the members of the Board of Education and one to ex-School Commissioner Ludington, formerly a member of the Board of Education. One tree was planted to the memory of George Washington, called the Washington tree. During the planting of the trees there were recitations, singing, and speeches by the school. Afterwards several addresses were delivered by residents and patrons in the school district. Those present pronounced it a very enjoyable time and this first Arbor day, will be the precursor we believe of many pleasant Arbor days hereafter. The hickory tree was voted the state tree.

The Japan works in our typewriter factory is completed and in the future the factory will do its own Japaning.

Farmers are busy at their spring's work. Several acres of oats are sown.

Let it be remembered that there is a fine of $2 for driving through the public park. We understand that several have driven through recently. This is done through ignorance or in open violation of the rule forbidding it. Another exceedingly distasteful procedure which is going on this afternoon is the whipping of carpets on 'the beautiful plot. This is a disgrace and should be stopped at once.

Carner's Comedy Co.

The above named company with J. W. Carner at their head will be at the opera house, every evening next week. He is supported by Miss Josie Crocker and what is reported as a good company. The Troy Times, a paper that always means what it says and says what it means gives the company the following:

"Carner is such a favorite that he always draws here if it rains ramrods. He never fails to please old and young, man and woman, and without effort. That qualification indeed tells the whole story, the truth to nature, never straining after effect, makes it so life-like that everyone thinks it so easy, but really it is the height of art. Carner's "Rip" is equal every whit to Jefferson's in humor and pathos, and in picturesque effects. His "Solon Shingle" is as good as Owens'. The instant Carner steps before the footlights, the master is seen and the attention grows breathless. Uncle Reuben is a type of the character in which Carner excels, an old fashioned eccentric, shrewd old chap, who atones for all the deficiencies of others, because he fills the score himself."

IN MEMORIAM.

MISS KATE MAHAR.

Death spares none, visits all and frequently selects his victims in the ranks of the young whose ardent wish is for a long, happy life. On Wednesday, April 24th the home of Mrs. B. Mahar of Oswego Falls, was darkened and saddened by the death of her daughter, aged 25 years. The comfort and consolation of a widowed mother, the faithful friend, industrious and conscientious employe, the esteemed companion, affable and unostentatious, the exemplary Christian young lady has been called to a brighter home.

An illness of several months was borne with patience and humble resignation to God's will and when the parting hour arrived, she was found ready and watching, leaving on earth no enemies, at peace with her Divine Redeemer she expired praying for the sorrowing ones she was obliged to leave in this vale of tears.

She is gone but not forgotten. The funeral occurred on Saturday, April 27th, at 10 a. m., at the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The services were conducted by Father Kearney, assisted by Father Earley. Words of sympathy and encouragement were spoken by the pastor and many eyes were dimmed with tears as the funeral cortege left the church. A large congregation accompanied the remains to the cemetery. Miss Mahar was for several years a member of the church choir and her companions drafted the following suitable resolutions:

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It is with heartfelt sorrow that the members of the choir hear of the death of their esteemed and respected companion and helpmate Miss Kate Mahar, therefore be it

Resolved, That while bowing submissively to the holy will of God we sincerely mourn her loss and ask the Almighty to console the afflicted mother and family.

Resolved, That we extend to her relatives our heartfelt sympathy.

Resolved, That as a token of respect the organ and the chair she occupied in church be draped in mourning for 30 days and a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family and published in THE FULTON TIMES.

A good coat of paint will preserve the buildings, add to the beauty and attractiveness of the premises, and transform old run down farm houses into neat and tasty homes.

To know how to meet insect enemies a knowledge of their history is necessary, says Prof. G. D. Hulst. Insects ordinarily live through four stages—the egg, grub or catepillar, pupa or chrysalis, and the perfect insect, as the beetle, bug or butterfly. Some can be reached in one, some in another of these stages and if not destroyed in the stage when we can reach them, we will have to endure their distructiveness as best we may.

When the weather is warm enough fodder corn is sown almost to the exclusion of everything else as a soiling crop.

Some people seem to think if cows get water once a day it is all they need; but that is not enough, unless they are living on succulent food, such as roots or ensilage. Cattle are their own best judges of their need of water, and they do best when they have their option about using it. When they drink but once a day they over glad with it, to their injury.

Harrows for Corn and Potato Fields.

Many farmers have of late years claimed that a good harrowing, just after the plants pushed through the ground, has saved one cultivating and one hoeing, besides the advantage obtained from working the soil about the plants at a time which no other implement could have been used. A number of well-known farmers tell in a recent issue of Rural New Yorker what they think of this practice. The diversity of opinion expressed indicates plainly that a man must use his brains if he wants to succeed with a machine. In the words of L. W. Curtis: "A harrow or a weeder run over a piece of corn or potatoes on a hot, dry, sunny day at the proper time, will kill all the weeds; but if used on a wet day or after the weeds are up it is worse than useless."

Fred Grundy, Christian County, Ill., says: "Some farmers harrow corn land immediately after ploughing, plant, then roll, and harrow over once or twice more. This leaves the land in fine condition for the cultivator; but if a heavy, beating rain follow soon after, the soil will pack almost as solid as a road, and it must be stirred again by some means before it bakes or there will be tribulation."

D. D. Cook, Genesse County, N. Y., says: "Harrowing potatoes is not practised by any of the large growers of this locality. For first cultivation nearly all have adopted the method of covering the entire surface of the row, the young plants included, soon after their appearance, the soil for the purpose being moved between the rows."

J. B. Stribling, Anderson County, S. C., says: "If the value of the smoothing harrow were perfectly understood, and if it were more used by the Southern farmers, it would save millions by clearing and cultivating the young crops at the busiest season of the year. In such times a good team and harrow used at the proper time would do more work in one day than six ploughs and ten horses could do in the same time."

FREDERICK T. ROBERTS, M. D., Physician to and Professor of Clinical Medicine at University College Hospital, London, Eng., says, "Bright's Disease has no symptoms of its own, and may long exist without the knowledge of the patient or practitioner, as no pain will be felt in the kidneys or that vicinity." This accounts for many people dying with Bright's Disease, or advanced kidney malady. The disease is not suspected until it reaches a fatal period. If Warner's Safe Cure is used at the proper time, the fatality from that disease would be greatly decreased. Dr. Thompson also says: "More adults are carried off in this country by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption."

Butter-Working Rules.

In the following paragraph are condensed some rules for making butter, published by the Royal Agricultural Society, England, which every butter maker will do well to heed:

1. Rinse all dairy utensils in cold water. 2. Scald with hot water and rinse again with cold. 3. Always use a thermometer. 4. Churn and cream to be at a temperature of 56 degrees to 58 degrees in Summer and 60 degrees in Winter. 5. Ventilate churn sufficiently. 6. Churn at forty to forty-five revolutions per minute. 7. Stop churning immediately the butter comes. The butter should be like grains of mustard seed. 8. Draw off buttermilk and wash the churn till the water is clear and free from buttermilk. 9. Make a strong brine and pour into churn through a hair sieve. 10. Remove butter and work on a butter-worker. Never use the hands.

"A Word to the Wise is Sufficient."

Catarrh is not simply an inconvenience, unpleasant to the sufferer and disgusting to others—it is an advanced outpost of approaching disease of worse type. Do not neglect its warning; it brings deadly evils in its train. Before it is too late, use Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It reaches the seat of the ailment and is the only thing that will. You may dose yourself with quack medicines 'till it is to late—'til the streamlet becomes a resistless torrent. It is the matured invention of a scientific physician. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

"To prevent mistakes."

"How?"

"Why, to prevent a man from getting on the Lansing train when he has a ticket for Saginaw."

"Um, but that's a good idea!" exclaimed the inquirer, after a moment's thought. "I wonder if they couldn't fix something to prevent a man from buying a cow when he is after a hoss?"—Detroit Free Press.

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

RHEUMATISM

For More than Twenty-five Years.—A Complete Recovery.—The Means Used.

I had Inflammatory Rheumatism. For nearly a year I had to be fed and turned in bed. I could find no relief. What Was It?

BY SYDNEY DAYRE.

Guess what he had in his pocket.
Marbles and tops and sundry toys
Such as always belong to boys,
A bitter apple, a leather ball?—
Not at all

What did he have in his pocket?
A bubble pipe and a rusty screw,
A brass watch key broke in two,
A fish-hook in a tangle of string?—
No such thing.

What did he have in his pocket?
Gingerbread crumbs, a whistle he made,
Buttons, a knife with a broken blade,
A nail or two and a rubber gun?—
Neither one.

What did he have in his pocket?
Before he knew it slyly crept
Under the treasure carefully kept,
And away they all of them quickly stole.—
Twas a hole.

THE PROPER THING.

The Hading veil is said to be moribund.

The kid glove with lisle thread fronts is an institution for summer wear.

Ladies dressing in deep mourning have toque bonnets entirely of English crape.

Black watered silk and the ribbon of all widths bid fair to grow in popularity.

Ladies with stout figures take comfort in the princesse gowns, with long, straight back and side breadths.

Flower bonnets, flower toques and round hats with flower crowns are made for very dressy occasions.

Many new light cashmeres are made up in the genuine directoire style that has been in favor all winter.

Remnants of delicately colored silks and mulls can be converted into adjustable vests and worn with any gown.

The newest fabric for little girls' wear is plaided mohair, light in texture and artistic in color combinations.

The large, round, black straw hat with low crown and lace-like brim turned up behind is the favorite with young women.

The new jerseys are made in many different ways, resembling in cut and style the most fashionable bodices of directory, empire and Josephine gowns.

Black and yellow is a favorite combination, black straw hats taking yellow ribbons and flowers, and yellow straws taking black ribbons and black feathers.

The open, lace-like straws of spring and summer bonnets are of such light texture that they are mounted on skeleton wire frames to keep them in shape.

PARALLEL LINES.

Every student knows that in close reasoning parallel lines of thought are laid down and deductions educed.

It is not our purpose at this time to enter into a learned discussion, and we have drawn the above visible lines simply to bring them prominently before your eye and to ask what they represent to you.

A railroad man to whom we showed them said, "To me those four lines represent a double-track railway."

A doctor replied to the same interrogatory, "The lines are to me the large arteries and veins lying alongside each other in the human body."

As will be observed the same lines to either gentleman suggested different lines of thought, as both looked at them through eyes accustomed to see only that which for the most part occupied their attention. To the writer both answers put an old truth in a fresh and original light.

As every intelligent man or woman knows, the blood of every living person flows with almost railroad speed through the arteries, forced by that wonderful engine, the heart. From the arteries it is side-tracked through the capillaries and veins, and every drop of blood goes through the kidneys for purification no less than 2500 times every twenty-four hours. If the kidneys be diseased the impurities of the blood containing the wornout tissues and deleterious acids are not drawn out or excreted as nature intended, but continually pass and repass through every fiber of the system, carrying death and decay with every pulsation. Unless remedied the heart becomes weakened, the lungs trying to do double work break down, the liver becomes congested, the stomach refuses to digest food and the result is a general break down.

Why?

Because the kidneys, the sewers of the system, are foul and stopped up, and the entire blood becomes nothing more nor less than sewage.

Now is it not criminal, nay, suicidal, to allow such a state of things to continue when a simple remedy is within your reach, known for a certainty to do as represented, which will open the closed pipes of the kidneys, allow the effete matter to escape, relieve the overworked heart, lungs and liver, cause a healthy appetite, put the bloom of health in your cheek, the dove of hope in your breast and the light of life in your eye?

You already have divined the remedy we have reference to; its praise is universal, its influence world-wide. [illegible]

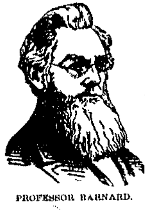
A NOTED EDUCATOR GONE.

Death of Ex-President Barnard, of Columbia College.

Education has lost no brighter light in many a year than the late President Barnard, of Columbia college; and few have maintained so prominent a position as a teacher for so long a period.

Frederick Augustus Porter Barnard, D. D., LL. D., Ph. D., was born in Sheffield, Mass., in 1809, and was consequently 80 years old at the time of his death. He was a descendant of Roger Williams. In 1828 he was graduated from Yale college, and in 1829, when but 20 years of age, was made a tutor in his alma mater. Two years later he became a teacher in the Hartford Deaf and Dumb asylum, and afterward in an institution of the same character in New York. In 1837 he was elected to a professorship of mathematics and natural philosophy in the University of Alabama.



PROFESSOR BARNARD.

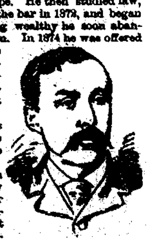
In 1854 Professor Barnard entered the ministry of the Episcopal church, and in the same year became professor of mathematics, astronomy and civil engineering in the University of Mississippi, becoming its president in 1856, and chancellor in 1858. In 1861 when the civil war came on he resigned from the university and came north. He had been engaged in writing for publication for many years, and by this time was very well known. In 1863 he was occupied in continuing astronomical work which had been begun by Lieut. Gilliss, of the United States Naval observatory at Washington; and the next year had charge of printing and lithography for the United States coast survey. It was in 1864 that he became connected with Columbia college. Having applied for the vacant chair of physics, he was elected its president. Here he continued till a year ago, when he retired, having accomplished a great work in instituting a school of mines, art, political science and philosophy in connection with the college.

President Barnard's writings began while he was a teacher of deaf mutes, when he published a number of papers on the subject of their instruction and an "Analytic Grammar, with Symbolic Illustrations," which is still in use by them. In 1853 he began to publish on scientific subjects. While in Mississippi he published a series of papers on subjects including "Letters on College Government," "Report on Collegiate Education," "Art Culture," "Improvements Practicable in American Colleges," "University Education," and the "Relation of University Education to Common Schools." While in charge of Columbia college he continued his literary work, editing a cyclopædia and contributing many valuable articles himself. He was very versatile, writing on "The Germ Theory of Disease" and taking an active part in the American Microscopical society, of New York.

The broader scope of education in American colleges today is largely due to President Barnard. He constantly advocated adding to the scientific departments and a substitution of the practical for the obsolete, and, as will be noticed from the subjects of his essays mentioned above, was constantly suggesting changes. When he began to teach he found the American college student principally engaged in studying the habits of the Greeks and Romans—nations that had passed away centuries before. When he left Columbia college he had long seen in operation a school of mines, doing good work in teaching the American boy how to dig in the earth for metals, and leaving the more impractical subjects for those who still preferred to walk in the old rut.

Minister to Brazil.

Robert Adams, Jr., appointed by President Harrison United States minister to Brazil, was born in Philadelphia in 1849. He was graduated at the University of Pennsylvania in 1869, after which he spent a year traveling in Europe. He then studied law, being admitted to the bar in 1872, and began practice; but being wealthy he soon abandoned the profession. In 1874 he was offered the charge of the executive department of the geological survey by Professor Hayden, but declined.



ROBERT ADAMS, JR.

In 1882 he was nominated for the state senate on the Republican ticket and was elected. In 1886 he withdrew in favor of another candidate. In addition to an interest in politics Mr. Adams has been prominent in militia circles, being a member of the City troop and major of the First brigade. He is also lieutenant colonel and aid-de-camp to the governor of Pennsylvania. He is a bachelor and spends considerable time at the Philadelphia club.

Money Under the Mast.

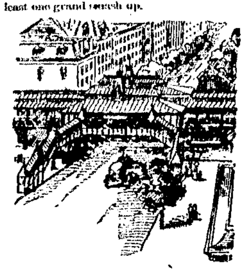
That masts of vessels are set on pieces of gold or silver sounds absurd and Ananias-like. One day, however, while attending a launch at an East Boston shipyard, said a Massachusetts man, I stopped for a moment to watch workmen taking the stumps out of a vessel that had been dismasted. Instantly that the mainmast was out they were down on their knees grubbing about the hole where the mast had stood. The foreman was [illegible]

RAILROADS IN THE AIR.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE ELEVATED SYSTEM OF NEW YORK.

It Is for a Fact One of the Modern Wonders of the World—How It Was Built and How It Is Run—The Dispute Over the "Battery Loop."

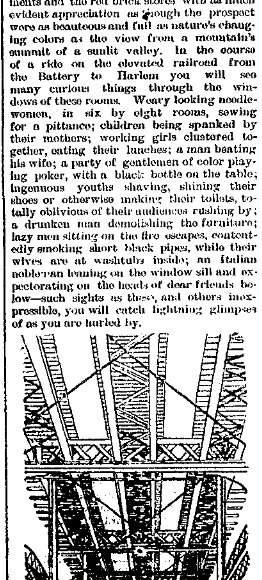
To travelers who visit New York city for the first time—and there were many such during the centennial week—nothing is the source of so much astonishment as the elevated railroads. When a train goes rushing by over their heads they start, look up with dazed expressions, and feel inclined to run. They find it difficult to become used to the perpetual roar, the smoke of the locomotives, the creaking of the cars that sets their teeth on edge and makes their nerves throb. If they are crossing a street beneath the elevated structure when a train is passing they make a dive for the sidewalk, as though expecting the whole mass of iron and wood to tumble down upon their heads and drive them into the bowels of the earth, like a pile. Some of them seem to feel a little hurt because they are not edified by the sight of at least one grand smash up.



AN ELEVATED STATION.

It takes from six months to a year to become accustomed to the L roads. A man who takes an office in a building by which there is an elevated road will for a time be constantly irritated by the rapid succession of dinning trains, but after a while it becomes such an old story that he notices it no more than the scratching of his pen. It is the same with the people who live in rooms fronting the L roads.

On some of the lines, especially the one on Sixth avenue, the trains pass so close to the windows of these rooms, that, standing upon the platform of one of the cars, you can almost clutch the window curtains with your hand. Yet the occupants of these rooms are not in the least disturbed. Indeed, they complacently lean out of the windows and gaze at the network of iron, the cobblestone pavements and the red brick stores with as much evident appreciation as though the prospect were as beauteous and full as nature's changing colors as the view from a mountain's summit of a sunlit valley. In the course of a ride on the elevated railroad from the Battery to Harlem you will see many curious things through the windows of these rooms. Weary looking needlewomen, in six by eight rooms, sewing for a pittance; children being spanked by their mothers; working girls clustered together, eating their lunches; a man beating his wife; a party of gentlemen of color playing poker, with a black bottle on the table; ingenuous youths shaving, shining their shoes or otherwise making their toilets, totally oblivious of their audiences rushing by; a drunken man demolishing the furniture; lazy men sitting on the fire escapes, contentedly smoking short black pipes, while their wives are at washtubs inside; an Italian nobleman leaning on the window sill and expectorating on the heads of dear friends below—such sights as these, and others inexpressible, you will catch lightning glimpses of as you are hurled by.



IN UPPER NEW YORK.

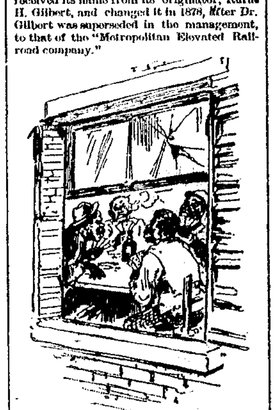
The elevated railroads of New York city were constructed in the face of the most determined opposition. Property owners united and made a fierce fight against the project, and almost defeated it. For many years before the roads were built the subject of rapid transit had occupied a large place in the popular mind. Owing to the narrowness of the island on which the city of New York is built most of those residing or employed in it are subjected to the inconvenience of living at considerable distances from their places of work or business. Before the elevated roads were built the people were obliged to depend entirely upon the comparatively slow street cars, and it took over an hour of a busy man's time to ride from One Hundredth street to the city hall.

The street car facilities, although on a vast scale, were inadequate to meet the great demand made upon them, especially in the morning and evening. In order to do away with this manifestly disagreeable condition of things, the public recognized that some entirely new scheme of rapid transit was necessary, and was prepared to ratify almost any practicable idea that would deliver them from so annoying an inconvenience. The rapid transit agitation was at its height during the latter part of the '60s. Innumerable inventors set to work to devise means to shorten the time of transit between the upper and lower end of the island.

Some of the plans proposed were almost ludicrous in their impracticability, others involved an expense that was startling even to the Crœsuses who were interested in rapid transit. A tubular tunnel, eight feet in diameter, through which cylindrical cars nearly of the same diameter should be driven by pneumatic propulsion, was demonstrated to be quite practicable, working with complete success in a section which the inventor had constructed under Broadway. The most original of the projects was that of an endless movable platform, traveling with a constant speed of ten miles an hour up one side of the street and down the other, crossing the street by curves at the terminal, being kept in [illegible] traveling sidewalk by the aid of wheeled carriages. Passengers, by adding their own walking speed to that of the moving floor, could advance at the rate of fifteen miles an hour. This ingenious scheme was proposed by Alfred Speer, of New Jersey. Many other plans, of various merits and demerits, were suggested when the investigation of the subject was most widespread. The public was altogether averse to the scheme of underground railways, such as they have in London—the Cimmerian gloom and nauseating odors of which are peculiarly distasteful. Of all the plans proposed, that of the elevated railroad, practically as it is today, was the most practicable and at the same time the most popular.

The first elevated railroad, so called, was constructed in 1866. A track was laid through Greenwich street and Ninth avenue, between Battery place and the Hudson River railroad depot, in Thirtieth street, on a framework supported by a single row of iron pillars, over which cars were to be drawn by an endless chain worked by stationary engines. The fate of this enterprise augured ill for the viaduct system. The property was sold under foreclosure in 1871. Dr. Rufus H. Gilbert, whose attention had been directed to the problem of rapid transit by his experience as a physician of the excessive mortality in overcrowded tenement houses, had long occupied himself with this question.

After devising seven different plans he obtained, in 1872, a charter for an overhead tubular pneumatic railway. The "New York Elevated Railroad company," the successor to the "West Side Elevated Railroad company," was organized in 1872. The Gilbert Elevated Railroad company was incorporated by an act of the legislature in 1872. It received its name from its originator, Rufus H. Gilbert, and changed it in 1878, after Dr. Gilbert was superseded in the management, to that of the "Metropolitan Elevated Railroad company."

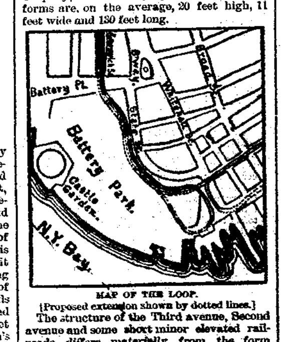


SEEN FROM AN "L" TRAIN WINDOW.

There are now about thirty-six miles of elevated railroads in New York city, and 525,000 persons are carried on these roads every day. The fare is 5 cents, and the profits of the Manhattan Elevated Railroad company (under which name all of the companies have been united) are enormous. The roads are under the control of Jay Gould.

The Metropolitan railroad, as it was called when the company was first organized, is a most ponderous and elaborate structure. The tracks are supported by two columns and overhang the middle of the thoroughfare. The track below Canal street rests upon lattice girders, which connect the pillars longitudinally and transversely; above, it rests upon floor beams supported by the side trusses, which in turn are supported by the columns. The structure is warranted to bear a running load of 1,500 pounds to the lineal foot. A solid foundation was secured for each pillar, in some instances by digging and blasting to a depth of twenty-five feet; sometimes it was requisite to drive down piles to obtain a solid bed for the foundation stones.

The engines of the elevated railroads are capable of a speed of forty miles an hour. The standard pattern weighs about nineteen tons, and has a load upon the driving wheels of about 6,000 to 6,500 pounds. They are furnished with spark arresters and a smoke consuming apparatus. The passenger cars are 37 feet 10 inches long and 8 feet 9 inches wide, and have seats for forty-eight persons each, although, as a rule, there are as many more persons hanging by the straps. The cars are well lighted, and are fitted up with bright colored woods and painted decorations. The benches, with their backs to the sides of the car, except a few transverse seats in the center, are composed of single seats. The stations are light, ornamental structures (the New Yorkers call them "pagodas"), consisting of small houses whose walls are of corrugated iron with roofs of tin, on platforms, which, with their supports and the stairways by which they are approached from the street, have a frame of wrought iron. They were made after an original modern Gothic design by J. F. Cropsley, the landscape painter. The platforms are, on the average, 20 feet high, 11 feet wide and 130 feet long.



MAP OF THE LOOP.

The structure of the Third avenue, Second avenue and some short minor elevated railroads differs materially from the form adopted on the Sixth and Ninth avenue lines, the chief points of variance being that the viaduct is composed of a trestle work supported by single rows of columns instead of by double rows with cross girders. The roadway passes over the posts, causing them to bear the whole strain directly. They are, however, braced together by cross girders in places where they are not separated by the entire width of the street, or where the streets are narrow, thus obtaining in a measure the additional stability afforded by the transverse trusses of the Sixth avenue structure.

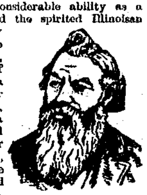
There is a great deal of talk in New York just now—though it was lulled during the centennial—over an extension which the managers of the elevated roads are endeavoring to add to their Sixth and Ninth avenue lines, but as the proposed extension would take up another portion of Battery park, a part of which the elevated roads have already usurped, and as on this account public opinion seems to be massed against the scheme, it can scarcely be predicted at this time what the outcome will be. The four tracks of the Sixth avenue and Ninth avenue lines meet at Battery park, but from that point the trains of both lines are obliged to proceed to the terminus at South ferry upon but one track. This necessitates a vast deal of shifting and delay, and besides is dangerous. [illegible] the two roads meet, from which point to the terminus where the structure forming the loop is to be built there will be a two track line constructed, as shown by dotted lines in the diagram. This will do away with all shifting and delay. Some of the New York newspapers are in favor of this scheme, while others are waging a fierce fight against it, their grounds being that the new structure will interfere with the poor people's enjoyment of the park.

The elevated railroads of Brooklyn, which were built later than those of New York, are constructed somewhat more solidly than the latter, and are calculated to bear a strain of 50,000 pounds to the square inch. There are several other minor improvements in construction.

"CAPITAL MOVER" REAVIS.

Death in St. Louis of a Man Who Made a Good Deal of Talk for His Theory.

For the past dozen years or so the public has heard little of "capital mover" Reavis, whose name is in the list of the recently deceased, but for half a dozen years before that he was a standing subject of praise, criticism or sneering sarcasm; for he had succeeded in getting the whole nation interested in the scheme of removing the national capital to St. Louis—or, if that was thought impracticable, to some other western locality. So far did the scheme progress that a lively contest sprang up among western congressmen, Springfield and Indianapolis being strongly urged, but the general voice finally ran in favor of selecting "some commanding point on the Mississippi river, the government itself to have all the profits from the sale of lots." The example of Nebraska in conducting a profitable speculation on the location of her own capital was strongly urged. But the tide was not taken at the full; "Boss" Shepherd completed his great improvements at Washington, the government resumed building on a large scale, and now the capital is probably fixed for all time.

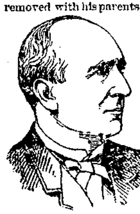


LOGAN U. REAVIS.

Logan U. Reavis was born March 26, 1831, in Mason county, Ills., was reared in poverty and obtained but a limited education, but early displayed considerable ability as a writer. He edited the spirited Illinoisan during the early campaigns of the Republican party, and in the spring of 1866 invested in a St. Louis paper called The Press, which proved a failure. He applied at Washington for an appointment, but receiving none became embittered against the place, and his opponents assert that that was the cause of his wanting the capital removed. At any rate he kept the agitation pretty active for a few years and succeeded in getting a large convention called. He also wrote a work on "St. Louis, the Future City of the World," which was widely circulated, and was very active in schemes for improving the Mississippi. He died in poverty, leaving a widow and two small children.

The New Minister to Mexico.

Thomas Ryan, of Kansas, who has been appointed minister to Mexico from the United States, has lived in Kansas since 1865. He is a native of Oxford, N. Y., having been born there Nov. 25, 1837. In his early life he removed with his parents to Bradford county, Pa. He entered the Union army in 1862, and soon attained the rank of captain of volunteers. He was wounded at the battle of the Wilderness, in consequence of which he was mustered out of the ranks in 1864. After leaving the army he took up the legal profession in Topeka, Kan., with considerable success. For eight years he held the position of county attorney and for four years was assistant United States attorney. Mr. Ryan has, since the Forty-sixth congress, been a representative in the lower house of the national legislature.



THOMAS RYAN.

Irish Insincerity.

That there is a charge of insincerity against the Irish we all know. But is there insincerity nowhere else? Is Ireland alone to be condemned for that? I quite acknowledge that it is torture to any one Irish born to say "no" if "yes" be the word required by his or her companion, but is there no amiability to be deducted from this? False amiability, no doubt, but still with something lovable about it.

They will probably tell you, if asked, that you are looking your best when every fiber of their artistic nature is shuddering at the particularly hideous bonnet or suit you are wearing. They will admire beyond everything your new trap, the bilious painting of which is annoying them beyond measure. They will heartily congratulate you on the purchase of that new mare of yours, and call it faultless with one eye upon the splint on the off foreleg. But this is all done with a view to making you at ease with yourself and your surroundings, and to throw a halo of glory over your otherwise rather shabby possessions.

As to any viler insincerities, why there are rogues in all nations, and most of them far deeper dyed than any Ireland has produced! —"The Duchess" in Philadelphia Times.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.

Philip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

[THACKERAY.

THE TIMES is twenty-two years old. It celebrates its twenty-second birthday with this issue. As it passes the mile stone and starts on another year of its existance, we look back to see if it has kept up with the steady advancement of the village in which it lives. We find that within the past few years a system of water work, having for its source springs with as wholesome and pure water as can be found, conveys water to the homes of its inhabitants. A street railway connects Oswego Falls more closely to us. Electric lights have taken the place of kerosene and gas, not only the streets being illuminated by electricity, but nearly every place of business and many dwellings. The public schools have grown, strengthened and consolidated, and now a fine addition to the main school building is in progress of erection. The village increases in size beauty and enterprise each year. Has THE TIMES kept up its end? Look at THE TIMES block, erected by its proprietor and standing out unsurpassed by any block in town for architectual beauty and design. Call and see our finely equipped office with its new presses and good looking compositors. Call and see our water motor which furnishes power to run the machinery and innumerable other things that have been added and we think after inspection that you will agree with us that we have kept up with the improvements of the village. All these improvements to our office have cost money and lots of it. What we want in return is the support of reputable citizens in the town of Volney. Every one in the village ought to be a subscriber if he or she is not, and every merchant out to be represented in the columns of THE TIMES. But the millennium has not come neither do we enjoy all these. We feel complimented, however, at the number that are subscribers and advertisers and hope to serve them and many others even more efficiently in the year to come than in the year just past.

THE May number of The Cosmopolitan, just published, has ten articles and stories all excellently illustrated, beside poems and departments. There are seventy illustrations, twelve of them being full pages.

A LAW recently passed by the State legislature and signed by the Governor makes the 25th of July instead of August the beginning of the school year. The annual meetings must now be held on the first instead of Tuesday in August by the new law.

THE drafted men's perseverance may be rewarded in the next world but it does not look as though it would be in this. Their bill was recently defeated in the Assembly and was again brought up last week for reconsideration and again came to grief. It cannot be brought up again this year.

THE trans-Atlantic record has again been lowered this time by the City of Paris of the Inman line which made the passage from the entrance to Queenstown harbor to Sandy Hook, in 5 days, 23 hours and 7 minutes. The quickest trip heretofore upon record was that of the Etruria of the Cunard line—six days, one hour and fifty-five minutes.

THE question of Syracuse being supplied with water from Skaneateles lake is to be submitted to the people of that city by a special election to be held in the first Tuesday in June. This move on the part of Governor Hill to submit it to popular vote is a good one. The citizens may or may not see fit to bond their city to the amount necessary, but they certainly need good, wholesome water in their flourishing city and cannot secure as good from any other source in our opinion.

AUSTIN FLINT, M. D., late professor of the principles of practice of Medicine and of clinical medicine in the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, says of Bright's disease: "Pain in the loins is rarely a prominent symptom, and is often wanting. This statement also applies to tenderness on pressure over kidneys." It is not safe, therefore, to argue that you have not kidney disease because you have no local symptoms of it. Your only sure plan is to use Warner's Safe Cure as soon as the most remote symptoms appear.

A local board of the American Building and Loan Association was organized in this village last Wednesday evening with the following officers: President, D. W. Gardner; Vice-President, J. L. The above from the deputy county clerk, formerly of Co. E. 24th N. Y. Infantry, carries me back to old times. The tempestuous Wm. W. Buck, Ex-Sergeant, etc., out of his vocabulary of high-toned illiteracy named me "Grapevine," on account of my beautiful form and wobbling propensities toward hen roosts. Sometimes the boys called me "Grape," because I kept at a distance from that kind of shot as often as practicable. Often they call me "Vine" because I so tenderly clung to the rear. Occasionally they gave me my full title "Grapevine," when they wanted an order on the sutler, or supposed I had ten cents. Times have changed, Billy. My gun boats now don't hang over the edges, my pants creep differently, my shirts don't seem to walk around without visible means of support. Formerly, it was good to agitate the middle of my back, and it felt good, if there were no spectators, it was fun to pick out a couple of lively blooded animals and notice them crawl up a tree and bark—times have changed, Billy.

You may remember that Kellogg and Cory and Meigs and Tucker used my forged passes when they got lonesome for city society. Did you have one? Some of the boys gobbled them when I left them out to dry; the blamed sardines would sometimes write an order on me for a pass and sign McClellan's name to it; and if I was busy on guard, they would hold my gun while I fixed it. Ask Col. Sullivan if he caught me at it; ask Capt. Jennings if I didn't get his back-handed signature slathered around quite natural; ask sweet William W. if I didn't put the music to our old sow. She got up in the morning and looked around on her nine pigs, dead—times have changed, Billy, but I sing it yet. When I was a prisoner it seemed to me if I could only be with Co. E. again I would risk another bullet and be so happy. And Meigs was so kind to me when I was marching with him into God's country after being paroled. My poor wounded arm hurt me so and I was so thin and worn out that he wanted to carry me, almost. The tears are in my eyes now as I think of it. Meigs is dead, poor fellow. He was not very good to himself, but when I pass over to the other bivouac, it will seem lonesome if I don't see Meigs, Paulding, Cory and others of my old chums hastening to clasp hands. God help us who live to be able to look into each others faces again, and so live that our Great Commander can give us a crown fitted to those whose duty has been well done. I am afraid I can't afford to reune with you, but oh, dear! it makes me sad to think so. Remember me to all my old comrades. I will write again before May 17.

Yours in F. C. L.,

EXECUTION BY ELECTRICITY.

The First Sentence Under the New Law.

Wm. Kemmler, the man who murdered his mistress, Tillie Ziegler, with a hatchet and who was convicted of murder in the first degree, was yesterday morning brought into court for sentence. Judge Childs pronounced sentenced under the new law in the following words:

"The sentenced of the court is that for the crime of murder in the first degree, whereof you stand convicted, within the week commencing on Monday the 24th day of June, one eight hundred and eighty-nine and within the walls of Auburn state prison, or within the yard or enclosure adjoining thereto you suffer the punishment of death, to be inflicted by the application of electricity, as provided by the code of criminal procedure of the state of New York, and that in the mean time you be removed to and until the infliction of such punishment you be kept in solitary confinement in said Auburn state prison."

The readers of THE TIMES will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucus surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength, by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 10, 1889.

If the selection of Messrs. Roosevelt and Thompson is as agreeable to all parties and factions as it would seem to be from the comments immediately following the announcement of the appointment of the two new civil service commissioners, these gentlemen must have been born under lucky planets. Especially is this time in the case of Mr. Roosevelt. The New York Press, representing the spoils system goes in ecstacies over his nomination. It announces that he is "no mugwump," and conveys the idea that he is a merry, rollicking brigand of a spoilsman. The New York Times on the other hand, congratulates Mr. Harrison upon the appointment from its own standpoint. It states that Mr. Roosevelt recently advocated the appointment of Postmaster Pierson or one of his trained subordinates as postmaster at New York. In fact it pronounces him an out and out civil service reformer.

All this simply means that the factions are not exactly sure what course Messrs. Roosevelt and Thompson will pursue and don't want to attack them until they do know. In six months you will not find both of the New York journals I have quoted praising Mr. Roosevelt. He cannot satisfy both; that much is sure.

If Mr. Lyman remains, the civil service Commission is now complete. In Messrs. Thompson and Roosevelt the Commission certainly has two members of unusual educational training and ability. Mr. Thompson was for several years an educator, and Mr. Roosevelt has had an extensive literary training. Both are men to whom fortune was kind at birth in giving wealth. Both have been well known leaders in their respective parties.

The appointment of Frank W. Palmer, of Chicago, as Public Printer meets with a kindly reception. The selection was of course not a matter of surprise, inasmuch as all the earlier candidates in the field pulled off the track and surrended two weeks ago. Mr. Palmer is probably by training the best fitted candidate for Public Printer that has ever been presented. He unites an extensive experience of public life with a thorough knowledge of the printing business. Beside being a good printer and pressman and a first-class editor he is even a practical book binder. He enters upon his duties under favorable circumstances. If he does not become a more popular official than his predecessor he will be a poor one indeed. Public Printer Benedict has been particularly unfortunate in this respect. Without any experience in high public office he has never been able to take advice. He may have meant well, but he has certainly succeeded only in getting himself warmly disliked. His taking off would be more regretted if he had been endowed by nature with more agreeable manners and less self-sufficiency. A strenuous effort will be made by the Civil Service Commission to retain the power in the Census Bureau. Nearly 1500 clerks will be employed in the work for two years or over and there is considerable interest felt in the distribution of that amount of pie. Personally the superintendent of the Census, Robert W. Porter, seems to be in favor of placing the Bureau under the Civil Service rules as a means of defense. Although the appointments will not be made for months, he finds himself already besieged night and day for positions.

The Woman's Press Associotion of this city has met one of its usual failures in the project of raising money to place a portrait of Mrs. Cleveland in the White House. The scheme has been formally abandoned. The opposition of Mrs. Cleveland herself is given as the main reason, but the indifference of the public is quite as potent a barrier. Somehow Americans sign such subscription lists reluctantly, and this not so much from meanness as because the business is overdone. Even in the case of Gen. Grant's tomb at New York, we have a striking instance of this.

The Woman's Temperance Union then at high tide financially, with untiring energy, secured a sufficient sum to place a portrait of Mrs. Hayes in the Executive Mansion. The managers of that enterprise did not hastily attack another such undertaking. After President Garfield died many Ohio ladies agitated the proposition of placing his widow's portrait beside that of Mrs. Hayes. The plan miscarried. The feminine public thought that the esteemed lady had received ample testimonial in the large fortune that had been raised for her.

A Secret.

of good health is found in the regular movement of the bowels and perfect action of the Liver. These organs were intended by nature to remove from the system of all impurities. If you are constipated you offer a "standing invitation" to a whole family of diseases and irregularities which will surely be "accepted," and you have guests unwelcome and determined. All these unhappy conditions may be averted by the timely use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Powerful for the effectual regulation of the bowels and Liver, establishing a healthy action of the entire wonderful organism with which we are created.

THE late Dr. Austin Flint, professor in Bellevue Hospital Medical College, Fellow of the New York Academy of Medicine, member of the state medical societies of New York, Virgia, Rhode Island, Massachusetts, etc., says, in speaking of advance kidney disease (or Bright's), "Fatal termination in many due to pericarditis (heart disease), apoplexy, difficult breathing, dropsy." The foregoing are but symptoms of diseases. That being the case there is nothing absurd in the claim made by the proprietors of Warner's Safe Cure that they prevent apoplexy and cure heart disease, etc., with Warner's Safe Cure. Why? Because it removes the cause of disease, and when the cause is removed the symptom called a disease is cured.

A Minister Runs Away with His Bride.

Rev. Charles Kimball, the popular Episcopal minister at Oriskany Falls, and Miss Fanny Putnam, a wealthy and accomplished heiress, were secretly married Saturday afternoon and the gossips of Oriskany Falls are very busy just now. Last evening's Utica Observer says Mr. Kimball is a bright young man about 30 years of age and his home is in Chicago. Saturday afternoon he hired a livery team, took his sweetheart with him, drove over the hills to Waterville, five miles away, where a college mate of Mr. Kimball is the rector of an Episcopal church, and the two were made one. The team was sent back by messenger, and news of the marriage was sent by telephone.—Palladium.

Cheese Market Reports.

[From the Utica Herald.]

AT UTICA.

UTICA, May 13.

The further improvement in price to day, was a boom to dairymen and helped to even up the prices of last year. No one knows why these figures came to be made or what was the inducement to pay them, but it is suspected that shippers were responsible, and that they wanted to see high price quotations here for their effect on cheese shipped week before last. A loss on a few small lots here would be easily offset by a good profit abroad. Shrewd salesmen let their cheese go as a great favor at 10c. and will be surprised if they get as good a price next week for their late made fodders. Yet it is within the bounds of possibility that the market may hold another week, in which case it will be the dairymen's good fortune. Following are the transactions of the day:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
13	632	9½
9	480	9⅝
38	1,897	9¾
11	567	9⅞
26	1,554	10c
97	5,130
	1,720	Com.
Total	6,850

Ruling price 9¾c. Transactions one year ago, 8,115 boxes; ruling price 9⅝c. Two years ago, 5,370 boxes, ruling price 10⅝c.

There were 52 packages creamery butter consigned, and 12 packages sold to local dealers at 20½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, May 13.

Cheese—This market was a booming one today, and an advance of three-quarters of a cent above last week's prices is shown. This is quite unusual for this time of the year, when prices usually decline. Till near the closing hour it was generally believed that 9½c would be the top price, but a little strife arose among buyers, and the figures showed at the close that there were more lots at 10c. than at any other price. This will prove quite a surprise to many salesmen who sold and went home before these transactions became know. Many appear quite encouraged over this advance and are in much better spirits over the future prospects of the cheese trade; but others think the advance is a mistake, and that the market will get a decided setback next week. The skims and part skims sold at 8¼ to 9¼c., and the full creams at 9¼ to 10⅛c.

Lots	Boxes	Price
3	188	8½
5	175	9
3	140	9¼
12	590	9½
14	550	9¾
15	851	10c
1	27	10¼
32	1,351	Com.
85	3,872
Farm dairy	364
Total	4,236

Farm Dairies—Sales of farm cheese amount to 364 boxes, about one-half of which were sent on commission. The balance sold at 8 to 10c.

AT FULTON.

We have had splendid weather for the past two weeks for dairy interests. The season is at least ten days in advance of last year. A few sales of cheese has already been reported at 9 and 9½ cents.

The first meeting of the board of trade will be held next Monday evening.

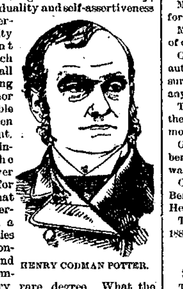
HENRY CODMAN POTTER AND HIS MUCH TALKED OF SERMON.

He is of a Family of Bishops, and He Has a Way of Speaking His Mind Whenever He Likes—The Criticised Passages.

Bishop Henry Codman Potter, the "muscular Christian," who created such a sensation by his sermon before the president, cabinet and other dignitaries on April 30, is a scion of a progressive and aggressive family which has contributed not a little to the history of New York and the United States. His father and uncle were bishops, one brother is in a fair way to be, another was a brilliant soldier in the civil war, another a prominent congressman, and still another an architect and musical composer of note. The father, Bishop Alonzo Potter, was born in the Quaker church, but became an Episcopalian, a professor in Union college at 21, a clergyman at 24 and a bishop in middle life. While at Union college he married a talented daughter of the illustrious Dr. Eliphalet Nott, and their five sons inherited in large measure the talents of both parents and both lines. The father died in the harbor of San Francisco, July 4, 1865, having just arrived from a voyage around the Horn, entered upon in the hope of improving his health.

Of the sons each has shown himself singularly positive and determined in manifesting his faith, whether in politics or religion. The oldest, Clarkson Nott Potter, was the well known Democratic congressman from New York, who took so prominent a part in the discussions about reconstruction and the disputed electoral count of 1876-77. The second son, Robert B. Potter, entered the army as major of the Fifty-first New York volunteers and made a brilliant record, rising to the rank of major general, and receiving high compliments from Gen. Grant. The third son, Edward, is the architect and musical composer; the fifth, Eliphalet Nott, is a prominent clergyman and president of Hobart college, having declined the Episcopal diocese of Nebraska, and the fourth son is the now much discussed bishop of New York city, having been consecrated to that office Oct. 20, 1883. He was born in Schenectady May 25, 1835, graduated from the Theological seminary of Virginia in 1857, and rose rapidly in the church, declining at one time to accept the bishopric of Nebraska. He is the author of "The Gates of the East"—an account of travels in Syria—and other works quite popular in his church.



HENRY CODMAN POTTER.

Bishop Potter unites many qualities not often found in the same person—great love of physical activity and great devotion to study, an intense individuality and self-assertiveness with great reverence for authority and precedent whether in church or state. With all this there is a strong element of humor and a remarkable capacity for keen incisive statement. His head would indicate that he should be a believer in phrenology, for the experts in that theory would certainly give him a fine set of qualities—"Ideality," "Constructiveness" and "Veneration" combining in a very rare degree. What the "bump" is which caused his recent utterances before the president the phrenologists must decide, but this is not the first time its presence has been manifested; for in his many addresses in 1887 and previously, calling for church action upon the relations of capital and labor, he repeatedly said:

"The growth of wealth among us has not resulted in binding men together, but in driving them apart. The rich are further from the poor, the employer from his workmen, capital from labor, now than ever before. Too many know less and less how the poor live. The manners of the poor, it is said, are more insolent and ungracious than of old to the rich, and this naturally discourages efforts to know and serve them."

Very naturally his conclusion was, and is, that the solution must be furnished by the church; and lest the conclusion should not be drawn by all who heard him he took care to administer some severe slaps at socialism, "demagogism," "leveling theories" and the "Henry George land theories." Of all these he says:

"Now, as never before, there is in the air a sentiment which teaches men to despise authority, to disown restraint, to hate and resent all social and material inequality, but which with all its noisy championship of the poor touches no one of their burdens with so much as the tips of its fingers."

The two passages in Bishop Potter's sermon of April 30 which are most severely criticised are these:

> We have exchanged the Washingtonian dignity for the Jeffersonian simplicity, which was, in truth, only another name for the Jacksonian vulgarity, and what have we got in exchange for it? In the elder states and dynasties they had the trappings of royalty and the pomp and splendor of the king's person to fill men's hearts with loyalty. Well, we have dispensed with the old titular dignities. Let us take care that we do not part with that tremendous force for which they stood! If there be not titular royalty all the more need is there for personal royalty.

Then, proceeding to a rather pointed contrast between Washington and his successors, he said:

> The conception of the national government as a huge machine, existing mainly for the purpose of rewarding partisan service—this was a conception so alien to the character and conduct of Washington and his associates that it seems grotesque even to speak of it. It would be interesting to imagine the first president of the United States confronted with some one who had ventured to approach him upon the basis of what is now commonly called "practical politics."
> Another enormous difference between this day and that of which it is the anniversary is to be seen in the enormous difference in the nature and influence of the forces that determine our national and political destiny. Then, ideas ruled the hour. Today, there are indeed ideas that rule our hour, but they must be merchantable ideas. The growth of wealth, the prevalence of luxury, the massing of large material forces which by their very existence are a standing menace to the freedom and integrity of the individual, the infinite swagger of our American speech and manners, mistaking bigness for greatness and sadly confounding gain and godliness—all this is a contrast to the austere simplicity, the unpurchasable integrity of the first days and the first men of our republic, which makes it impossible to reproduce today either the temper or the conduct of our fathers.

Photographing a Snake Fight.

Arthur Schleman, of Sanford, piloted a lady and gentleman out shooting. One of the events of the day was a snake fight, which the party witnessed, between a king snake and a moccasin. The king snake killed the moccasin in less than three minutes, and was in turn killed by the lady, who had photographed the combat with a portable instrument which she had in the buggy.—Savannah News.

Absconding Cashier Pratt.

Here is a picture of absconding Cashier Pratt of the First National bank of Onaka, Minn., whose downfall it will be remembered was caused by a woman. The bank is understood to have resumed with President Fisheour's son as cashier. No efforts have been made to recapture Pratt, and President Fisheour is reported to have said regarding him, "What do we want with Pratt! The poor fellow lost all he had and some of our money in the wheat deal, and I think he has been punished enough." No reward has been offered for his arrest.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain uncalled for in Fulton P. O. May 15, 1889. Allen Bart, H. H. Hoff, Jacob Holman, F. W. Dence & Co., Miss M. J. Baldwin. [illegible]

[illegible] Get the poison out of the blood and life and health will at once return to every part of the body. Dr. Brown's Sarsaparilla does this work quickly and surely through its direct and positive action upon the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver and skin. For all waste and corrupt elements must be cast off by means of these channels. Rheumatism, scrofula, bronchitis, gout, consumption, malaria, catarrh, hay fever, all skin affections and eruptions are diseases of the blood.

George H. Wish, of the firm of Truxton & Wish, Bangor, Me., was afflicted with a scrofulous humor which caused troublesome sores upon both his legs. Many remedies were used and several physicians consulted, without result. After taking Brown's Sarsaparilla a short time he was better, and soon the eruption disappeared and he is now all right. OBITUARY.

Lowville has the distinction of having a citizen who has witnessed two centennials. We refer to the venerable Daniel Phillips, father of James B. Phillips, who is now 102 years old, and quite hale and hearty.—Lowville Journal.

Mrs. Eunice M. Mosher of Cohoctah Michigan, died Sunday, May 12th, at the age of 87 years. She had lived in Fulton nearly all her life before moving to Michigan about eight years ago. She was the mother of F. C. and J. C. Mosher of this village.

Ira Loomis, a cousin of Dr W. H. Loomis, died in Washington Territory a short time since at the age of about 88 years. His remains were brought to Mexico and interred there yesterday.

Hon. Henry A. Foster, presumably the old member of the New York State bar died, in Rome, N. Y., Saturday at the advanced age of 89 years.

The ladies have raised a sufficient amount of money without half trying, to furnish for the Pathfinder Boat Club a flag twenty feet long. G. G. The building committee consisting of the directors of the Club have decided to accept plans of Architect Merrick of Syracuse for the club house. Their field day is the 23d, when the club and friends will go to the island and enjoy a rather informal day of what is hoped to be unalloyed pleasure.

WM. ROBERTS, M. A considerable number of dropsy. One-fifth from secondary pneumonia, pericarditis (inflamation of the heart sac), or pleurisy, exhaustion, indigestion, or the complications of apoplexy, hardening of the liver, bowel ulcers. etc." The foregoing are only a few of the common symptoms of advanced kidney disease, and this explains why Warner's Safe Cure cures so many different symptoms, called diseases, and why it has such popularity. Brunning, and mention made in it of his preaching a sermon in the Episcopal church in Sherburne, by invitation of the rector there, the question has been asked him: "What kind of a sermon a Universalist minister would preach under such circumstances." He says he will repeat the sermom next Sunday evening. Go and hear it.

Churches keep apace with the general advancement and improvement of Fulton, increasing, we hope and believe, the moral tone and spiritual welfare of the village residents. The Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Congregotionalist, Episcopal, Universalist and Free Methodist each have their regular pastors and services. In its account of the drama "Driven From Home" given for the support of the Parochial school the Jamestown, N. Y., News announces that Miss Jennie Maynard, formerly of this village, scored the hit of the evening. It says: "It remained for Miss Jennie Maynard as 'Dilley' to make the hit of the evening. With her playful, innocent, Maggie Mitchell style, wealth of affection and constancy as brought out by the drama, she soon established herself as a favorite, and was enthusiatically received. The character of Dilly presents many opportunities, none of which she lost sight of."

An Oklahoma man writes to the New York Tribune: "When it comes to laying the foundation for a quiet home in a new country I'd rather have a hole and a good Winchester rifle than all the land office papers and decisions of the courts this side of Halifax. A Small Boy's Essay on Corns.

Corns are of two kinds, vegetable and animal. Vegetable corns grow in rows, animal corns grow on toes. Gophers like corn, but people who have corns do not like to go-fer, if they can help it. Corns have kernels and some Colonels have corns. Vegetable corns grow on ears, but animal corns grow on toes, at the other end of the body. Folks as have corns sometimes send for the doctor to cure them, but if they would be sensible and buy their Boots and Shoes at the Salmon Shoe Store, First Street Fulton, they would not be raising corns. Try it. 1w2.

Mr. E. K. Jefferds has presented THE TIMES with two pictures of the great Effel tower which show to advantage the great proportions of this massive structure 985 feet high. When it is remembered that Washington monument, previously the highest in the world is 573 feet a comparison can be formed.

In the latter part of February Miss Mattie Burt disappeared. She was tracked as far as Minetto bridge and it was well established that she had either fallen into the river or committed suicide. Sunday her body was found floating in the river at Oswego. The lady was a daughter of the late Benjamin Burt of Minetto.

A stranger riding on the north approach to the lower bridge would not mistrust that it was in a weakened condition, and might think that it is an iron structure. But such is not the case. It is built upon a wooden trestle and the timbers are becoming decayed and must be replaced. It has been decided to build an iron structure, similar to the main bridge, and it will probably be done this season. It will cost more than the old bridge but it will be safer and more permanent. The cost will be from six to ten thousand dollars and according to precedent will be partly borne by the county.—Oswego Falls Observer.

Dedication of Grace Mission Chapel.

Last Sunday afternoon it was well known that the chapel would be dedicated. The result was that at the appointed time it was crowded and some went away unable to get in while a large number staid out doors till the services were over. Beautiful flowers were there in profusion. The services were directed by Rev. W. Dempster Chase. A mixed choir from the different churches rendered good service.

Rev. J. C. Breaker was the principal speaker. He said he could hardly preach a dedicatory sermon as too short a notice had been given him. The Rev. gentleman need not have made any excuses, what he said was good enough for a sermon, anyway. Dr. D. M. Rankin put in a few well chosen words as usual, Mr. D. W. Gardner was called forward and made some very candid and impressive remarks, then S. A. Green, really the Lord's Apostle in this missionary work on the "Plains," (the new name for that part of the town), was called on. Mr. Green makes no pretentions to the learning of the schools nor of polished oratory, but none was needed in what he said, for the full conviction that the Lord had helped him in doing a grand work was apparent in all that he said and everybody was glad to see and hear him. The report of the building committee was read, and found to be lacking $84, to make a clean record for dedication. For this an appeal was made by Rev. Mr. Chase. The start was made with an additional $10 by D. W. Gardner, followed by $25 by Thos. Hunter, and sums from $5 to fifty cents came in and the amount was raised and more too. Mr. F. E. Bacon then formally presented the chapel to Rev. Chase, and the dedicatory services were then given by the latter. In a short talk by him, one thing was made very plain and that was, that although the chapel was given to the Methodist church, as the ownership must rest somewhere, he distinctly avowed that the chapel was not and would not be a sectarian, or denominational chapel, which was very gratifying to all present. Then "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name" was sung by the congregation, followed by the Doxology and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Mr. Brunning. Thus closed an occasion that will long be remembered, as the precursor of great good to those living in the northern part of the village.

WORTH KNOWING.

More oranges, lemons, bananas, figs and raisins are consumed in the United States than in any other country in the world.

"A cow fed partly on ensilage will be healthier and make more butter than when fed on dry feed," affirms F. D. Curtis.

If I were to preach a sermon on horticulture I would take as my text, 'Stir the Soil,'" was said by one of our best horticulturists.

An orange grove of 30,000 trees is to be painted in Pomona valley, Cal. by a syndicate of Illinois and Iowa capitalists. It will be the largest in the world.

Fay's Prolific is unanimously pronounced the best currant for market in the report of the New Jersey Horticulture Society.

Mr. S. F. Baker considers the wren one of the best friends of farmers and encourages them to nest on his place. He has yet to see the sparrow feed on insect food of any kind.

Apropos of strict business principles among farmers, Massachusetts Ploughman asks: "How many of them can tell us what it costs to grow a bushel of corn, to make a pound of pork or of poultry or beef, and which pays best?"

"A frequent change of diet is necessary to the health and best growth of the pig," says D. L. Thomas, president of the National Swine Breeders' Association. He claims that much loss from what is commonly known as cholera may be avoided by care and mixed diet, or change of diet.

Root crops pay when rightly treated and weeded, but may easily be made a failure by neglect. Parsnips, which should be sown early, usually sell well, and at a profit. Mangels, ruta-bagas and sugar beets are also desirable and profitable crops to grow in many localities.

Look after the meadows and pastures. Top-dress old meadows, and improve them by dragging and sowing a little timothy seed. All grass lands will repay any attention given them in the way of fertilizers. Clear meadows of stones and other obstruction to the mower.

Potatoes planted in May generally succeed well if properly cultivated. Where the beetle prevails, the early planting of early varieties is recommended. The tubers may be safely cut to two or three eyes to the set. Mapes' Potato Manure is pronounced by many good cultivators the best and most profitable fertilizer for potatoes.

Soiling crops are in order this month—such as oats, peas and corn. Sweet corn is excellent for soiling, though other varieties are planted for that purpose. Many farmers sow corn every two or three weeks through the season, thus securing a succession of green fodder. Drilling is preferable to broadcast sowing.

DR. R. A. GUNN, M. D., Dean and Professor of Surgery of the United States Medical College, Editor of the "Medical Tribune" author of "Gunn's New Improved Hand-book of Hygiene and Domestic Medicine," says: "Belonging as I do to a branch of the profession which believes that no School of Medicine knows all the truth regarding disease, and being independent enough to use any remedy that will help my patients without reference to the source from which it comes, and I am willing to acknowledge and commend thus frankly the value of Warner's Safe Cure.

The prejudice against horse flesh has now so faded out in Paris that there are 132 recognized butcher shops where horse flesh is openly sold.

Honey-moon.

"Say, Perkins, old boy, why don't we see you at the club any more?" Has your mother-in-law shut down on you?" "No, Brown; the fact of the matter is, my home is so happy now that there is no inducement for me to leave it. You look incredulous, but its a positive fact. You see my wife used to suffer so much from functional derangements common to her sex, that her spirits and her tem- were greatly affected. It was not her fault, of course, but it made home unpleasant all the same. but now, since she has begun to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, she has been so well and so happy that we are having our honey-moon all over again."

"Can't eat a thing." Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, regulating digestion, and giving strength.

of good health is found in the regular movement of the bowels and perfect action of the Liver. These organs were intended by nature to remove from the system of all impurities. If you are constipated you offer a "standing invitation" to a whole family of diseases and irregularities which will surely be "accepted," and you have guests unwelcome and determined. All these unhappy conditions may be averted by the timely use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets. Powerful for the effectual regulation of the bowels and Liver, establishing a healthy action of the entire wonderful organism with which we are created.

Constipation is positively cured by Carter's Little Liver Pills. Not by purging and weakening the bowels, but by regulating and strengthening them. A Noted [illegible] Politician Who Has Passed Away.

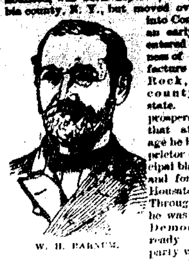
The Hon. William H. Barnum, famous for his able management of several Democratic campaigns, whose death was lately announced, was born Sept. 17, 1818, in Columbia county, N. Y., but moved over the line into Connecticut at an early age and entered the business of iron manufacture at Lime Rock, Litchfield county, of that state. In this he prospered so soon that at an early age he became proprietor of the principal blast furnaces and forges in the Housatonic valley. Through all his life he was an earnest Democrat, ever ready to aid his party with counsel or cash. After serving a term in the state legislature he was elected to the Fortieth, Forty-first and Forty-second congresses, and on May 22, 1876, took his seat in the United States senate, having been chosen to fill the unexpired term of Senator Ferry, deceased. In 1879 he was succeeded by Orville H. Platt, and thereafter turned his attention to managing the national affairs of his party.

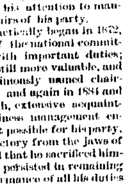


W. H. BARNUM.

His management practically began in 1872, when, as a member of the national committee, he was charged with important duties; in 1876, his work was still more valuable, and in 1880 he was unanimously named chairman of the committee, and again in 1884 and 1888. His great wealth, extensive acquaintance and shrewd business management enabled him to do the best possible for his party, and almost to wrest victory from the jaws of defeat. It may be said that he sacrificed himself to his party, as he persisted in remaining at his post in the performance of all his duties to the end of the campaign, though his physician had warned him a month before that it was at the peril of his life. When the task was completed the reins fell from his nerveless hands, the reaction left him completely exhausted, and he never recovered any fair measure of strength. His native ability was improved only by a common school education and long experience, and both in business and politics he was noted for the promptness with which he met an emergency.

David G. Croly.

David Goodman Croly, the recently deceased writer, was at one time quite noted on account of the remarkable fulfillment of some very remarkable prophecies which he made on purely philosophic principles. Writing as a "positivist" or sociologist in the early part of 1878, he predicted the crash in the Northern Pacific railroad, the panic, the fall of wages, labor riots, decline in prices and a change in the political government of the nation in 1876—all fulfilled except the last. He put forth the doctrine that a close study of the past would often enable us to predict the future social condition with absolute certainty; but the American people do not take kindly to prophets, so he was rather sharply criticised at the time and his success forgotten as soon as convenient. There is a natural but not very reasonable feeling in the public mind that one who predicts panic or popular disturbance helps in some way to bring on the evil he predicts.



D. G. CROLY.

Mr. Croly was born in Cloghnakilty, County Cork, Ireland, Nov. 3, 1829, and came to the United State in 1841. He learned the trade of silversmith, but very early went into journalism, marrying Miss Jennie Cunningham, known to the reading public as "Jennie June." They lost their all in an unfortunate journalistic enterprise at Rockford, Ills., then attained success in New York city, where Mr. Croly was at one time managing editor of The World and at another of The Graphic. He was a man of very many curious theories and apt suggestions, as strange a mixture of the severely practical and the visionary as can be found in the profession. He leaves a wife and three children. The daughter Vida is an actress, as was his daughter Minnie, who died a few years ago.

Southwest.

To the true born westerner, in whom the instinct of moving on to find a more desirable country never dies, not even the Pacific ocean can be a barrier.

A man of this class, who had lived successively in a number of states and territories between his native Ohio and his present home in California, one day had a revival of his migratory longing. He must "pack his grip" and "go west."

"But how can you get any farther west than California?" he was asked.

"Pshaw!" he answered. "There's plenty of west left, all down through Mexican California and South America. There's Peru, now. I'd give a good deal to see the mines down there. I tell you, sir," he cried, warming with his subject, "it must be real good and westy down in Peru!"—Youth's Companion.

Smith and Gilroy.

Here are portraits of D. Lowber Smith and Thomas F. Gilroy, the two estimable gentlemen who are fighting for the office of commissioner of public works in New York. Smith was appointed by A. S. Hewitt when the latter was mayor, and Gilroy is an appointee of the present mayor, Hugh J. Grant.

Mr. Smith was born in New York in 1846, was graduated from the College of New York in 1866, studied in the Paris school of mines and in 1867 was appointed assistant engineer to the Brooklyn water works. In 1878 he was made an assistant engineer in the New York board of public works and was until his appointment in December last connected with the city government in various capacities.

This was a last resort, and I hoped, although my little daughter's case was a very severe one, that the Favorite Remedy would do for her what it had done for others [illegible]

MARGARET EYTINGE.

Carl was a jolly little fellow,
With eyes of blue and curls of yellow,
And rosy cheeks, and just the chin
To hold a pretty dimple in.
He found himself alone one day,
And wondered what 't was best to play
While his mamma remained away.
Pencil and paper soon he saw,
And seized them both. Said he, "I'll draw
An ogre like the one so grim
Poor Jack heard growling 'Fee-fo-fum.'
First, here's his forehead full of bumps,
And then his nose with three big humps,
And then two ears of 'normous size,
And then two dreadful staring eyes,
And then a mouth from ear to ear,
With long, sharp, teeth-like tusks." But here
The artist, with eyes opened wide
In fright, gazed on his work and cried,
"Mamma, Mamma—come, come, please, do,
I'm very lonely without you;
And oh! Mamma, I'm so afraid
Of this old ogre that I've made."

—St. Nicholas

Some Superstitions.

It is unlucky to enter a house with the left foot forward.

It is unlucky to ride behind a bob-tailed horse at a funeral.

It is unlucky to sneeze before breakfast or when you see the new moon.

It is unlucky to whistle or sing before breakfast. It is also unlucky to tell your dreams before breakfast.

If your right ear burns friends are talking about you. If your left ear burns enemies are scandalizing you.

It is unlucky to own a crowing hen, a white horse, a white cow, a white cat, or to carry a white umbrella.

If the palm of your right hand itches you will receive money or shake hands. If your left hand itches you will pay your debts.

If the outside of your arm itches at the elbow you are going to sleep away from home. If the inside itches you will entertain a stranger.

If you are in search of good luck never let a hunchback pass you without touching the hump, no matter how lightly—the tip of your fingers will do. Then, if your sweetheart has for any reason grown cold or indifferent, he or she, as the case may be, will at once seek your presence and you will be restored to your place in his or her heart.

If you sneeze on Monday you sneeze for danger;
Sneeze on Tuesday, kiss a stranger;
Sneeze on Wednesday, sneeze for a letter;
Sneeze on Thursday, something better;
Sneeze on Friday, sneeze for sorrow;
Sneeze on Saturday, see your sweetheart to-morrow;
Sneeze on Sunday, and the devil will have dominion over you all the week.

See a pin and pick it up,
All the day you'll have good luck;
See a pin and let it lay,
Bad luck you'll have all the day

Diplomacy.

A gentlemen was walking along Elizabeth street a few mornings ago. A little boy 4 or 5 years old, stood in the gateway. As the gentleman approached the little fellow said:

"Good morning."

The gentleman saluted the youngster and entered into conversation with him.

"You don't know what I'm doing," said the little fellow.

"I'm saving up to get five cents."

"How much have you got toward the sum?"

"Well, I haven't got any just yet"

Of course the gentleman put his hand in his pocket and found three pennies which he handed over.

"I'll have to get two more before I have five, won't I?"

"Yes," replied the gentlemen, without taking the hint, but what are you going to do with the five cents after you get it?"

"Well, I hadn't made up my mind yet. I wanted to get the five cents first."

"Well, I hope you will succeed in in raising the desired amount," said the gentleman as he walked away.

Who says that boy won't get along.—Detroit Free Fress.

The Small Boy.

The small boy is the same the world over. He has a universal language and if he landed during the marble season in Timbuctoo he'd be perfectly able to make the Timbuctoo boy understand his opinion of alleys and toys. This small boy is a democrat—fine clothes do not obtain with him; indeed, they are rather scorned, and a well dressed boy is at present grabbed by his fellows and taunted with being "Little Lord Fauntleroy," and asked in a whining tone, "Why doesn't 'oo go home to dearest?" There is no sentiment about the small boy. He is all things to all men, and that is, impudent. No pavement is too sacred to keep him from writing his opinion in the whitest chalk upon it, and no lamp-post is too high and no step too much decorated for him to occupy it and view any passing show. He confesses to but one weakness and that is dogs. Cats he holds in utter contempt, regarding their tails merely as an appendage by which to swing them, and girls he loaths, and in his heart wonders what they were made for. For a few years he will away from them, and after that time, or until he gets married, he will run after them. The small boy is an institution we could ill afford to dispense with, and, like a great many other institutions, he occasionally needs a thorough warming up. I would like to suggest to his guardians that nothing is quite so efficacious for this purpose as a very high-heeled slipper; the heel affords a fine grip and the slipper is less likely to get out of [illegible] hand because of this, as you [illegible] is [illegible] the eel-like creature [illegible]. MIND READER BISHOP'S DEATH.

After Performing a Wonderful Mental Feat He is Stricken Down and Dies.

Washington Irving Bishop, the world famous mind reader, died Monday, May 13, at the Lambs' club, No. 34 West Twenty-sixth street, of hystrocatalepsy, a disease peculiar to people of extraordinary nervous development. At the time when his last illness overtook him Bishop was a guest of Henry E. Dixey at the club house, where a dinner was going on. It was then about 12 o'clock on Sunday night, and the mind reader had just given one of his most difficult and trying experiments, which taxed his nervous organization to the utmost. It consisted in picking out blindfolded a name from the club book of minutes, which had been selected by H. Clay Gren, the secretary, and J. A. Irwin, a member. After correctly finding the name—"Townsend"—Bishop, still blindfolded, wrote it out on a slip of paper backward, and just as his pencil completed the top stroke of the T he fell backward, in a cataleptic fit. Mr. Green and others among those present had often seen him in a similar condition before and felt no special alarm. The sick man was carried up stairs. His pulse when he was in his normal condition, was never less than 100, though the normal in other persons is seventy, and during his exhibitions it frequently ran up to 165, something almost unprecedented in medical history. His heart, too, always beat faster than the normal in other people, and his whole frame, which was slight, seemed one mass of nerves.

The fainting fit, therefore, was considered merely a passing occurrence, but before long Dr. Irwin, who attended him upstairs, felt that the case was dangerous and Dr. Lee was called in. Both labored hard to save the dying man, but at 12:20 o'clock he expired, his muscles never once relaxing.

Besides Dr. Ferguson and Dr. Irwin Dr. Hunce was also present and assisted in the post mortem. Nothing abnormal was found in Bishop's development, except that the brain, which weighed two pounds and eight ounces, was slightly larger than the ordinary, and the nervous structure was much greater than usual. Nothing was apparent to the casual observer to account for the dead man's extraordinary gift, but Dr. Ferguson will make a careful microscopical examination within a week or ten days. Bishop's wife and mother, in Philadelphia, were notified of his death, and arrived the next evening to take charge of the body.

The dead man was in all respects one of the most extraordinary being in existence, and his marvelous performance has undoubtedly puzzled more thinking men and women than any phenomena that has been brought to the public attention for several decades.

Bishop's life was full of incident and excitement. He was born in Fordham about thirty-two years ago, and at an early age manifested a capacity for the wonderful performances which have since made him famous. He went to England as a mere youth and perfected himself in the art of mind reading. In 1885 he married his first wife, by whom he had a daughter, but they were separated, and a year later he was married in Boston to a young widow named Helen G. Loud. Soon after this second marriage he contracted the cocaine habit, and this drug acting upon an acutely nervous temperament, produced fits of insanity, one of which was so severe that it necessitated his confinement for several weeks in an insane asylum in San Francisco.

At this period his domestic relations with the second Mrs. Bishop became unhappy, and their disagreements culminated in a suit against him for absolute divorce, the complaint alleging infidelity and numerous acts of cruelty. The divorce was granted on the 27th of last March, while Bishop was giving exhibitions in Minneapolis, and a few days later he remarried his first wife at St. Paul.

Gladstone's Predictions.

The most remarkable man of our time is the Hon. W. E. Gladstone—great in statesmanship, great in finance (he won his spurs of political knighthood as chancellor of exchequer), great in oratory, greatest of all in literature. How this octogenarian finds time to do so much, and to do everything so well, is a mystery.

He has recently published an article on "The Future of the English speaking Races." It reads like a chapter in the "Arabian Nights."

One hundred years ago the English speaking people of the world numbered 15,000,000. These were distributed thus: In Great Britain, 12,000,000; in America and other foreign lands, 3,000,000. To-day the number has multiplied seven fold and stands at 105,000,000. Mr. Gladstone quotes the eminent statistician, Barham Zincke, as authority for the statement that a century hence the English speakers of the Globe will number 1,000,000,000, distributed as follows, viz: In the British Islands, 70,000,000; in Canada, 140,000,000; in the United States, 800,000,000.—St. Louis Republic.

BURDETTE ON OKLAHOMA

The Genial Humorist Describes the Country and the People.

It's the same thing over again. Nothing is just what a fellow thought it was going to be. Recently the land in Oklahoma was, as it had been for fifteen years past, the richest, best watered, most fertile that ever lay out of doors; the climate was matchless, the scenery was lovely beyond dreams of quiet beauty, and it was a burning shame to shut up such a fair land from the possession of white men. Now, the white men are there, and all the good land is just over in the Cherokee strip. The land in Oklahoma is sterile and the water alkali; the climate is a combination of Greenland and Sahara; it is a land of dust, and drought, and just over the border lies the promised land. It is an old story. Reuben and Gad pre-empted their claims outside the boundary line of "The Descender" the Cherokee strip wasn't promised them but "Injun country" was good enough for them. The land of promise didn't suit the children of Israel at all. There wasn't half enough of it, and they added to it by plundering their neighbors until they "reigned over all the kingdoms from the river unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt," and by and by they didn't own a solitary acre of ground on the face of the big round earth. Let us not laugh at the poor deluded boomers in Oklahoma. Every man goes to Oklahoma, not once in his life, it may be—happy man if once is enough for him—but many times. Oklahoma lieth close on the borders of Carcasonne, and "Who hath not had his Carcasonne?" (Some day we'll put the carcase off) —Brooklyn Eagle.

PROF. WM. H. THOMPSON, M. D., University of New York city says: "More adults are carried off by chronic kidney disease than by any other one malady except consumption." This shows that Dr. Thompson considers kidney disease a frightful malady. He also says: "Bright's disease has no symptoms of its own, but has the spmptoms of every other disease." The reason why Warner's Safe Cure cures so many different diseases is that by curing symptoms, which are called diseases, it strikes at the disease itself.

Why He Was Thankful.

"Bromley, my serial story came back yesterday."

"What after keeping it three years?"

"Yes, and it wasn't read, for I had purposely pasted some of the pages together. The editor kept my stamps and sent the MS. by express at my expense."

"And you are not hopping mad?"

"No, I'm thankful he didn't charge me storage?"—Exchange.

The Only Change Needed.

Assistant to editor—Here is an old joke I just found back in the drawer. It's a dialogue between President Cleveland and Daniel. Might as well throw it away?

Editor—Mercy no, man! Change the name to President Harrison and Elijah and run it next week at the head of the funny column.—Peck's Sun.

HE GOT DISCOURAGED.

Ice Water a Poor Reward for a Lie As Well Told As This.

"Pretty rough, this Oklahoma business, but no rougher than Texas was when I first went out there," said the man with the sandy goatee, as he laid aside his paper.

"Were you ranching?" asked one of the group.

"No, sir; I was a railroad station agent."

"Must have seen a great deal of lawlessness?"

"Oceans of it, sir; oceans of it. I had to kill five men in the year 1866."

"You did!"

"Yes, sir, and wounded as many more. Didn't want to do it, you know; but it was kill or be killed. The crowd let me alone after awhile, but the Indians were a great nuisance. I was just counting up how many I killed in 29 months, and I am greatly disappointed."

"How many did you make out?"

"Only thirty-four, but I am satisfied that I have left out seven or eight somehow. When such a thing as that is once off your mind it is hard to recall exact figures."

"You have had some narrow escapes."

"Over a hundred, sir, and been wounded sixteen different times.

The boys once put up a rattlesnake job on me to try my nerve."

"How was it?"

"They caught five big fellows, and turned 'em loose in my office while I was at supper. When I returned I was very busy thinking, and so walked right in on them without warning."

"Mercy on me! And then?——"

"I got seated at my desk, and the serpents began to rattle and menace me. Three of the boys were looking in at the window, and I was determined not to show a sign of weakness."

"But you might have been bitten."

"I was bitten. Three of the snakes struck me in the left leg."

"And you didn't die?"

"As you see."

"But—you—you—"

"I had a quart of whiskey, and I drank it and counteracted the poison. It wasn't quite enough, however, and there are days now and then when I feel very queer."

"What is the exact sensation?"

"Very dry in my throat, and I always make bold to ask any gentlemen near me if he carry a flask.

If any of you gents happens to have such an article with you I shall be ever so grateful. I think I feel the premonitory symptoms."

"But we haven't. We are all delegates to the temperance convention at Dubuque."

"You are! Well, I took my chances and lost. That's the last time I tell that lie unless I see the bulge of a flask in some one's pocket before I begin. This is the third time to-day, and I haven't got the first smell of anything but ice water."—New York Sun.

A BLIND BRIDAL COUPLE.

Touching Story of a Man and Wife Who Never Saw Each Other.

Every pleasant evening, in that hour just before twilight which we all love to idle away with inconsequential thoughts and observation there passes my window a couple that greatly interest me, says a writer in the Toledo Blade. The lady is but a young girl, it seems, but she has such a pretty face, so white and peaceful, with something of sadness in it, something of joy.

She has great eyes that stare strangely at you, and at the sound of her companion's voice their lids are dropped and the long, graceful eyelashes fall upon her cheeks.

The man reminds me of the old Saxons. He is big and strong and has the curly golden hair and the big blonde beard of that race of men.

His companion hangs upon his arm, and yet he seems to depend on her as much as she does on him, for they cling very closely indeed together, while he carefully picks their way out with a light cane.

Both are blind. I inquired about them the other day. Neither ever saw the light of day. Neither can ever know how glorious the sunlight is, how prettily blend the beautiful hues of the flowers, how grand all nature looks. Neither ever saw the other. And yet they are a bridal pair.

They only live in a world of darkness and in each other. They met long ago, became devotedly attached to each other, and were married. And so now every evening when the weather is fine they go out for a little stroll, and as they slowly, carefully walk past my window I think it is a sad and yet pretty sight—a bridal pair.

Is It Genuine?

Probably thousands of people in this section of the country, and this section is no exception to any other in this respect in the United States, have read the report said to have been written by Prof. S. A. Lattimore, Ph. D., LL D., Analyst of Foods and Medicines, New York State Board of Health and Professor of Chemistry in the Rochester, N. Y., University, stating that all of the Safe Remedies manufactured by H. H. Warner & Co. were pure and wholesome, nor did any of them contain any mercury or deleterious substance. To shorten the controversy, however, we will give Prof. Lattimore's report entire:

UNIVERSITY OF ROCHESTER, CHEMICAL LABORATORY.

Mr. H. H. Warner has placed in my possession the formulæ of the several medicines manufactured and sold under the general designation of "Warner's Safe Remedies." I have investigated the processes of manufacture which are conducted with extreme care and according to the best methods. I have taken from the Laboratory samples of all the articles used in the preparation of these medicines, as well as the several medicines in which they enter. I have also purchased from different druggists in this city "Warner's Safe Remedies," and upon critical examination I find them all entirely free from mercury and from poisonous and deleterious substances.

S. A. LATTIMORE, Ph. D., LL. D.,
Analyst of Foods and Medicines,
New York State Board of Health,
Professor of Chemistry, University of Rochester, N. Y.

We cannot think that a firm of the standing of H. H. Warner & Co. would dare publish such a statement if it were untrue, and we now have that firm's authority to say to our readers that it is absolutely and unqualifiedly true in every particular.

A Modest, Sensitive Woman often shrinks from consulting a physician about functional derangement, and prefers to suffer in silence. This may be a mistaken feeling, but it is one which is largely prevalent. To all such women we would say that one of the most skillful physicians of the day, who has had a vast experience in curing diseases peculiar to women, has prepared a remedy which is of inestimable aid to them. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is the only remedy for woman's peculiar weeknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case or money refunded. See guarantee printed on bottle wrapper.

Centennial Mysteries.

Foreign guest at the centennial ball—I presume the ladies who are to open the ball are selected because of their colonial ancestry.

Mister McGulluster—Nn—er not all.

Foreign Guest—Ah! The selections were made on a basis of wealth, perhaps?

Mr. McGulluster—Er—not exactly; but you will have to excuse me, the festivities are about to begin. Here comes the ladies.

Foreign Guest—Oh, now I see! They were selected because they were 100 years old.—Puck.

George Francis Train has broken his fast after seventeen days, and is now considering a proposition to lecture in a dime museum at a salary of 1,000 a week. Probably that was the real purpose of his experiment.

SPRING

It is an acknowledged fact that during the months of spring, the body is more susceptible to the beneficial effects of medicine than at any other period during the entire year. Therefore any lady suffering from weakness, loss of appetite, blood disorders or nervous prostration is wise in now commencing to use Austen's 51797 Ladies Prescription, a tonic, blood purifying and strengthening medicine excelled by none. This remedy is particularly useful in aiding the convalescent's return to health and strength. It is guaranteed to be harmless and free from any injurious drugs.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Rev. George E. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. O. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

IT has been calculated that the railroads of the world are worth nearly £60,000,000,000, or about one-tenth of the wealth of the civilized nations, or more than one-quarter of their invested capital. At this rate all the ready money in the world would buy only about one-third of them.

If he does jump they think his body will rest after making that jump in the cold, cold ground.

The many friends in Fulton of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. THE Brompton Hospital for consumptives, London, England, publishes a statement that 52 per cent. of the patients in that institution had unsuspected kidney disease. Every drop of blood in the system passes thousands of times through the lungs in each 24 hours. The same blood passes through the kidneys for purification. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition or able to expel the poisonous or waste matter the acids return to the delicate tissues of the lungs and produce irritation, which results in the symptoms of what is known as consumption. This explains why 52 per cent of the consumptive patients have unsuspected kidney disorder. Warner's Safe Cure puts the kidneys in a healthy condition taking the acids from the blood which vitiate the lungs and cause consumption.

State Superintendent of Public Instuction A S. Draper has issued the following:

TO THE PUBLIC:

Chapter 245 of the Laws of 1889 provides that School Meetings shall hereafter be held on the first Tuesday, instead of the last Tuesday, of August, at seven-thirty, instead of seven o'clock in the evening. All reports are required to be made and filed with the Town Clerk as heretofore, between the close of the school year, and the time of the Annual School Meeting. The reports for the present school year must close with the twenty-fifth of July.

In all school districts in which the number of children of school age exceeds three hundred, district officers must be elected by ballot on the Wednesday next after the first Tuesday in August, between the hours of 12 o'clock noon and 4 o'clock in the afternoon. But this provision does not apply to the Counties of Richmond, Suffolk, Chenango, Westchester, Warren, Erie and St. Lawrence. OBITUARY.

Eunice M. Mosher was born in Onondaga, N. Y., Jan. 27th, 1806, and died in Cohoctah, Mich., May 13th, 1889, aged 83 years three months and sixteen days. Early in life, she gave her heart to the Saviour, and her name to the M. E. church living a consistent christian life. She manifested the christian's character, never losing sight of the one great purpose of life, to be ready when the Master called. In the year 1884, she was married to Henry Mosher living in Oswego county, fifteen years. In 1838 she with her husband and family removed to Ohio, living only two short years when she was left a widow with seven children, the youngest a babe of five months. It being her husband request that she should return to her old home, she gathered up her little ones and returned to Fulton. She was a faithful friend and mother, working hard to keep her family together always keeping a home for them until she moved to Michigan, in 1877, where she has since resided. Her last sickness, congestion of the lungs, with a combination of diseases, was of great suffering, she bore it all without a murmur. She leaves three daughters and two sons and a host of friends and relatives to mourn, two sons having preceded her to the better world. Sadly will we miss her, but our loss is her gain.

The case of Gere, Platt and Johnson of Oswego, originally tried in the Wayne Circuit court, has just been decided in the Supreme court of Pennsylvania. It arose out of the Bohemian oats company which operated in Wayne county to a considerable extent two years ago. Unger's note given to the company passed into the hands of the plaintiffs. The courts decided that Unger need not pay it because of the failure on the part of the company to make good its part of the contract to buy a certain percentage of the oats raised by Unger. Hundreds of other notes probably involving $75,000 awaited this decision.

WASHINGTON, May 27, 1889.

In the course of a few hours the President sees a queer collection of people. There were Senator Chandler, nervous, quizical in expression, doned in sombre black. Near him were seated an old gentleman and a bevy of half a dozen pretty girls. Next to them came Prof. Langston, the colored educator and politician, oily but vindictive, scheming, pushing, restless. Across from him was seated Col. Thomas Ochiltree, the red headed ranger of the Rio Grande, dressed in the noisiest of light plaid suits, and talking to a friend in his familiar obtrusive, self-sufficient manner. In a group at the farther end of the room were a couple of old-fashioned colored country preachers, respectful and respectable, accompanied by a broken down old colored man and woman. The faces of the four were anxious and troubled and the old woman looked pleadingly from one to another for hope. They say not a word but await their turn to enter the President's presence. The four have come to ask that the sentence of this old woman's son, who is to be hanged this week be commuted and, God help her, there is no hope!

Public Printer Palmer is not allowed to get lonesome, or forget that lots of people are warmly interested in his welfare and are willing, nay anxious, to render him all reasonable assistance in conducting the affairs of his office. Congressmen have been frequent callers this week. The Grand Army delegation has called to urge the retention and the favoring of ex-soldiers in promotions. And the office seekers have called by the hundreds to urge their own cases. It is expected that employes discharged during the Democratic administration will be reinstated and that short work will be made of Democrats. Mr. Palmer when in the Chicago Post-office made a record for partizanship which the office seekers fondly hope he will fully sustain in his present place.

About a year ago an ex-page of the Senate, Jacob L. Doty, was appointed a United States Consul in Tahiti. Doty, who had reached the serious and diplomatic age of 22 years, packed up his lawn tennis suit and his flannel blazers and hied himself away to the royal court of Tahiti, a court of whose very existence a man might be entirely ignorant and still do business; but a court that Doty writes back to his friends is not to be sneezed at. Many moons ago an Englishman, a Lord D'Arcey with a fine eye for the main chance married a native princess of the South Sea Island. To day the result of the marriage is a beautiful dusky Tahitian princess of 20, in her own right the largest property owner on the island. She possesses cocoa plantation galore and pearl fisheries worth untold millions.

When Consul Doty arrived at Tahiti, this maiden was fancy free. Of course, the young noblemen of the islands were sighing for her favors were too numerous for comfort. A good many of them were great and howling swells and how she could refuse them all actually shocked the court. But Doty came and conquered. As quick as he landed on the magic island, his loud spring suit made its impression on her susceptible young Tahitian heart and but a few short months and they were engaged.

The princess English father was, as was natural in a cad who had married a savage princess for her money, made a great howl about the princess marrying below her station. When it was represented to him, however that Consul Doty was a great grandson on his mothers side, of Lord Melbourne, who was an under Secretary of State during the early portion of Queen Victoria's reign, and is also related to the Wallaces and McPherson's and so on and so on my Lord D'Arcy was necessarily disarmed.

Now society in the South Sea Islands is bumping itself to celebrate the considerably royal nuptials in the most approved fashion. In all this there is something that amuses me. A young American who was a year ago an humble page in the Senate rakes through his ancestry with a fine comb to find a pedigree that fits him to wed a South Sea Island princess, whose mother wore a ring through her nose and whose grandfather was an epicure in the matter of boiled missionary.

The annual session of the Mount Vernon Ladies association has closed its annual services and its reports show a satisfactory prosperity and ever increasing general interest in the sacred home of Washington.

Cheese Market Reports.

[From the Utica Herald.]

AT UTICA.

UTICA, May 20.

The market went off 1½c. to-day, not very much to the surprise of dairymen. Everybody knew that they were getting big money for fodder cheese last week, but those prices were not expected to last. This is the end of the full fodder make of cheese. Next week there will be a mixture of grass cheese and the week after it will be all grass stock. Consequently there is no hesitation about disposing of present offering at present prices. At the decline market was decidedly active. Most buyers seemed to think that at 8½c. cheese ought to be a fair purchase. The sales were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
3	102	8c
10	599	8¾
63	3,964	8⅝
14	914	8½
17	1,077	8⅝
8	355	8¾
115	6,992
	1,223	Com.
Total	9,215

Ruling price 8⅝c. Transactions one year ago, 8,850 boxes; ruling price 8⅝c. Two years ago, 7,731 boxes, ruling price 9¾c.

There were sales of 12 packages creamery butter at 17c. also 12 packages sold to local dealers at 20c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, May. 20.

Cheese—As has been feared since the marked advance in prices of a week ago, the cheese market has suffered a heavy decline, and buyers are extremely cautious even at these rates. Last week's purchases brought a loss to the buyers in nearly every case, and we doubt if any of them expected to get out even. To-day's dispatches are discouraging, and buyers in most cases advise consigning the goods. Colored cheese in rather better demand than white. The lower prices did not have the effect to cause factorymen to hold back stocks, so far as we could learn, and it is pretty well understood that prices are more likely to go down further than up. To-day's transactions are as follows:

2	114	7½
48	2,154	8⅜
3	109	p. t.
29	1,269	Com.
82	3,646
Farm dairy	406
Total	4,052

Farm diaries.—Considerable of the farm cheese went forward on commission. The sales were made at 8 to 9c., four or five lots at the latter price.

Butter—Fifty-two packages of farm dairy sold at 17 to 19c., mostly at 18c. There were 43 packages of creamery sold at 17c.

AT FULTON.

The opening meeting of the Board of Trade was organized at the Lewis House Monday evening by electing Willard Johnson, president, H. H. Merriam, vice president and A. Gregg secretary and treasurer.

It was decided that each buyer and salesman should pay three dollars to defray expences.

Twelve factories were represented, offering 430 boxes of cheese for sale, most of which was sold at the Utica ruling, which was 8⅝ cents. Some choice lots bought 8¾ cents.

The buyers present were Messrs. Hoose, Keller, Osborn, Doxtader and Baker.

THERE WERE SEVERAL

PIGS UNDER THE GATE.

About 10 p. m., on Saturday, judging from the vigorous amount of squealing done. There was the big pig, the fat pig, the little pig and the lean pig all broke loose from the pen at once and got stuck under the gate.

They sung their several little songs in the Sunday papers. In the meanwhile our $3.00 and $10.00 All Wool Suits are boomers.

A crowded store yesterday and hundreds of well pleased customers the gratifying result.

Something else big in store for you! Watch for the daily papers for announcements!

BABYHOOD

Is a monthly magazine devoted to the hygiene and care of infants and young children, and all that pertains to the routine of the nursery. It is now in its fifth year. The Congregationalist recently said of it:

"BABYHOOD seems almost indispensable to the household in which there are young children. It is for the parents and the nurse, and is packed full of important suggestions of a practical character. From personal experience of its usefulness, we commend it warmly."

And the Chicago Advance:

"No mother but must appreciate its wise and helpful suggestions, and be grateful for the solving of perplexities and the helping over hard places which every one comes to who has the care of young children. We commend it to every mother in the land."

Also the New York Graphic:

"The success of this periodical has been enormous. It makes young mothers feel that the only subject worthy of attention is at last being recognized."

Every intelligent father and mother should read it regularly. Their children will be healthier and happier. It will reduce the work of caring for them, nursing them, dressing them, amusing them. Letters from subscribers frequently contain such testimonies as these, lately received:

"I am grateful to BABYHOOD; I have seen but two numbers, but have learned so much from those that I feel I should be doing my children a wrong if I should fail of the opportunity to learn more." "The help it has been to us would have astonished me had it been predicted beforehand." "Physician as I am, your magazine is the most welcome periodical that comes to my table, and is the one I read first." "I cannot speak too highly of BABYHOOD. During the three years that I have subscribed to it, I have felt repaid a hundred times for the outlay by the relief and confidence it has given me in the management of my children."

A Small Boy's Essay on Corns.

Corns are of two kinds, vegetable and animal. Vegetable corns grow in rows, animal corns grow on toes. Gophers like corn, but people who have corns do not like to go-fer, if they can help it. Corns have kernels and some Colonels have corns. Vegetable corns grow on ears, but animal corns grow on toes, at the other end of the body Folks as have corns sometimes send for the doctor to cure them, but if they would be sensible and buy their Boots and Shoes at the Salmon Shoe Store, First Street Fulton, they would not be raising corns. Try it. 1w2.

FULTON BOOMING

New Buildings Going Up Everywhere and Lots of Real Estate Changing Hands.

F. C. Church has the frame work up for a fine house which he is building on Third street.

It has been decided to modernize the Citizens' bank building. A new plate glass front will be put in and the floor lowered.

William Patrick, the contractor, has purchased of the Kenyon estate all of the lots surrounded by Erie, Seneca, Fourth and Fifth streets with the exception of two or three previously sold. The reported price is $3,000. If this is so we consider it the best "buy" made in Fulton this spring.

The foundation walls for the addition to the Fourth street school building have been laid by contractor W. H. Ross. The contract calls for the completion by Sept. 1st.

The east side of the gun works is up one story and windows placed in the same. Twenty-eight windows on the first story of one side of the building gives one an estimate of the size of this mammoth establishment.

Five of the six lots belonging to the Kenyon estate and located on Oneida street between Sixth and Seventh streets have recently been sold. G. H. Fassell purchasing the west lot, S. F. Merry the next two, A. N. Parmiter the east lot and John Porter the one just west, of it. Mr. Fassell is filling in his lot and some new dwelling houses may be expected in that locality soon.

Harry Comstock has the cellars dug and the foundations are being laid for three new cottage houses on the lots recently purchased of Mr. Bogue.

Ed. Morgan is erecting a dwelling house an the corner of Utica and Seventh streets on the lot that he recently purchased of H. D. Wells. It is already inclosed.

OSWEGO FALLS.

At Oswego Falls the brick block in process of erection by Fred Stoddard next to the Emeny block on Broadway is up one story. It will have two stores on the lower floor. The foundation of J. R. Sullivan's block, next west has been laid. This will contain one large store on the ground floor which Mr. Sullivan will probably occupy himself.

Mrs. McGue has her new brick block on Broadway built up to the second story. It will have one store on the ground floor and will be occupied by her son-in-law James Carroll when completed.

Lewis Johnson has his new wooded block nearly inclosed. So you see that Oswego Falls is getting there too in great shape.

At C. R Nichol's the entire stock is now on sale at one-half to two-thirds value. Castors this week at your price.

"Tip" Clark has made extensive repairs to his hotel on First street, having finished up in good style his sitting room and bar room.

Hart has purchased a couple of gray Canadian horses which are daily seen drawing his coal cart loaded with black diamonds through the streets.

The memorial sermon and union meeting will be held in the M. E. church, next Sunday evening. Rev. B. Brunning has been selected to deliver the sermon.

Hart has already unloaded three boat loads of coal into his yard and has four more on the way. He is a hustler and is doing lots of business. Another illustration of the principle. "It pays to advertise."

Indications point to another large fruit crop this season. The apple crop will not be as large as last year, but blossoms indicate a heavy pear crop. Cherries and plums blossomed very full. Berries and grapes also look very promising.

It is estimated that more than 10,000 bushels of onions have been drawn out and scattered upon the fields in the town of Sterling. On account of the depression of the market for that commodity, they are unable to dispose of them at any price.—Oswego Times.

The strawberry growers of Volney and vicinity will hold a meeting at the Clark house in this village on Saturday at 2 p. m. All interested are requested to be present as matters for their general interest concerning the shipment of berries will be discussed.

Reuben Kelly one of the prisoners who escaped from Oswego jail last year was arrested while hanging around the N. Y. O. & W. station last week by deputy sheriff Poole. Before his arrest by Poole his identity was inspected by officer Jones. He had intended to leave town on that evening. Poole has an "heye like an heagle" for criminals.

Arrangements are being perfected for the first re-union of the 184th N. Y. Infantry which will be held in Church's hall in this village commencing at noon Thursday, June 6, when N. N. Strannahan will welcome the veterans and Captain J. S. Palmer will respond. Further arrangements have not yet been perfected. An effort is however being made to have Col. Cantine of New York present. He is a host in himself. Maj. Ferguson is President and Prof. Rob't. Simpson Secretary of the organization.

The members of the Fulton band desire us to announce that complying with the request of a number of citizens they are willing to give concerts weekly alternating between the park and the canal bridge in the business portion of the village provided citizens will contribute enough to supply them with band music. They now play a high grade of music and play it well. Some member will probably call on you next week when an opportunity will be given to subscribe for this object. Let us have the music by all means.

Will the young men who stand in front of the churches every Sunday night to wait for their best girls, please bend your ears a minute in this direction? Gossip desires a word with them. You are an unmitigated nuisance, you are; and the girl who will permit herself to be picked up by you in front of the church is wanting in self respect. Why don't you go to her house and take her to church, and sit beside her during the sermon, and learn wisdom, and take her home in a respectable manner? Do you know what you look like ranged along the sidewalk? You look like a lot of crows on a fence rail. That is what it looks like—Ogdensburg Journal.

The Odensburg Journal is not acquainted with Fulton young men of the stripe it refers to. Father to a mule is nearer right.

KILLED BY A BALL BAT.

Little Joe McCaffrey Accidentally Killed at the Fair Grounds.

Saturday afternoon being very pleasant and no school, a large number of the Oswego Falls boys went to the fair grounds to play ball. The game had progressed some time when an exceedingly sad occurrance took place which put a stop to all sport. Dan Mahar was at the home base and in stricking at the ball the club slipped from his grasp and struck little Joe McCaffrey, aged nine years, on the neck. He was standing some twenty feet distant, watching the game. He fell to the ground unconscious and never rallied—breathing his last in about fifteen or twenty minutes after he was struck.

He was the son of Edward McCaffrey who lives on Broadway directly across from the fair grounds and was a general favorite among his young companions. The accident is one of the saddest that has happened in this locality in many a day. The funeral was held at the Church of Immaculate Conception, Monday at 10 a. m., Father Kearney conducting the services. The Sunday school attended the services in a body. Ex. Mayor McCaffrey of Oswego, an uncle with his wife attended the funeral.

Their First Outing.

The Pathfinder Boat club take their first outing of the season to-morrow when they will have a basket picnic at the Pathfinder island. Every member of the club with his wife or best girl is requested to attend and enjoy themselves on the island of which the club is the proud possessor. There will be foot ball, base ball, sailing races, &c. during the day. There will also be an opportunity for members to display their skill at croquet, quoits and other pastimes. Steam yachts will convey members from Law's landing in the north part of the village to the island between 10:30 a. m. and 12:30 p. m. and an opportunity to return any time after 3 o'clock p. m.

Another Fire.

We had distributed the type giving an account of the fire at Mason & Allen's tub factory one week ago Saturday or the same could have been used for an account of the fire at the same place on Monday morning. It was about 7:45 a. m. when the fire alarm was sounded and the fire department with the two steamers, Hook and Ladder Co. and the Mutual Johnson and Sharp Hose Companies were soon on the spot. Two streams were thrown from the hydrant in front of Taylor Bros. knife factory through No's 1 and 2 hose. The fire was soon under control. The damage to the kiln where the fire originated was slight.

WORTH KNOWING.

Dehorning cattle has been declared illegal in England.

Some old gardners claim that cucumbers vines will bear better if they are topped.

Three wants are responsible for nine out of every ten unprofitable farms, according to American Agriculturist—want of cultivation, want of manure and want of drainage.

Prof. Goff, of the New York Station, finds the really valuable novelty in tomatoes tested the past season in the dwarf champion.

Colonel F. D. Curtis characterizes skim-milk cheese as "the Chinese wall that keeps us out of the cheese market"—a point our dairyman would do well to note.

The largest horse farm in the world, according to a recent statement, is near Cheyenne, Wyo. The horses number 5,000 and require 100 miles of fencing to keep them within bounds on 120,000 acres.

"And the country would blossom as a rose," said an agricultural orator. "It'd better blossom as a cabbage," said an old farmer. "I never could see any profit in them air roses."

Milk is a much better food for poultry properly managed. It is one of the best fertilizers that can be had, and is well worth the trouble of gathering up and storing until ready for use.

On the farm the laying of five dozen eggs ought to pay for keeping a hen a year. All above this is profit. On the farm it will nearly always pay to plant a few rows of sunflower seed especially for the poultry.

A puzzling fact, noted by the New York Tribune, is that multitudes of people, who are impelled by their hunger for land to leave Europe and come to this country appear to lose their land hunger as soon as they arrive. They settle for life in the crowded tenement districts of our large cities, where their condition is little better than what it was in their old homes, and absolutely refuse to go West, where they can have good land for nothing.

Mr. J. K. Brown, New York Dairy Commissioner, remarks that dairying has been carried on in a very wasteful way, and that no manufacturer could stand the competition of his rivals if he should allow his business to run as slack as dairymen run theirs. "Manufacturers are literally compelled to know all about the capacity of the machines they use, but New York State farmers are keeping herds, one-half of which never give milk enough to pay a profit on their keeping. No other business will permit such a drain."

All disorders caused by a bilious state of the system can be cured by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. No pain, griping or discomfort attending their use. Try them.

Development of American Agriculture.

The skill of the American farmer, supplied as he is with the most ingenious and graceful and effective machinery, has become an object of admiration and imitation. The well-organized home of the American farmer is looked upon as a model. The place filled in the community by the American farmer is considered so important and honourable that other nations inquire how it has been attained. The crops of the American farmer are looked upon as so sure that all anxiety with regard to the supply of food for people less favored has passed away. The rapid growth of agriculture in America may be made more apparent by recurring to its condition in this country three-quarters of a century ago. At that time the ploughs were usually made by the village blacksmith and wheelwright, Shovel factories were few and small. Grain-harvesters, reapers, mowers, tedders, and horse rakes were unknown. The mechanical enterprise engaged in producing these and other improved implements of husbandry during all these years has been untiring, and the result has been surprising. In one year the patent issued for improvements in agricultural machinery exceeded one thousand, of which thirty-six were for rakes, a hundred and sixty for hay and grain-harvesters and attachments, a hundred and sixty-seven for seed planters and drills, thirty for hay and straw cutters, ninety for cultivators, seventy-three for bee-hives, ninety for churns, a hundred and sixty for ploughs and attachments. Meanwhile, the vast increase of production, to which reference has already been made, indicates also the skill and energy of those who are engaged in the various branches of agriculture. This unusual and extraordinary growth which has thus far attended American agriculture is due not only to the diversity of soil and climate, the rapid increase of population, and the vast improvement in agricultural machinery, but also to the independent ownership of land which characterizes American institutions. It were not easy to tell the strength and stimulus which come through the ownership of the soil to him who occupies it, has fixed his home upon it, and looks to it for his means of subsistence. The proportion of land-holders in the United States to the aggregate population is great, and it is significant when we consider the responsibilities resting upon them and the opportunities they possess.—Ex-Commissioner Geo. B. Loring in North American Review for March.

Every woman who suffers from Sick Headache, and who dislikes to take bitter doses should try Carter's Little Liver Pills. They are the easiest of all medicines to take. A positive cure for the above distressing complaint; give prompt relief in Dyspepsia and Indigestion; prevent and cure Constipation and Piles. As easy to take as sugar. Only one pill a dose. 40 in a vial. Price 25 cents. If you try them you will not be without them.

Five towns in Kansas now have women mayors.

Fodder Corn.

The planting of fodder corn for late feeding is increasing in popularity of late years, in addition to the crops grown for ensilaging. It is an important crop to farmers who keep stock to any extent and should not be neglected by stockmen. To have a succession it is a good plan to plant every week or two after commencing. Some farmers who make but one planting or sowing defer it too long. It will not usually attain sufficient growth to be at its best for either Fall or Winter feeding when put in as late as July 10, yet it can be nearly full grown for Fall feeding, and if the pastures are scanty, and hay not too plenty, a field of it will prove a great addition to the feed for milch cows, and save many dollars' worth of hay and much shrinkage of milk. The corn may be planted in drills or sown broadcast, but drilling is preferred by the majority of good farmers.

Good Things for Farmers

A recent agricultural writer declares that the best ploughs, the best farm harrows and the very best of all implements are the best for the farmers to have. Good implements, good work, good crops, assist greatly in making the farmer good. Bad tools make bad work and vex the user and make him bad too. Good soil, good seed, good work and a good season will make good crops, and all of these must have their influence to make farmers and their hired help good. So many good things combined have a wonderful influence in the community in which they are found to make the community good.

The Second City in the Union.

Chicago is in an agony of anxiety lest she may not rank as the second city of the Union in the new census. A law has been enacted by the State of Illinois under which the suburbs of the Windy City can be annexed to that huge municipality. Just now the newspapers in that region are appealing to the people in order to make sure of annexation. This will probably excite alarm in the bosoms of Philadelphians, but Brooklyn may look on with complacency at this struggle for precedence. If the time comes when either Chicago or any other distant city outstrips her in population, all she has to do is to annex herself to New York, and then she can bite her thumb at the rest of the country.—Herald.

The Great Eastern.

For the first time in the history of the Great Eastern she has cleared a profit for her owners. She was launched on January 31, 1858, and her cost complete was about $4,250,000. She was employed in various ways, but in none more successfully than the laying of the Atlantic cable. A few months ago she was sold for $100 000. Her new owners have recently sold the hull and fittings as follows: The copper brought $13,450, the brass $19,900, gun metal $22,000, lead $20,925, outer iron plates $62,500, inner iron plates, rivets and beams, $61,150, the anchors about $1,500. This will give the owners a profit of more than $100,000.—New York Tribune.

T. GRANGAR STEWART, M. D. F. R. S. E., Ordinary Physician to H. M. the Queen, in Scotland, Professor of Practice of Physic in the University of Edingburgh, says: "Peritonitis is occasionally the cause of death in all forms of Bright's disease. It may result from local affections, or from the state of the blood." Warner's Safe Cure acts as a preventive by curing the kidney disease and removing the contamination from the blood.

The Whole Subject Presented

A little Boston girl was rebuked the other day for certain irregularities of behavior.

"Look here, my dear Emily," said the mother, "if you do like that you won't go to heaven."

"Don't want to go to heaven," said Emily.

"What! You don't want to go to heaven?"

"No!"

"Why not?"

"Got to die first."—Boston Transcript.

"There are few things that I believe in with all my heart and it affords me pleasure to tell of one of them." The speaker was ex-Senator Albert Merritt, head of the large fruit firm, 82 Park Place, N. Y., and the scene his office. "I was sick and feared I had become fated to endure the

THE LONG PEACE SINCE 1865.

Angel of Peace, thou hast wandered too long!
  Spread thy wings to the sunshine of love!
Come, while our voices are blended in song,
  Fly to our ark like the storm beaten dove;
Fly to our ark on the wings of the dove;
  Speed o'er the far sounding billows of song,
Crowned with thine olive leaf garland of love,
  Angel of Peace, thou hast waited too long.

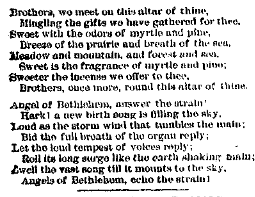
Brothers, we meet on this altar of thine,
  Mingling the gifts we have gathered for thee,
Sweet with the odors of myrtle and pine,
  Breeze of the prairie and breath of the sea,
Meadow and mountain, and forest and sea.
  Sweet is the fragrance of myrtle and pine;
Sweeter the incense we offer to thee,
  Brothers, once more, round this altar of thine.

Angel of Bethlehem, answer the strain!
  Hark! a new birth song is filling the sky.
Loud as the storm wind that tumbles the main;
  Bid the full breath of the organ reply;
Let the loud tempest of voices reply;
  Roll its long surge like the earth shaking main;
Swell the vast song till it mounts to the sky,
  Angels of Bethlehem, echo the strain!

OUTSIDE THE LINES.

A STORY FOR MEMORIAL DAY BY CAPT. GEO. L. KILMER.

[Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.]



IN a village cemetery on the lower border of Pennsylvania there are two graves, strangely connected, that are visited each Decoration day by a Grand Army comrade and his little family group—two graves with a history.

The Union army had driven the Confederate invaders from northern soil in the Gettysburg campaign and followed their flying columns across the Rappahannock and Rapidan rivers. One day, while passing along the turnpike among the rich farms of Orange county, Sergt. Everett Andros, of the Twentieth, was stationed with a guard at the entrance to a farm lane—common in the south—leading from the road to the house. Around the farm there were signs of life, a thing unusual in Virginia whenever the Union army passed by. When the sergeant and his men took the post they saw a young woman sitting under a tree near the road, and two children playing near. To these spectators the army moving past, horsemen, footmen, heavy cannon, drawn by stout, sleek teams, was a holiday show, but whatever their thoughts, they looked on in silence.

The general had given Andros' guard orders to permit no soldier to go to the house. The tedious tramp of the army went on for hours, and sometimes the soldiers, chafing at their fatigue and privations, tried to pass at the gate or to climb the fence above or below the guard. When they were stopped they gave surly retorts for the interference.

"Humph! You're afraid we'll take something from these 'secesh,'" one would say. Another would add: "Serves 'em right if we do." But the guards would motion them sternly to move on. Sometimes these rough words, though aimed at the guards, were meant for the young woman, and through her the people of her class. But the keenest sallies passed unheeded by the one whose watching as the hours dragged seemed to be a weary vigil, for curiosity must tire out at last. Could the long lines of soldiers hold some special attraction for her?

At last the sergeant, through pity for the defenseless maiden and her wards, and to spare the temper of his men, walked along the road opposite the watcher, touched his cap in salute, and said:

"Pardon me, miss, but I think you ought to leave this spot. You are exposed here."

A gentle lifting of the eyes was the only sign that the words were heard. Another sally from some soldier whom the guard put away with force gave point to the warning, and Andros repeated it in the same friendly tone, adding: "You will be called a—a—rebel, and, perhaps, a spy." Still no answer, other than a nervous turning of the face toward the speaker and a quick withdrawal, for her eyes at the instant had been fixed sharply upon the ranks in the road.. The regiment [illegible] was the —— Pennsylvania. The [illegible] along, giving vent in [illegible] of rep[illegible], or song, or complaints at the day's long march. But there was one of the number who did not join in the rallying [illegible]. Could he have been [illegible] the column reached this point [illegible] would have been noted in [illegible] struggled to get in at the gateway, and when the silent marcher looked up on the outcry, his eyes met those of the young woman. Both blushed, and he turned and hurried on. Quickly now the other called the children to her and led them to the house. Andros supposed the last scene between the guard and the would be forager had shown the stubborn miss that the roadside was no place for her.

All that happened here was unusual. Where the army marched or camped the citizens asked the commanders for house guards, or one was sent unasked. But this young woman, relying, it seemed, on her own presence by the road, had not asked for protection, and her conduct had left no room for suspicion that she might be friendly with the enemy. Secession women invariably stayed indoors when bluecoats were about.

Twilight came on; the army continued its tramp. The guards began to wonder if they were to be kept at this station all night, when the shuffling, shambling form of a negro was seen in the lane. Now for news, thought the guard, for the negroes were the unfailing sources of local knowledge, and it was often good news to the soldiers to know what river or road their camp was on, or even the names of farmers and planters round about. When the negro neared the gate he stopped, cap in hand, and eyed the soldier pacing with his gun. The sergeant called him to come on, but he stood in his tracks and stammered the words, "Y-y-oung miss sent me!" The guard halted. Andros drew near. "Young miss' sent me to say, 'Please come to de house.'"

"Who is your young miss, Sambo?"

"She named Miss Ellwood, sah. Ole miss' she named Ellwood, too, sah. But I'se no Sambo. I'se named Patrick Henry, sah.

"Patrick Henry Ellwood of course?"

"Oh, no, mars. I'se no Ellwood, sah. I belong to Mistah Mars Seyton."

"Where's your master?" said Andros, sharply.

"My mars, sah? Ole mars' dead, sah. Young mars done gone. Dunno, sah, whah he done gone, sah."

Andros knew that he could not get full details from a negro at once, and as there were no white men on the place he shouldered his musket and went to extend his acquaintance at Ellwood farm.

"Ole Miss," he learned on the way, was head mistress, and had been twice widowed. The last master, Col. Ellwood, had been killed in the Confederate army. A son of the first master, Capt. Seyton, was now in that army, and still another son, owner, as laws had said, of Patrick Henry and one or two more on the place, was a wanderer. "Mars Ellwood and my Mars Edward nevvy could get on together," the old man said sadly. "Young Miss," Evadne (called Eva by the negroes), was an Ellwood, having been a minor when she received a step father.

The lane opened into a wide lawn, with a garden and yard and a path ran from the track to a side door. As he passed the front of the house—an old style, cross shaped mansion—Andros saw that rough bars were nailed over doors and windows, giving a very deserted look. The back part was open and the negro went to the doorway of a room between the parlor and kitchen. Now the heroine of the occasion stepped out on the porch, and by a simple nod and gesture, showed the soldier a seat by the door. Andros saluting, said, "No, miss, I am on duty. How can I serve you?" He spoke with studied coldness. Without confusion or change of color, the other said, "You are certainly welcome. I sent to you because I wish to know if there must be a guard here at the lane?"

"N—no, ma'am, no must about it unless you wish. May I ask why?" She thought a moment and finally said: "There is no objection to a guard, yet it might be unpleasant." The speaker was a type of fair haired, candid womanhood, a winner of notice rather by her manner than by physical beauty, with which, however, she was richly endowed. She was earnest, and inclined now to be confidential, and continued: "I regret you cannot rest yourself here (motioning to the broad seat); you soldiers seem to be always in motion, and I have something to tell you."

There were no white people in sight excepting the fragile young woman, but from windows and doors and the corners of houses and sheds, the shining faces of the slaves peered out curiously. Andros was assured by this that no enemies lurked at hand or the negroes would be in hiding. He sat down and Miss Ellwood drew a chair in front as though to screen him from prying eyes, and said: "I beg a favor, and that of you personally. It is too trifling, too selfish a matter to take to your generals, busy with other cares." Such frankness was itself winning, and Andros answered: "I shall serve you if I can and do my duty."

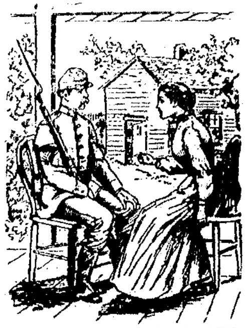
"You can be true to duty," she said. "I have a friend, a near friend, in your army whom I wish to have come here, to-night, if possible, or the next night, and, it may be, afterward."

Andros arose, nervously, but the other, not noticing his mood, continued: "There is a family secret at the bottom of this and I can go no farther now, but I can summon him through our people, if you will direct them to his camp, and let him come and go—yes, you shall come with him, if that will answer duty better."

He was all soldier now, and searching the [illegible] "In whose [illegible]

it was fully dark the old negro came shambling along again, a negro lad holding a lantern in front of him. Andros directed them to the camp of the —— Pennsylvania, and then repeated the orders to his men to allow no one to pass between the house and the army lines. There was danger in Andros' course, for he had fairly taken it on himself to guard the farm from rascally camp prowlers, and also taken risks on the exposure of army secrets by allowing intercourse of citizens with soldiers. But he believed that the woman was true and that harsh rules might be evaded in rare cases.

Some time after the camps had become quiet, the negro and the boy came across lots beyond the road, and halted at the gate for a sign to enter. Andros was hailed and he opened the gate, and the old man passed on as silent as a funeral mourner. A cunning negro knows how to be mum when something dear to him is afoot. Before midnight the sergeant, armed, and a stranger in uniform, but without a gun, stood at the door of Ellwood house. The stranger tapped softly and when the door opened he stepped in, guiding the other by a touch on the arm. There was a second door leading to an inner room, and from there an elderly lady came out to meet the callers. Miss Ellwood brought the stranger forward and he was greeted with affection and a caress. The young woman took his hand, their eyes met, and Andros said to himself: "They are lovers."



MISS ELLWOOD DREW A CHAIR IN FRONT.

The sergeant was now presented by the other soldier as "a friend," and then Miss Ellwood dropped a low bow and said, laughing: "Now it is my turn: my mother and my cousin Edward."

The same spell, the frankness and the unusual geniality of these Virginia people, told on the sergeant again and reassured him. "Edward" bore himself with reserve, mingled with tenderness. The children who had been by the roadside that day came up and greeted the new comer shyly and somewhat coldly, calling him "Uncle." The mystery in these strange relationships would have puzzled Andros not a little had he tried to unravel it. Excusing himself, he said to his companion, "I'll take post outside until you are ready." The visit lasted an hour or more. When Miss Ellwood came to the door with her visitor Andros said: "I'll keep my pledge as far as I can. Our army is moving its lines back and this house will be outside of the pickets. How far outside I do not know. May be the enemy will hold this ground and then my power will end." "Edward" was silent. Miss Ellwood said promptly, and with spirit, "I can answer that the southern soldiers will not come nearer than at present and we shall be outside the lines, unless your army circles us in."

Before they reached Andros' guard post, now the outer Union picket, "Edward" said to the other: "Comrade, our trade is soldiering, and we have no business with feelings that clash with duty. But there is a secret here we must beg of you to respect and I pledge my faith you shall not be harmed by what you do."

With a tryst for the next night they separated.

The armies settled in winter quarters, the Ellwood place between the camps and in sight of both. Andros had periodical tours of duty on the outposts, and young Seyton—for such he was in reality—found a ready ally to pass him through the pickets by night and to guard him on his risky errand. Whether that errand was one of love only or with some deeper dramatic interest, the obliging ally could not guess. He shared in many of the comforts of the family circle, and a still stronger charm for a soldier exiled from all social pleasures was the meetings with the genial southron who did the honors of hostess.

Miss Ellwood and Seyton both assumed, outwardly, that the latter held the relation of suitor, but at times the interest of the lady in the chivalrous sergeant led him to hope that he, too, had favor in her eyes. However, accident had brought him on the scene as the friend of a comrade who had prior claims, and he was content with the part he had taken. At such times the next best thing to being the hero of a romance is to stand by some good fellow who is the hero. The mystery in it all, too, piqued the sergeant's fancy; the half shut house; the long conferences between the old lady and the Pennsylvania lover—or cousin, or whatever he was—in the inner room, while Miss Ellwood kept away dullness by sprightly talk in the reception room. Occasionally Andros would think that affection was ripening in spite of all, but at the hour of parting Seyton's hand was pressed last and held longest, and glances of intense though rather sad expressiveness passed between the supposed sweethearts.

At length there came a break in these visits. "Edward" was furloughed from his company and went north. On his return some weeks later the spell that had saddened him before had vanished. He spoke no longer of mystery, and was even careless about privacy when he resumed the visits beyond the outposts, though for form's sake things went on in secret. Miss Ellwood was also changed. Her manner toward both soldier comrades was most cordial and at times she was quite gay. Andros was charmed and more than ever inclined to flatter "Edward" on his success in wooing outside the lines.

Late one night Andros, who was in charge of a picket guard, was ordered to extend his pickets before daylight to a bluff some rods beyond the house. After it was done and day was dawning he returned to the house, now in the lines, to tell the occupants of the change in orders. The faithful Patrick Henry had been doing night sentinel duty, too, and he was abroad and hailed the sergeant at the farm yard gate.

"Mawnin, sah!" he said, saluting.

"Good morning," said the other, quickly. "I wish to see Miss Ellwood, or"——

"'Scuse me, sah, dey's all done gone!"

"All!"

"Evvy single one, suah!"

"Why how comes that?" said the other, alarmed.

"D—dunno, sah, 'ceptin' de Lawd done tuk 'em."

It was now broad day and a turn of the eyes showed the puzzled soldier that the Confederate camps that had stood out boldly in sight across the fields were gone too. The negro's eyes followed the sergeant's.

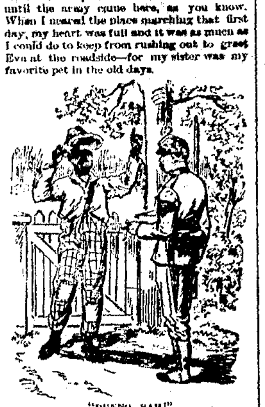
"Ah! some other people are away, I see." Andros colored with anger. Turning upon the old negro he muttered bitterly, "I suppose the Lord took them, too, eh?" and strode on to the lines. As soon as he was relieved from picket watch, Andros hastened to the camp of the —— Pennsylvania in no happy frame of mind. Seyton greeted him cordially and met his [illegible] "I have an explanation to offer." [illegible]

"But what are you to those—persons?"

"Brother and son!"

"Scoundrel! I ought to run you through! At any rate I'll have you arrested as a spy."

"First hear my story. I was born in that house, a slave holder's son. My brother, Henry Seyton, was a wild fellow, but generous, noble and true. Father died and Henry became hail fellow with the popular set of the county, greatly to the regret of my mother. My stepfather, Col. Ellwood, who was also foster uncle, was a genuine southerner, conservative and set in purpose. I went north to school, and in 1861, on reaching age, I sent a writ of manumission to the slaves I had inherited, and all but the old family hands left the place. I did not write to the folks after the war began, except to say that I had enlisted for the Union and to warn them not to know me in case fortune took me to these parts, as something might arise to question the loyalty of one born a Virginian. From Confederate prisoners I met I learned that Col. Ellwood had fallen in the war and Henry was captain in the First Virginia, a regiment raised in our county and filled with his boon companions. This is all I heard until the army came here, as you know. When I neared the place marching that first day, my heart was full and it was as much as I could do to keep from rushing out to greet Eva at the roadside—for my sister was my favorite pet in the old days.



"DUNNO, SAH!"

"When I went with you that night, as soon as the greetings were over, I learned that a third principal was in the house—Capt. Seyton, First Virginia—living in hiding under barred doors. He was a fugitive from death sentence by laws of war for a crime against my own government."

"And you dared involve me?"

"Wait! I beg. My brother would never shirk an honest doom. He was innocent and I have proved it."

"But where is he now, and they, the family?" At the last word Andros softened. He could not think harshly of Eva, and it flashed upon him that for all love goes where 'tis sent, and her feelings may have been for him what sometimes they seemed to be, tender as well as friendly. "Mother and Eva and all are away to the north, and my brother has rejoined his army, under Lee, spared from the fate that hung over him.

"It was this: You remember how, last spring, a party of Confederates dashed into our camps near Alexandria at night and seized some officers. Afterward our men overtook the assailants, finding two of their captured comrades dead and three missing, supposed to have been foully murdered. My brother led that night attack, a fair act of war, and he was put in a Union prison as hostage for the return of the missing men, and was charged with the murder of all."

Andros was in a shiver, thinking that he was surely implicated in a most detestable crime. Seyton continued:

"But my brother, on his part, had simply taken his prisoners unharmed toward his own lines—a long ride off—and on the way had been overpowered by a band of partisan rangers, notorious outlaws from the mountains. These men, always scenting plunder and living by robbery and reprisal, insisted upon stripping the helpless prisoners and holding them as hostages to buy the release of some of their own crew who were lying in Union prisons for crimes. My brother and his followers resisted this outrage in vain. In the melee two Union prisoners had been killed and the others taken away to the haunts of the rangers, my brother and some others being finally overhauled by Union troops in pursuit. War is stern. He was sentenced to death, and the verdict was sanctioned by his own government, which repudiated the murder of captives in war. ["It is not admissible in civilized warfare to take life with no other object than the destruction of life."—Decision of G. W. Randolph, Confederate secretary of war.]

"All his proof was in the hands of his enemies, the outlaws, and they were in disgrace with both governments, and to screen their own crimes would, if appealed to, swear away an honest soldier's life. By a desperate flight he escaped, swam over the broad Potomac, and was intending to reach the mountains in disguise and somehow produce the living witnesses of his innocence. He reached home and was hemmed in just as our army and his own came to the neighborhood. If seized by us he would hang; if by his own people he would be returned to a Federal prison, because, on his escape, the son of a Confederate leader had been sentenced as a hostage to die in his stead on the appointed day. The only hope was in a friend who, having aid from our government, would be protected in a visit to the mountains. Once there, by force or parley he might get the missing men. This I did while on my furlough. That leave of absence, comrade, was granted 'because of long and faithful services.' Thus armed I went to Washington, secured aid, entered the Blue Ridge fastnesses and released the men, who confirmed all. Their dead comrades fell in a common fight against the outlaws, and my brother had fought to save his prisoners. Proofs were sent to the enemy's camp, and on my last visit home I handed my brother his pardon and papers of honorable exchange, which made him free and honest."

"I see how it all could be," said Andros, thoughtfully. "But why deceive me and put me in such risk?"

"Would you have trusted me had you known how I was related outside the lines?"

"No, I would not."

"Then all would have been lost. The day of execution was near. A reprieve had spared the life of the innocent hostage standing for the principal, and had he been found by either army he would have found no mercy."

The story ended, Seyton smiled and said, "But, comrade and friend, I have here a word from one who can add to the thanks I owe you."

With this he gave a note to Andros, who opened and read: "Miss Eva Ellwood begs that Sergt. Andros will give her an opportunity to apologize in person for the breach of faith practiced outside the lines. Her home in future will be her brother's, at ——, Pa."

The old negro, Patrick Henry, followed the Union camps to be near his "master," as he persisted in calling Edward Seyton—promoted captain in his own regiment. At the end of the war the comrades, Seyton and Andros, went home together, and the romance of the outposts ended in the marriage of the sergeant—now captain—with Eva Ellwood.

Capt. Henry Seyton, the Virginian, left the disbanded Confederate army broken down in health and found an asylum with his kinsmen at the north. Now both he and his brother lie near each other in death, and Decoration day brings a garden of flowers from kindred hands to mark their graves. OF SOUTHERN ORIGIN.

Chauncey Depew's Eloquent Sketch, Decoration Day, 1879.

When the war was over, in the south, where, under warmer skies and with more poetic temperament, symbols and emblems are better understood than in the practical north, the widows, mothers and children of the Confederate dead went out and strewed their graves with flowers, and at many places the women scattered them impartially also over the unknown and unmarked resting places of the Union soldiers. As the news of this touching tribute flashed over the north it roused, as nothing else could have done, national amity and love and allayed sectional animosity and passion. It thrilled every household where there was a vacant chair by the fireside and an aching void in the heart for a lost hero whose remains had never been found, old wounds broke out afresh, and in a mingled tempest of grief and joy the family cried, "May be it was our darling." Thus out of sorrows common alike to the north and south came this beautiful custom. But Decoration day no longer belongs to those who mourn. It is the common privilege of us all, and will be celebrated as long as gratitude exists and flowers bloom.

"Benny Havens, Oh!"

[West Point's latest addition to her historic song.]

The summer wind sighs softly through
  Atlanta's lovely vale,
A fragrant hymn of requiem,
  McPherson to bewail;
O'er Thomas on Mount Ida's slope
  Sweet roses incense throw;
Deep in our hearts are both enshrined
  With Benny Havens, oh!

Pour forth a full libation now
  To Farragut the brave,
The idol of the navy and
  The ruler of the wave.
He's gone aloft, lashed in his shroud,
  Where soon we all must go;
He's waiting there to welcome us,
  With Benny Havens, oh!

At Burnside's bier we drop a tear
  For soldiers sunk to rest;
A mighty soul has reached its goal,
  'Neath Hooker's honored crest—
In martial lays we'll sing the praise
  Of trusty fighting Joe,
Until the day we serve for aye
  With Benny Havens, oh!

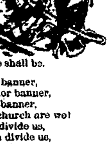
For our noble old commanders
  We crush a cup of wine
To sprinkle on the laurels bright
  That round their deeds entwine;
To McClellan, Burnside, Hooker,
  Let bumpers overflow,
May they live long to sing the song
  Of Benny Havens, oh!

A Veteran's Little Joke.

Our regiment (Twenty-fifth Indiana) having re-enlisted after enjoying their veteran furlough at home, were ordered to Decatur, Ala., where we were joined by the detachment of boys who did not re-enlist, and who are distinguished from the veterans by the name of "rounders." Soon after one of the men was brought before the colonel for some misdemeanor. The colonel, who, by the way, is noted for his ready means of disposing of such offenders, asked him if he was a rounder. The offender answered in the negative. "Then," said the colonel, "I will make you one. Just walk round that stump about two hours."—Told at a camp fire by an unknown.

Grand Army Emblems.

Comrades known in marches many,
Comrades tried in dangers many,
Comrades bound by memories many,
    Brothers ever let us be!
Wounds or sickness may divide us,
Marching orders may divide us,
But whatever fate betide us,
    Brothers of the heart are we.



Comrades known by faith the clearest,
Tried when death was near and nearest,
Bound we are by ties the dearest,
    Brothers ever more to be.
And if spared, and growing older,
Shoulder still in line with shoulder,
And with hearts no thrill the colder,
    Brothers ever we shall be.

By communion of the banner,
Battle scarred but victor banner,
By the baptism of the banner,
    Brothers of one church are we!
Creed nor faction can divide us,
Race nor language can divide us,
Still, whatever fate betide us,
    Children of the flag are we!

A SPECIFIC FOR MALARIA, RHEUMATISM NERVOUS PROSTRATION.
THE MOST SCIENTIFIC AND SUCCESSFUL BLOOD PURIFIER. Superior to quinine.
Mr. Dode Hoorhbeck, of the U. S. Ship Kearsarge, writes that he meets people almost daily who have used or are using Kaskine, and who affirm from experience that it is superior to quinine in tonic and curative properties, and produces no subsequent bad effects.
Mr. John C. Scarbororugh, Selma, N. C., writes: "I got malaria in the Southern army, and for a dozen years suffered from its debilitating effects. I was terribly run down when I heard of Kaskine, the new quinine. It helped me at once. I gained 35 pounds.
Kaskine can be taken without any special medical advice. $1.00 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Sold by druggists or sent by mail on receipt of price.

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

JAS. R. FAIRGRIEVE, Editor.

I can't help telling the Truth as I view it and describing what I see. To describe it otherwise than it seems to me would be falsehood in that calling in which it h is pleased Heaven to place me.

THE Rev. Thomas Dixon of New York thinks hell is a necessity. "Well," remarks the Albany Express, "it is certainly not a luxury."

THE LATE DR. DIO LEWIS, over his own signature, in speaking of Warner's Safe Cure said: "I am satisfied the medicine is not injurious, and will frankly add that if I found myself a victim of serious kidney trouble, I would use the preparation."

A BANQUET was given at the Fifth Avenue hotel by the Young Men's Democratic Club of New York City to Ex President Cleveland, Monday evening. It is reported that the enthusiasm evoked by the presence of Mr. Cleveland was unbounded. Many distinguished Democrats were present including Gov. Hill.

HENRY W. SAGE intends to give $300,000 to Cornell university for a library. If the university loses the $1,500,000 involved in the pending McGraw-Fiske litigation, Mr. Sage will also give $200,000 for the library building. This will make his total gifts to the institution about $1,000,000. Cornell already heavily endowed is in luck again.

"THE DISEASE proceeds silently amid apparent health." That is what Wm. Roberts, M. D., Physician to the Manchester Infirmary and Lunatic Hospital, Professor in the University College, says in regard to Bright's Disease. Is it necessary to give any further warning? If not use Warner's Safe Cure before your kidney malady becomes too far advanced.

The Largest Building Ever Constructed.

A Paris letter to the Associated Press states that the machinery palace of the exposition is the largest building ever constructed under a single roof. It is 1,400 feet long, 370 wide and 170 feet high. The roof has no interior support except 20 great arches. The American machinery exhibit occupies one-third of the entire space in this building and is in all respects but one more imposing than the exhibit at any previous exhibition. The exception is in agricultural machinery, in which we do not show as much progress as in other lines. The European nations have been overtaking us in the production of our own machines. There are 500 exhibitors of electrical apparatus. Edison's exhibit is the largest single one in the exposition. It presents his entire category of inventions, numbering 493.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Francis Hugunin Parsons died at Brockville, Ont., on Tuesday, May 21, 1889, at the age of 72 years. She had been a great sufferer for some time from a cancer. A short time since it was decided that her only hope was to have the cancer removed by a surgical operation. It was performed and she did not recover.

Mrs. Parsons was born in Fulton in 1817, where she lived, highly respected by all who knew her, until 12 years ago when she removed to Canada.

Her remains were brought here on Thursday last and funeral services conducted by Rev. B. Brunning were held from the home of John Boardman on Second street, Friday forenoon. The deceased was a sister of Abram Hugunin of Oswego Falls, two sisters, Mrs. Dodge of Syracuse, and Miss Huguinin of Buffalo and her only daughter, Mrs. Mohan of Brockville, Ont., attended the funeral.

[The following lines were written by H. Lester of this village nearly twenty-five years ago and are particularly appropriate at this season of the year when our thoughts turn to the honored dead.]

Friend of my youthful days!
  And art thou pass'd away,
Is that bright smile that cheer'd me with its rays
  Now dimm'd for aye?
Is that warm hand which erst 'twas mine to clasp
Now seized by death's inexorable grasp,
Have those loved lips been open'd in thy grasp,
Thou grim restorer of earth-borrow'd clay?

Comrade, when thoughtless boys!
  And is thy pulse now cold?
Are death's dark waves, submerging all earth's joys
  Now o'er thee roll'd?
Is thy great soul from earthly thralls unbound?
Has thy freed spirit gone where joys are found
Of holier source—of depths still more profound
Than those which have thy mortal life controll'd?

And is it ours to weep?
  To mourn thee gone from here?
To murmur, while unrestfully we sleep,
  Of memories dear?
To bathe with tears the hallow'd shrine
Where we our cherish'd hopes resign;
To clasp in love the hand divine
That deals the blow severe?

Yes, noble soul, thou'rt gone!
  Thine earthly joys are past;
The dreaded bound, which mortals one by one
  Step o'er while earth shall last,
Has been by thee in confidence o'er stepped.
Thy country's covenant full well thou't kept:
Joy'd in her joy and at her weepings wept;
Now in her scale a Patriot's life hast cast.

Well may thy parents weep—
  Their hearts with anguish torn,
As word of thee, in thine unwaking sleep,
  To them is borne,
When I, a simple friend of thine,
Am prompted, on receipt of mine,
To pour my grief upon the shrine
Where all, who knowing loved thee, come to mourn.

O God! Thy creatures cry!
  (And shall it be in vain!)
That on our altars soon may cease to lie
  The victims slain!
May groveling man's ambition cease,
And every land be bless'd with peace,—
Grant us O, Lord! from tears and blood release
And may thy love on earth triumphant reign!

Author of life—of love!
  In justice thou dost deal;—
Direct our hopes to thy bright realms above
  For all our weal!
Give us we pray, the strength to bear our woes;
Mingle with love the terror of thy blows!
Teach smitten mortals, while in anguish throes,
Thy spirit's calm to feel!

Each burst of contrite grief,
  Beneath the chastening rod,
Gives to the soul a blest relief,
  And brings it nearer God!
Each tearful hour that here we spend;
Each pang that doth the heart strings rend:
Each anguished cry to Heaven we send,
Prepares for us the road!

Father! Thy will be done
  As 'tis in heaven; by men;
Give us, we pray, the spirit of Thy son,
  Promulgate then
Throughout the world thy blessed word, whose truth
Guides to the narrow path the steps of youth,
And age's hoary locks commends to truth,
And may thy creatures gladly cry—Amen!

After Water Works.

Baldwinsville is being agitated over the question of water works. B. C. Brown proprietor of the furniture store in THE TIMES block has the following to say through the columns of the Baldwinsville Gazette:

FULTON, N. Y., May 21, 1889.

Editor Gazette and Farmers' Journal:

Noticing that the question of water is again under discussion, and being one among the many who were originally opposed to a system of water works, I write to say that a year's residence in a village that is abundantly supplied with pure, wholesome water, both for fire protection and domestic uses, has fully convinced me that my position some two years ago on the water question was a wrong one. No one, I think, who has fully investigated and lived in a place where the conveniences and benefits of a water system are to be had would ever oppose a system of water works. Insurance rates are lower here than in Baldwinsville for this reason alone. The water works in this village are owned by a private company, a considerable amount of the stock being owned in town, I think. This village pays annually for fire protection about two thousand dollars ($2,000) for forty hydrants at $50 each. (We still have our steamers, though they are not used.) And twice within the past two weeks this system alone has saved five times that amount of property, which would undoubtedly have been destroyed or badly damaged had it been necessary to have waited for steamers. There can be no question but that the system here is a good thing, and is well thought of. So far as I know it is giving universal satisfaction, and its patrons are daily on the increase. I understand that the system here cost in the neighborhood of $75,000 for Fulton and Oswego Falls, which represents an area of twice as much as would be required for Baldwinsville. As a small taxpayer in Baldwinsville I am in favor of a system of water works. People here are taxed by general tax for fire protection; but as to water for domestic use people take it and pay for it, or leave it alone. Water for a private residence here cost $5 a year, and we have all we care for and a good pressure. It would seem that such a system under public ownership could be made nearly, if not quite, self-sustaining.

Yours truly,
B. C. BROWN.

Give Him $2 and Let Him Guess.

We once heard a man complain of feeling badly, and wondered what ailed him. A humorous friend said, "Give a doctor $2 and let him guess." It was a cutting satire on some doctors, who don't always guess right. You need not guess what ails you when your bowels and stomach are inactive, and when your head digest, and when your head aches every day, and you are languid and easily fatigued. You are bilious, and Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets will bring you out all right, Small, sugar-coated, easy to take. Of druggists.

PROPOSALS FOR BONDS.

Proposals will be received by the Board of Education of Union Free School, district No. 1 in the Town of Volney, County of Oswego, State of New York, at the First National Bank of Fulton, N. Y., until 3 o'clock p. m., Monday, June 3, 1889, to loan to the above named School District the sum of Eight Thousand Dollars on bonds of said district, payable in installments of two thousand dollars each, on the first day of November, in the years 1889, 1890, 1891 and 1892, with interest payable on the first day of May and the first day of November at the rate of three and one-half per cent. per annum.

Bonds will be dated on day of delivery and will be ready for such delivery upon acceptance of proposal.

Principal and interest will be made payable at such place in Albany or New York as the successful bidder may elect.

The Board reserves the right to reject any or all proposals.

Dated Fulton, N. Y., May 23, 1889.

[illegible],
Clerk of the Board of Education.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, May 24, 1889.

When it was announced with all certainty a week ago that the President had agreed upon the selection of Attorney-General Miller for the vacancy upon the Supreme bench, the other candidates decorously withdrew, with as little bitterness as possible. But it appears that after the unlucky President thought he had made up his mind he woke up to a realization of the fact that it was not actually and finally made up. Thinking it over again, it strikes him that the elevation of Attorney-General Miller would look too much like the result of a deal, made before inauguration by which Mr. Miller was to get the first vacancy in the supreme court and make room in the cabinet for whoever could be decided upon as the most available man.

Except Mr. Clarkson, (present assistant Postmaster-General,) no man is particularly urged for cabinet honors. On the other hand the presence of his old friend and law partner in his cabinet is an anchor to the President. He knows that in his loyalty, at least, there is no guile. Mr. Miller himself says nothing about his chances; He simply yearns in silence for an assistant justiceship.

Looking away from Mr. Miller and not finding the New York delegation as hot after the place as it usually is after all places, Mr. Harrison's eye naturally rests next on Indiana. And there he finds a candidate in the person of Judge Woods, of the Federal court. Judge Wood's reputation ends with the borders of his state, as Chief Justice Fuller's fame was limited to the lower courts in Chicago before his selection. But Judge Woods is nevertheless an able man and has done wonders for the party in his state. His elevation is most important of all, more desired by representative men than that of Mr. Miller would be.

If Mr. Miller nevertheless succeeds in obtaining the coveted honor, Secretary Noble will probably be transferred to the Department of Justice, where his recognized legal ability and careful attention to detail would earn him full mead of fame. In the Interior department, with its hodgepodge collection of bureaus that bear no possible relation one to the other, there is no harmony and too much work. It is a department that demands the services of an experienced business man and politician and a man who has been a long time in national public life. Such a man unfortunately Mr. Noble is not. Such a man Mr. Clarkson, the present Assistant Postmaster-General is, and his elevation to the Secretaryship of the Interior would be pleasing to his party.

You don't see so many of the ideal Texas gentleman as you did a score of years ago. Last week I saw one of these gentleman come in to see Postmaster-General Wanamaker. His wide soft hat was in his hand, his long hair and moustache and imperial were black as night, on his wide expanse of shirt front a big cluster diamond pin rested. His carriage was graceful and his address smooth and convincing. He only wanted to tell Mr. Wanamaker why the Postmaster at his town should be removed at once and a Republican friend of his appointed.

"But I have promised Rev. Mr. Blank, of your place, that the present incumbent shall be retained."

The Texan looked faint. "What has that sky pilot got to do with it?" he asked.

The Secretary was shocked, and proceeded to tell his visitor that "sky pilot" was an offensive and improper term to employ and wound up with an exhaustive lecture on the importance of preachers in politics. The disgust in the Texan's face grew deeper and deeper, but he said nothing. He had wilted. The spirit that forty fights had not vanquished, oozed out at his finger ends. When he rejoined a party of waiting Lone Star friends in the corridor, he could only tell them brokenly his tale of woe. A look of horrified astonishment come over their faces. And as he concluded there burst frorth the wildest tirade of swearing I ever heard, although I knew old Zach Chandler and have listened to teamsters talking to the mules in the wilderness. They first implored the various powers of the air to ostracize them from society, then they called upon the several powers of the earth to afflict Mr. Wanamaker, and they concluded after many other ceremonies in condensing the various portions of their bodies. Having thus performed their rites, they departed to a saloon.

[illegible] it occasions very [illegible] and [illegible] few liable to be neglected. [illegible] catarrh. Flowing from the nostrils is common [illegible] and watery eyes, irritates the nose, causes sneezing, and finally the coughing up and expectoration of offensive matter. These droppings will sometimes collect so rapidly as nearly to choke the person. Unless promptly treated catarrh lasts for years, producing dreadful results. The ordinary symptoms are pain in the eyes; a dull, heavy headache; obstruction of the nasal passages; discharges falling into the throat, and a moist, offensive breath. On the first sign of its appearance Dr. Brown's Sarsaparilla should be taken to purify the blood, for catarrh is a blood disease. In chronic cases an immediate cure must not be expected but this great regulator of the blood will, if its use be continued, afford speedy relief and final cure. Hay fever or cold in the head, a disease of summer chiefly, has similar symptoms and is cured by this remedy in the same way. It is important to remember that catarrh being neglected, or not arrested, gradually creeps down into the windpipe and lungs, and may end in incurable consumption. You may easily and cheaply prevent this terrible calamity by the use of

Brown's Sarsaparilla.

The pleasant community about Hopkinsville was "all tore up" as the people said. They really said "tuh' up," but this is a true sketch and not a dialect story.

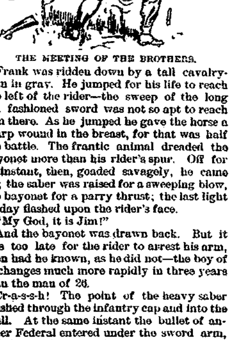
Most of the people spoke of their state as "Kaintucky," and it was "all tore up" too. Indeed Hopkinsville and vicinity was only a type of nearly all others in the state, for war had come almost with the suddenness of lightning from a clear sky, and the people's sympathies were sadly divided. Old residents of the state can now afford to indulge a smile at recollection of the childlike confidence with which the people had gone through that dark and ominous winter; they were, with exceptions of course, as positive that Crittenden would get a compromise adopted and the trouble pass without a fight as the average small boy is that his "pap will fix things right." So when the slow moving mail of those days brought the news that Sumter had been captured and 75,000 troops were called for, there was a commotion such as that region had not known since the last "Injuns" were chased across the Tennessee.

As acid and alkali fall apart when the chemical reagent is applied, so the people fell at once into hostile groups. There was a brief attempt at neutrality, then a final division, and oh, how painful—the son in the ranks of the Confederacy while the father adhered to the Union.

In the Barrett family there was even more than the usual painful commotion. Jim, the big, dashing, chivalrous older brother, "sympathized with the south," the father, trained in the school of Henry Clay and conservative by age, adhered to the old flag, while the women—grieving, loving, but ardent in their feelings—tried to feel that the father was right, but secretly all the warmth of their souls was excited for the one who "went south." Such family conflicts did not last long. There was one painful, protracted interview, after it a few exchanges of short, sharp phrases, ending with hot denunciation by the father, and then Jim was gone, and with him as many of the irresolute neighbor boys as he could influence. A few days later he and his squad were enrolled in the cavalry of the "C. S. A."

"Thank God, Frank is too young to be in it, and it will all be over before he is big enough," said the fond mother. But she knew Frank as little as the average mother usually knows a son who is away from home for a year at the eventful age of sixteen. A student in the famed Asbury (now De Pauw) university, Frank had been absorbing all the atmosphere of his environment, as Herbert Spencer would say, "all the abolition pizen in Indiany," some of his old neighbors would say. The events of April and May, 1861, set his soul on fire; he was wildly, enthusiastically eager to fight for the Union. Like many thousand boys of that age at that particular time he was sorry it would all be over before he was old enough to enlist. They all had a chance; most men had a chance before it ended, though the zeal of many was modified towards the last. Frank reluctantly promised his mother to stay in college, but in mid-summer his home was in the Confederate lines and all such promises were held to be void. Before frost fell he was with Shackelford and Bristow, learning the duties of a private soldier in the grand army for the Union.

Three years and a half had passed since Jim Barrett made his choice, and the dreadful days of Franklin and Nashville had come. The Confederacy was making its last advance, and a desperate one it was. The sun was going down on the first of those murderous battles in Hood's advance, and the dispatch had already gone north: "The Union lines are broken." The sadly thinned ranks of Frank Barrett's regiment were among the last to leave the field—a little too late, as the Confederate cavalry came galloping over and through them. Then, for a brief minute or two, it was man to man; the pistol of the one was empty and so was the gun of the other; it was bayonet against saber.



THE MEETING OF THE BROTHERS.

Frank was ridden down by a tall cavalryman in gray. He jumped for his life to reach the left of the rider—the sweep of the long old fashioned sword was not so apt to reach him there. As he jumped he gave the horse a sharp wound in the breast, for that was half the battle. The frantic animal dreaded the bayonet more than his rider's spur. Off for an instant, then, goaded savagely, he came on; the saber was raised for a sweeping blow, the bayonet for a parry thrust; the last light of day flashed upon the rider's face.

"My God, it is Jim!"

And the bayonet was drawn back. But it was too late for the rider to arrest his arm, even had he known, as he did not—the boy of 16 changes much more rapidly in three years than the man of 26.

Cr-a-s-s-h! The point of the heavy saber crushed through the infantry cap and into the skull. At the same instant the bullet of another Federal entered under the sword arm, and the brothers sank lifeless into a heap together, soon to be drenched in common blood.

No, not quite lifeless. They lingered weary months in the same hospital, renewed the feelings of happier days while languishing on adjacent cots, and in early May, 1865, when all was over, two war worn veterans together sought the old Barrett farm house—the one to be richly paid, handsomely pensioned and held in yearly increasing honor among the victors; the other with only wounds and glory for his pay. It is the old, old story of the survivors of civil war.

In the cemetery of the now flourishing city of Hopkinsville stands an imposing marble shaft in honor of the Confederate dead who lie there. Federal and Confederate soldiers joined in the dedication of it; men of all political parties contributed to its erection, and ministers of all denominations blessed the work—for all the bitterness of the past is gone, and over all the land is a deep and abiding peace. In the old neighborhood live two steady going farmers, familiarly known as "the Barretts," who are Uncle Frank and Uncle James to two families of young people. Little ones gather about them as they sit by the hearth on winter evenings and ask them to "tell a story about the war;" they, and all their fellows, talk of it with all the freedom that Englishmen would use in speaking of the Wars of the Roses, and with not a thousandth part of the bitterness Irishmen feel over the rout at the Boyne.

Cheese Market Reports.

[From the Utica Herald.]

AT UTICA.

UTICA, May 27.

Factorymen were rather disappointed at another ⅛c. decline in the cheese market to-day, but none were inclined to hold over. Fodder cheese was well disposed of, and in many cases a sprinkling of grass stock was mixed with it. Cows are now nearly in the flush of milk, and the cool weather of the past few days has actually caused a shrinkage. Of course the yield will come up again with warmer weather, but it will not much exceed the yield of last week. The excess of sales this week over those of last year arises from the fact the season is one week in advance of last year. After this, there will not be so much difference. It was claimed that more cheese was sold at 8¼c than appear in our quotations, but such a claim was not substantiated by the figures given in. Buyers predict a lower market in New York the last of this week. Following are the transactoins:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
2	140	7⅛
5	488	7¾
66	5,544	7⅞
18	1,331	8c
27	1,946	8⅛
6	490	8¼
1	70	8⅜
125	9,970
	1,865	Com.
Total.	11,835

Ruling price 7⅞c. Transactions one year ago, 8,850 boxes; ruling price 8⅝c. Two years ago, 7,731 boxes, ruling price 9¾c.

There were sales of 103 packages creamery butter at 16½c. to 20c. The bulk went at 17½c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, May. 27.

Cheese—The market is flush one-fourth cent below last week's rates. This is not disappointing to many, for as to-day's shipments take about all of the fodder cheese, and fine grass stock will be in market next week, it was generally expected that a further shading in price would be made to-day. The home trade showed rather more life than the shipping interest, and both claimed that 8c. should have been the extreme price of the day. Colored and white cheese are on a par as to demand and price. The increase in production is not marked, as will be seen by comparing sales from week to week. The total transactions are:

Lots	Boxes	Price
1	74	7½
6	103	7¾
35	1,937	8
23	1,248	8⅛
18	591	Com.
83	3,953
Farm dairy	596
Total	4,549

Farm Dairies—The sales of farm cheese amount to 596 boxes at 7½ to 8⅛c. But few sold above 8c., which was the bulk price. Four lots brought 8¼c.

Butter—The butter market does not show much improvement here. Forty-eight packages of creamery sold at 17 to 18c., nearly all at 17c. There were twenty-one packages of farm daily sold at 17 to 18c.

AT FULTON.

Some twenty factories were represented here on Monday evening with 1,496 boxes of cheese, which sold at from 7¾ to 8 cents.

About 10 p. m., on Saturday, judging from the vigorous amount of squealing done. There was the big pig, the fat pig, the little pig and the lean pig all broke loose from the pen at once and got stuck under the gate.

They sung their several little songs in the Sunday papers. In the meanwhile our $3.00 and $10.00 All Wool Suits are boomers.

"Had Been Worried Eighteen Years"

It should have read "married," but the proof-reader observed that it amounted to about the same thing, and so did not draw his blue pencil through the error. Unfortunately there was considerable truth in his observation. Thousands of husbands are constantly worried almost to despair by the ill health that affects their wives, and often robs life of comfort and happiness. There is but one safe and sure way to change all this for the better. The ladies should use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Come quickly! At the prices we are selling we ought to sell our stock entire within the next four weeks, C. R. NICHOLS.

At the Pathfinders' Island.

Cold and disagreeable weather caused a postponment of the Pathfinder Boat Club's basket picnic from Thursday to Friday. The latter day opened even more unfavorably than the preceding one and many gave up the idea of going down to the island. By noon however it had cleared up and about 150 went down and enjoyed themselves.

Swings and hammocks were hung, Base ball was played and glass ball shooting indulged in by many that enjoyed this sport. Among those that participated in the glass ball shooting were Dr. I. C. Curtis, Harry Youmans, N. Johnson, Dr. J. Watson and Fred Keeler. In a little competition match Dr. Curtis carried off first honor.

In the scrub sailing race Fred Darrow, W. J. Watson, W. C. Tucker, William Royce and Fred Sutherland entered and they finished in the order named. The course was from Pathfinder island down around Frenchman's island. The wind was very light. Darrow's time was 48 minutes. Everyone was of the opinion that the island was the place to enjoy a pleasant day and that the Pathfinder Boat Club was a grand organization.

The Methodist Protestant Chapel.

The little chapel on Broadway as the readers of THE TIMES are aware was constructed under the auspices of the Free Baptist society and the officers of the local organization expected to receive in future as they had in the past financial assistance from that source which amounted to about $20 per month.

The Free Baptists are building a college at Penn Yan we are informed and finding it necessary to curtail expences cut off their patronage to the organization here.

Some three weeks since it was decided to make it a Methodist Protestant chapel and for the past two Sundays the pulpit in the new chapel has been filled by Rev. Mr. Newcomb the M. P. minister of Palermo. Next Sunday at 2 p. m. the chapel will be dedicated under the new auspices and Rev. Nathan Swift will preach the dedicatory sermon. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend, The trustees are I. A. Markland, Z. Newell and G. H. Brooks.

Pleasant Beach of which Alfred E. Aldridge of Syracuse is now sole owner will shortly be opened for the season. The large and commodious hotel commanding an elegant view of the lake, nearly fifty feet above the water, is completed. It is under an experienced Chef and is first class in every respect. A good orchestra of seven pieces will furnish music for dancing both day and night throughout the season. Roller coasting, ball grounds, bowling alley, fishing, rowing, sailing and bathing can all be enjoyed. Over 1000 rustic chairs ornament the grove and there are lunch tables for picnic parties. It is a most excellent place to go.

Their New Store.

More room and more lights is the cry of the pregressive business man. The rapidly increasing business of Peebles & Co. the prosperous and extensive clothing dealers has brought them in line with the spirit of growth and advancement. Accordingly they have secured a store which will rank among the largest and best lighted in the town, it is located in the Lewis House Block. The new store will afford every facility for the proper display of Peebles & Co's great assortment of goods, and the customers will be able to examine to their satisfaction every fibre of the article of clothing they propose to purchase. This removal into better quarters is the best evidence yet of the firm's enterprise. They will be ready for business at the new stand Saturday, June 1st with an almost entirely new and varied stock of clothing and furnishing goods.

Flowers for Memorial Day.

The condition of Hon. N. W. Nutting is not favorable according to the Oswego Times. He is very weak and unable to be interviewed on any business matters. It however states that his mind is clear and he is able to attend to all his correspondence. While he is very ill and his face and jaw in a very serious condition his friends still have strong hopes of his ultimate recovery. The disease thus far seems confined to the right side of the jaw and face and his family and friends are impressed with the belief that there is at least reasonable ground to hope that it can be confined to its present stage of development.

Free Summer School for Teachers of the First Commissioner's District.

Teachers and those desiring to teach are awakening to the importance of some special preparation for their work. In view of what seems a general sentiment on the part of the teachers of several schools of the first commissioner's district of Oswego county, it has been decided to hold a school in Fulton the first two weeks in August (August 5th to 16th inclusive,) for special work in methods of teaching reading, geography, grammar and physiology, and for the discussion of any topics which may be of special interest to the teachers. Regular school hours will be from 9 a. m. to one p. m. and members of the school will be expected to devote two hours each day outside of school to any work which may be assigned them. The main instruction will be given by home workers, but arrangements have already been made for work by competent instructors from abroad. The tuition will be free to all teachers of this district but none need apply who are not willing to devote their time and energy to the work.

The number will necessarily be limited and those applying first for registration will be considered to have the first claim. Address all applications to W. A. Baldwin,
Volney, N. Y.

Sandy Creek Gas Well.

SANDY CREEK, May 24.—The flow of gas continues unabated. The drillers are hardly able to continue drilling, as the gas blows so strong that it is almost impossible to get sufficient water into the well for drilling purposes. Every time the drill is hoisted, there is a perfect shower of stone, mud and water. Last evening the company piped the gas outside a little and lit it, the flames extending in great massive sheets from thirty to fifty feet from the end of the piping. By the light, a newspaper was easily read one thousand feet distant. The expert drillers express great surprise at having struck such a large vein of gas in this section but are now very sanguine that it is a permanent supply, as the flow has continued unabated for over thirty-six hours. Considering the fact that the gas has flowed in quite large quantities since the second of last February, together with the new supply, this fact renders the well very valuable. The people are highly elated over the good fortune.—Cor. Utica Herald.

Memorial Day

The program as published in THE TIMES last week will be carried out to-morrow. The exercises at the opera house will occur at 2 p. m. After which Post Schenck, headed by the Fulton Band will proceed to the cemetery and decorate the soldiers' graves. The dry goods and the boot and shoe stores have reported to us that they will close at 11 a. m. and not open again during the day. Other stores will probably do the same. The following resolutions were adopted by Post Schenck last evening.

At a regular meeting of Schenck Post held in their rooms May 28th, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, Memorial Day, as the years go by is being more and more given up to ball games, boat racing, picnics and other pastmies, totally foreign to the purposes for which it was intended and set aside. Therefore be it

Resolved, We, members of Schenck Post No. 271, Dept. N. Y., G. A. R., do most earnestly and respectfully ask that Memorial Day be used only for the purposes for which it was intended and set apart—to honor and cherish the memory of our noble dead.

The Postoffice Shortage.

There is no disputing the fact that considerable excitement has prevailed during the past few days concerning the shortage in Postmaster Whitaker's accounts, but very little money is involved and it has all been made good by his bondsmen, Michael Edick, Willard Johnson, Dr. C. G. Bacon, W. G. Gage, R. E. Phillips, H. E. Nichols, L. C. Seymour and Reuben Bradshaw.

The postmaster's name is telegraphed over the country as a defaulter in the sum of $900 but in the common acceptance of the term "defaulter" poeple in this vicinity who know Mr. Whitaker hardly like to have it appear under that appellation.

True, Mr. Whitaker has failed to account for some public money intrusted to his care, but his case is a peculiar one, and we have every reason to believe that he is free from any dishonest intent.

Entering upon his duties as postmaster in 1886, in debt, he met some of his pressing obligations. As time wore on he must have suddenly realized that he had far overdrawn his account, but considered that he could eventually repay what he considered borrowed from Government funds in his hands. But the time came as it generally does in such cases, when it was necessary for him to meet at once more than he could conveniently borrow. He went to Mr. F. E. Bacon and attempted to negotiate a loan of $200. Before he finished with Mr. Bacon he had revealed to him his plight. It was decided by the two that a course of action would be followed by which Mr. Whitaker would be able to pay up his indebtedness before his term of office as postmaster expired. The loan of $200 was made by Mr. Bacon taking a chattel mortgage upon office furniture, etc., belonging to Mr. Whitaker.

A meeting of the bondsmen was next held. At which it was figured out that if Mr. Whitaker were not removed before his term of office expired next Feburary he would be able to meet the amount which he had overdrawn. It was resolved to maintain secrecy in the matter by those present. The facts however became known to Congressman Nutting who transmitted them to Washington and on Saturday Inspector C. L. Morris in the department service came to Fulton. He called at the post office while Mr. Whitaker was at supper and made an engagement with deputy postmaster Morton to meet him at the Lewis House that evening. At this meeting Mr. Morton of necessity had to admit his knowledge of the deficit and loaded with an affidavit to that effect Mr. Morris drove to Mr. Nutting's at Oswego.

The cash payment and the amount due the postmaster from the department up to date reduces his shortage to about $450.

There is no question but the above facts will result in the removal of Mr. Whitaker and the appointment of a successor at once, which will in all probability be Editor Bennett of the Patriot. Until Congress again convenes to confirm the nomination of such a successor possibly deputy postmaster Morton will be called upon to act by the department.

Sympathy for Mr. Whitaker in this unfortunate affair is universal and ready hands are extended to help him from the mesh in which he now is.

WORTH KNOWING.

Feed the young chicks often but not too plentifully.

Give good feed and extra care to the horses that are at farm work.

The drinking vessels for fowls should be often refilled and kept clean. Hens drink little at a time, but often.

Hard, dry paths tend to comfort outside the house and cleanliness within.

Some observers tell us that the much abused crow is also one of the best aids in exterminating the white grub.

Care should be taken to supply every animal kept on the place with all the water it needs.

Transplant the tomato plant with care, keeping a good solid ball of earth on the roots till reset.

The same food, without variation, should not be given to poultry for any considerable length of time.

A steady-going business horse does not cost any more to keep than a nervous one much lighter.

The wise horseman will save some bright clover hay for the mare and little foal.

Give the horse some bran in the oats. It will repair the muscle and open the bowels, and cool the blood.

Where cows must be driven long distances to and from pasture, see that it is done gently and leisurely.

A well-known writer maintains that contrary to the popular notion, darkness is not essential in growing mushrooms.

Colman's Rural World condenses the following good suggestions: If timothy hay is fed give the mare a quart of linseed meal.

Examine young fruit trees of all kinds, and if borings or sawdust are seen on the ground hunt for the hole and probe out the grub with a piece of wire, advises American Agriculturist.

Oats and bran are the most suitable foods for the mare. Do not feed corn or rye.

A prominent horticulturist expresses his belief that the Wealthy apple topgrafted upon the Switzer will be a perfect and longlived tree, serving more than one generation faithfully.

An experienced horseman recommends that when purchasing a horse the buyer should have it tried on hard ground—trotted out on a paved road if possible. If there is anything the matter with his feet this will cause the horse to show it.

The horse used for draft purposes furnishes the motive power to supply almost all human wants. He plows the fields of the world and carries the crops of the world to market. The product of farm, factory, workshop and mines are moved by horse power and without this, man's most faithful friend, the wheels of commerce would stop.—The Western Farmer.

THE AGE OF PAPER.

A Wonderful Era Coming When Dishes Will Need No Washing.

The world has seen its iron age, its stone age, its golden age and its brazen age. This is the age of paper. We are making so many things of paper that it will soon be true that without paper there is nothing made that is made. We live in paper houses, wear paper clothing and sit on paper cushions in paper cars, rolling on paper wheels. We do a paper business over paper counters, buying paper goods, paying for them with paper money or charging them up in paper books, and deal in paper stocks on paper margins. We row races in paper boats for paper prizes. We go to paper theatres, where paper actors play to paper audiences. We elect paper men with paper votes on a paper issue to represent a paper constituency in a paper Congress and make paper laws.

As the age develops the coming man will become more deeply enmeshed in the paper net. He will awake in the morning and creep from under the paper clothing on his paper bed, and put on his paper dressing-gown and paper slippers. He will walk over paper carpets down paper stairs, and seating himself in a paper chair will read the paper news in the morning paper. A paper bell will call him to breakfast, cooked in a paper oven, served on paper dishes, laid on a paper cloth on a paper table. He will wipe his lips on a paper napkin, and having put on his paper shoes, paper hat and paper coat, and taken his paper cane he will walk on a paper pavement or ride in a paper carriage to his paper office. He will organize paper enterprises and make paper profits. He will go to Europe on paper steamships and navigate the air in paper balloons. He will smoke paper tobacco in a paper pipe lighted with a paper match. He will write with a paper pencil, whittle paper sticks with a paper knife, go fishing with a paper fishing rod, a paper line and a paper hook, and put his catch in a paper basket. He will go shooting with a paper gun loaded with paper cartriges, and will defend his country in paper forts with paper cannon and paper bombs.

Having lived his paper life and achieved a paper fame and paper wealth, he will retire to paper leisure and die in paper peace. There will be a paper funeral, at which the mourners, dressed in paper crape, will wipe their eyes with paper handkerchiefs, and a paper preacher will preach a paper sermon in a paper pulpit from a paper text. He will lie in a paper coffin wrapped in a paper shroud, his name will be engraved on a paper plate, and a paper hearse, adorned with paper plumes, will carry him to a paper-lined grave, over which will be raised a paper monument. The papers will record his paper virtues, while paper angels with paper wings will cloth him in a paper robe and waft his paper spirit from this paper world to the paper gates of a paper paradise, where all is paper, and fire-proof at that.—Paper World.

"EDITOR'S BACK STAIRS."

The Interesting Views of the Late Dr. J. G. Holland.

The columns of the newspapers appear to be flooded with proprietary medicine advertisements. As we cast our eye over them, it brings to mind an article that was published by the late Dr. Holland in Scribner's Monthly. He says: "Nevertheless, it is a fact that many of the best proprietary medicines of the day were more successful than many physicians, and most of them it should be remembered, were at first discovered or used in actual medical practice. When, however, any shrewd person, knowing their virtue, and foreseeing their popularity, secures and advertises them, then in the opinion of the bigoted, all virtue went out of them."

Is not this absurd?

This great man appreciated the real merits of popular remedies, and the absurdity of those that derided them because public attention was called to the article and the evidence of their cures. If the most noted physician should announce that he had made a study of any certain organ or disease of the body, or make his sign larger than the code size, though he may have practiced medicine and been a leader in all medical counsels, notwithstanding all this, if he should presume to advertise and decline to give his discovery to the public he would be pronounced a quack and a humbug, although he may have spent his entire life and all of his available funds in perfecting investigation.

Again we say, "absurd."

If an ulcer is found upon one's arm, and is cured by some dear old grandmother, outside of the code, it will be pronounced by the medical profession an ulcer of little importance. But if treated under the code, causing sleepless nights for a month, with the scientific treatment, viz: plasters, washes, dosing with morphine, arsenic and other vile substances, given to prevent blood poisoning or deaden pain, and yet the ulcer becomes malignant and amputation is made necessary at last, to save life, yet all done according to the "isms" of the the medical code, this is much more gratifying to the medical profession, and adds more dignity to the distinguished order than to be cured by the dear old grandmother's remedy.

This appears like a severe arraingment, yet we believe that it expresses the true standing of the medical profession in regard to remedies discovered outside of their special "isms." One of the most perplexing things of the day is the popularity of certain remedies, especially Warner's Safe Cure, which we find for sale everywhere. The physician of the highest standing is ready to concede its merits and sustain the theories the proprietors have made that is, that it benefits the most of the ailments of the human system because it assists in putting the kidneys in proper condition, thereby aiding in throwing off the impurities of the blood, while others with less honesty and experience deride and are willing to see their patient die scientifically, and according to the code, rather than have him cured by this great remedy.

Yet we notice that the popularity of the medicine continues to grow year by year. The discoverer comes boldly before the people with its merits, and proclaims them from door to door in our opinion much more honorably than the physician who, perchance, may secure a patient from some catastrophe, and is permitted to set a bone of an arm or a finger, which he does with great dignity, yet very soon after takes the liberty to climb the editor's back stairs at 2 o'clock in the morning to have it annonced in the morning paper that "Dr. So-and so was in attendance," thus securing for his benefit a beautiful free advertisement.

We shall leave it to our readers to say which is the wiser and more honorable.

FITS, convulsions, dizziness and headache are prevented and cured by using Warner's Safe Cure. Why? Dr. Owen Reed says: "The tenuity (watery condition) of the blood in Bright's Disease produces cerebral symptoms, the serous (watery portion) is filtered through the blood vessels of the brain, causing anæmia and subsequent head symptoms." That is why these symptoms yield to Warner's Safe Cure. It gets rid of the Bright's disease and prevents the blood from becoming watery.

A Remarkable Family.

The Scribner family of Waterborough, Me., is remarkable in that its four generations are unbroken by death. David Scribner and his wife, both about 90 years old, have been married for sixty-five years, and have three children, the oldest being over 60. Their children have children and grandchildren, and no death has yet occurred in the line of descendants from Mr. and Mrs. Scribner to their great-grandchildren.

The Cruise of the Yacht "Restless"

SKIPPER B. HARRISON.

It was a modern Mariner sailed down the Potomac.
With a short gray beard and a cold gray eye and a basket full of snack;
With him were four companions, not a sailor in the lot—
On Saturday they sailed away upon the Restless Yacht.

The Restless is a gallant craft, a bran-new craft is she;
Her owner wanted to make her the a credit to the sea,
So he had her furnished out complete with water cold and hot—
He didn't Wanamaker a rum—and—molasses yacht!

"A wet sheet and a flowing sail" and a furrow that followed free
Accompanied the Restless in her voyage to the sea;
There were sardines for the mariners and of lobster many a pot
And Apollinaris water upon the Restless yacht!

There was Miller, Attorney-General and Halford, "Private Sec."—
The man who'd put other "Sec" aboard w'd have got hit in the neck—
And Gen. Geo. B. Williams said it suited him to a dot
To sail with Anderson M. P., upon the Restless yacht!

The short gray beard and cold gray eye belonged to another man,
Who seemed to own the vessel on the European plan;
A rocking chair and a smoking-cap and a fish line he had got,
And he bulged the side of the vessel—i. e., the Restless yacht.

Oh, restless grew the Potomac, and the good yacht Restless, too,
Heaved up and down quite restlessly upon its bosom blue.
Some others, too, heaved up and down, tho' the crew and "Cap" did not,
And there was a cry of "Steward!" upon the Restless yacht.

Behold the Restless saileth home! Yo ho, heave ho! what cheer!
Heave to, ye modern mariners, your tidings let us hear!
But the other modern mariners they answered not a jot,
While the man with the beard and cold gray eye said this from the Restless yacht:

Oh, I am the crew and the Captain bold and the and the Mate of the Restless yacht:
And the Midshipmite and the Bosun tight and the Helmsman, too, I wot!
I'm President, and the Cabinet, and I please myself you see;
Which is why I ride
The billowy tide
In the yacht of the P. M. G.

Light open-work straw rushes and Neapolitan braid are used for summer bonnets and hats.

The English hunting jacket, fastening diagonally across the chest and cut away below, is one of the most popular short coats.

Black failles and other shining or lusterless corded silks in black, are again in marked favor in the formation of handsome church and visiting gowns.

Hints to Fathers Who Have Marriageable Daughters.

Train your clock to strike only every two hours.

If you have a dog give it to some friend—for the time being.

Never grumble audibly about the dress maker's and milliner's bills.

Always let the man see that you wear slippers in the evenings.

Take all the tidies from the sitting-room chairs. Men are adverse to tidies.

When you go to the theatre as chaperone always hire a carriage to go home in and then fall asleep on the way.

An invitation to dinner once in a while will either make the young man feel at home or else scare him off. This is a good way to learn his intentions.

Join the club to which the young man belongs, and, if necessary, ask him to see you home late at night. This will be an advantage to you, and also make the young man feel that he is "solid" with you.

Do not make use of patent gas extinguishers which turn all the lights out at 10 o'clock. The young man might take it as a hint to go, and he had better regulate the light to suit himself and the girl.—Judge.

"Purgatory Bullets."

An excited Irishman lately rushed into a Boston drug store, having a broken up appearance generally. "Be jabbers" he yelled, "I am all wrong entoirely. I want some shtull to straighten me out. Some o' them Purgatory Bullets' will fix me I a'm thinkin' What d'ye tax thim"? What do you mean"? asked the clerk. "Purgatory Bullets," sor, or somethin' loike that, they call thim," replied the man. Shure, I'm in purgatory already, with headache, and liv- complaint, and bad stomach and the devil knows what all." The clerk passed out a vial of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, and Pat went off contented. These little Pellets, cure all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. A POLYGLOT MARVEL.

A WONDERFUL WORK OF THE PROFESSORS OF ST. FRANCIS XAVIER.

They Address President Harrison in Twenty-seven Languages, from Babylonian to English and from Diwani to Dutch. Philosophy of the System.

Among the many papers presented to President Harrison during the recent New York centennial the most remarkable, whether in the learning displayed, the sentiments expressed, or the fineness of its execution, was that of the College of St. Francis Xavier. It was presented by the fathers in a body on the evening of April 30, after the banquet, and consists of a commemorative ode to BABYLONIAN.

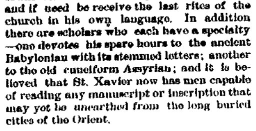
"The Land of Babylon to Washington, the Father of His Country, America."

Washington and congratulations to the United States in twenty-seven languages—African-Arabic, true Arabic, Algerian, Assyrian, Babylonian, Carshoony, Cufic, Diwani, Ethiopic, Egyptian (the present dialect), Greek, Keltic, Latin, Syriac, and several modern languages.

Such an achievement of course attracted the attention of scholars, and many hundred copies of the paper have been called for and are in the hands of critical examiners, specialists in the several languages, yet no error has so far been discovered. Among the fathers employed at St. Xavier's it is, of course, necessary to have men familiar with each of the languages used by men liable to be stranded in the great city of New York, to the end that each may make confession, and if need be receive the last rites of the church in his own language. In addition there are scholars who each have a specialty—one devotes his spare hours to the ancient Babylonian with its stemmed letters; another to the old cuneiform Assyrian; and it is believed that St. Xavier now has men capable of reading any manuscript or inscription that may yet be unearthed from the long buried cities of the Orient.



ASSYRIAN.

"Assyria to Washington, the Father of His Country, America."

Nor is this so improbable as at first appears, for it is found by long research that man in all his writings has ever been governed by certain general principles; he is by some as yet mysterious law of his nature compelled to have regard to the form of the vocal organs and the natural sequence of ideas, even in his writings. Therefore, certain forms convey similar ideas in many languages, though the ideas be expressed in different words. Thus S, or some modification of it, is often a reference to the serpent or the hissing sound made by it, while B and V (interchangeable in some languages, as among children) suggest strength. So the learned fathers can proceed on established lines; but that they should have mastered such ancient scripts so far as to write poetry in them, and this poetry a literal translation of a prescribed English stanza—this is, indeed, a triumph of intellect.

The English sentence to be rendered was:

O, Washington, thy name like music falls
O'er all our land of freedom and of peace;
'Tis heard in busy mart, in festive halls.
No tongue its praise to sing will ever cease.

In addition to translating this, the fathers added other sentences, some of which we reproduce, both in the original and in English. Of the Oriental tongues, the Diwani, or purely literary Arabic, and the ECCLESIASTICAL ARABIC, SYRIAN IDIOM.

"Were I to use the waters of the sea for ink, the firmament for paper, to write a tribute of gratitude, my efforts would fall short of what is thy due, O Washington."

Syriac, seem most compact, the Babylonian and Assyrian most diffuse. In each of the latter, four long lines, including about 150 characters, are necessary to express the equivalent of two very short lines in English; and as each of the wedge shaped characters was made by pressing a molding tool upon the clay before it was baked, it is evident that writing was a serious business in Assyria. Probably they did not make long speeches. Cursive Arabic and Carshoony (the secret or sacred writing of the Maronites) are remarkably compact, there being some 200 lines and dots in a space two inches long and half an inch wide. In fact all forms of the Arabic, and all the African and Asiatic modifications of it, look like a swarm of bees, when held a little ways from the eye.

When we come to the Ethiopic, however, we at once see that we are on another line; for the old Ethiopic is supposed to be the original of the Phoenician, Greek, Latin and thence of the letters used by most Europeans. Here again we see the operation of that mysterious law above referred to: All the Orientals seem impelled by some internal force to fine lines and dots and filmy tracery, while the Europeans tend towards blocks and squares and straight lines, each letter standing out by itself with a sort of defiant aggressiveness. Similarly the old mining shafts lately reopened in Spain are known to be Roman if they are square, but Moorish if they are round, and in place of the massive squares in northern buildings one finds in Saracen lands that mass of lattice work, vines, curves and traceries to which is applied the general phrase of "Moorish."

IRISH.

"To George Washington after one hundred years. His country with grateful remembrances."

One other thing may be noticed. The writers have been extremely careful to avoid political bias; each supposed Oriental or European writes in his proper character. The Spanish address, for instance, calls on the people of the old world and the new to observe.

a point the reader can easily translate for himself. It is a moderate statement that this polyglot address of the fathers of St. Xavier's will [illegible] any address of the occasion. St. Xavier's [illegible]

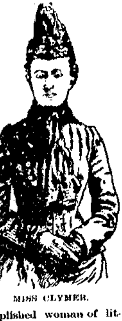
EX-SECRETARY BAYARD'S FIANCE.

Miss Mary Willing Clymer, Daughter of Dr. Merredith Clymer.

Not much surprise was created by the authoritative announcement of the matrimonial engagement between ex-Secretary of State Bayard and Miss Clymer, of Washington. Numerous preternaturally sharp eyed society women of the capital had surmised it last winter; in fact, during the last two years of President Cleveland's administration.

Mr. Bayard is 61 years old. He lost his wife and a brilliant daughter in quick succession, but he has a large family of grown children. His daughters are distinguished for their intellectuality, and were remarkably successful in society while their father was in the United States senate and a member of President Cleveland's cabinet. Mr. Bayard, by the way, is the fifth member of his family who has occupied a seat in the United States senate.

Miss Clymer is the only daughter of Dr. George Clymer, for many years surgeon in the navy, the granddaughter of Admiral Shriback and the granddaughter of George Clymer, who was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, as well as one of the framers of the Federal constitution. Dr. Meredith Clymer, the distinguished physician of New York city, is a member of the same family. Miss Clymer lives with her mother in a beautiful mansion on Connecticut avenue in Washington, where she was born thirty-nine years ago. She is an accomplished woman of literary tastes, and has traveled extensively. She is a decided blonde and acknowledged by all to be beautiful, but not more distinguished by personal beauty than by queenly dignity. She has a graceful, slender figure and dresses in exquisite taste. She is an accomplished horseback rider and in that respect will be a fit companion for the ex-secretary in his favorite exercise and amusement.

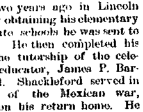


MISS CLYMER.

IN THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

The First United States Judge. Guthrie's First Mayor.

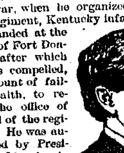
James M. Shackleford, the first United States judge of the Indian territory, was born nearly sixty-two years ago in Lincoln county, Ky. After obtaining his elementary education at private schools he was sent to Stanford seminary. He then completed his education under the tutorship of the celebrated Kentucky educator, James P. Barbour, of Springfield. Shackleford served in the closing year of the Mexican war, and studied law on his return home. He was admitted to the bar thirty-five years ago, and continued an extensive practice until the outbreak of the civil war, when he organized the Twenty-fifth regiment, Kentucky infantry, which he commanded at the battle of Fort Donelson, after which he was compelled, on account of failing health, to resign the office of colonel of the regiment. He was authorized by President Lincoln, in 1862, to raise a cavalry regiment, and two weeks after he had 1,600 men tendered him, from among whom he selected the requisite number to form the Eighth Kentucky cavalry, of which he was commissioned colonel. For three years he served with distinction, one of his exploits being the capture of Gen. John H. Morgan during the latter's raid through Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio in 1863.



JAMES M. SHACKLEFORD.

In the East Tennessee campaign he commanded with marked ability the cavalry corps—sixteen regiments—of the Army of the Ohio. In January, 1864, having lost his wife, leaving four infant children to be cared for, he resigned his place in the army. In the same year he located in Evansville, Ind., and resumed the practice of law. He was one of the Republican electors for the state of Indiana in 1880. In 1888, he was one of the Republican electors for the state at large, and was made chairman of the electoral college which cast the vote of Indiana for Harrison and Morton.

The mayor of the town of Guthrie—the Oklahoma town which sprang up like magic when that territory was opened—is Col. D. B. Dyer, formerly of Kansas City, and he is a hustler from away back. He is cleaning out the gamblers and other rough characters as rapidly as Inspector Byrnes manages the New York pickpockets, and his strong individuality commands respect from even the toughest citizens.



D. B. DYER.

To Stop Snoring.

"It's a singular fact," said a well known merchant today, "that the worst case of snoring can be stopped by a low whistle. You don't believe it? Well, there's my office boy asleep now on an old box. Hear him snore! Of course you do. The dead could hear him. Now listen." The merchant gave one quick, low whistle and the fog horn accompaniment ceased instantly, although the lad still slumbered. "What are you doing?" then asked the man of business, as he roused his satellite with a shake. "Nothin'," was the instant reply of the youngster. "I was jest hearin' a feller outside a whistling like blazes."—Albany Journal.

Shall Women Be Allowed to Vote.

The question of female suffrage has agitated the tongues and pens of reformers for years, and good arguments have been adduced for and against it. Many of the softer sex could vote intelligently, and many would vote as their husbands did, and give no thought to the merits of a political issue. They would all vote for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for they know that it is a boon to their sex. It is unqualled for the cure of leucorrhea, abnormal discharges, morning sickness, and the countless ills to which women are subject. It is the only remedy for women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. PERRINE-FOLSOM.

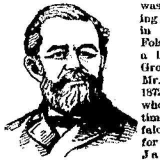
The Marriage of Mrs. Cleveland's Mother Took the World by Surprise.

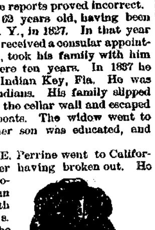
The recent marriage of Mr. Henry E. Perrine and Mrs. Emma C. Folsom, the mother of Mrs. Cleveland, had not been announced, and took the world by surprise. The bride was a widow, having been married in 1863 to Oscar Folsom, at the time a law partner of Grover Cleveland. Mr. Folsom died in 1872. His widow, who had till that time lived at Buffalo, went to live for several years in Jackson, Mich., with her sisters and a brother. As Mrs. Folsom, during her residence in Washington, she made many friends. A number of matches were reported for her, but in all cases the reports proved incorrect.



MR. PERRINE.

Mr. Perrine is 62 years old, having been born at Sodus, N. Y., in 1827. In that year his father having received a consular appointment in Yucatan, took his family with him and remained there ten years. In 1837 he helped to settle Indian Key, Fla. He was killed there by Indians. His family slipped through a hole in the cellar wall and escaped in turtle yawl boats. The widow went to Buffalo, where her son was educated, and studied law.

In 1849 Mr. H. E. Perrine went to California, the gold fever having broken out. He went first to Coloma, and had an encounter with Digger Indians. From there he went to San Francisco, then a mining town. But he failed to make a large fortune, and returned to the east with $11,000, with which he entered the ship chandlery business in Buffalo. He married Miss Cornelia S. Hall, of New York, and in 1864 removed to Brooklyn, but again went to Buffalo, and failed after the panic of 1873. Then he established a settlement at Perrine, Fla., but not receiving promised assistance, he concluded to return to the north. Since his last return to Buffalo he has been secretary of the Cemetery association.



THE BRIDE.

He Can Quote the Scriptures.

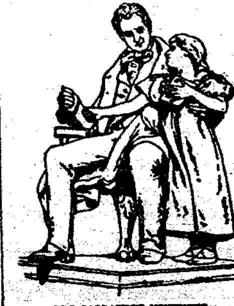
There lives in this country an old negro preacher who is very illiterate, doesn't know a single letter of the alphabet, and yet, strange to relate, he can turn to and read any passage of Scripture in the book of St. John; and the strangest part of it all is that this is the only book in the Bible in which he can read. We don't know how to account for this unless it is that he has memorized the entire book, and the constant use of one Testament for possibly two score years has so imprinted it on his mind that he readily recognizes the contents of each page. He cannot read in any other Bible except his own.—Warrenton (Ga.) Clipper.

The Gallaudet Monument.

One of the most beautiful pieces of artistic workmanship, and one which most appropriately fills the niche for which it is intended, is the statue to be soon unveiled at Washington, erected to Thomas H. Gallaudet, LL. D., founder of deaf mute education in America. In the early part of this century Gallaudet took an interest in a little girl who was a deaf mute and taught her an alphabet of signs. In the statue he is represented teaching this child—Alice Cogswell—who is standing by his side.

A convention of deaf mutes and those interested in their education will be held at Washington at the time of the unveiling of the statue. The last convention was held in New York four years ago. At that convention it was voted to raise a fund for the statue. Over $13,000 was contributed, and two years ago a contract for its design and construction was made with Daniel C. French, of Concord. The date of unveiling is fixed for June 26.

Dr. Gallaudet was graduated from the Andover Theological seminary in 1814, and becoming interested in teaching Alice Cogswell at Hartford, his work attracted the attention of a number of citizens of that place. Gallaudet was sent abroad to study the art of teaching deaf mutes. In 1816 he returned, and funds having been raised, a school was opened. This institution which, by grants, obtained considerable endowment, remained under Dr. [illegible] care for fourteen years. [illegible]



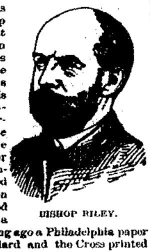
THE GALLAUDET MONUMENT.

BISHOP RILEY'S CHURCH.

It Was Started as the Protestant Episcopal Church in Mexico.

In 1868 the Rev. H. Chauncey Riley, a clergyman of the Episcopal church, went to Mexico to engage in missionary work. He founded a branch called the church of Jesus, and was finally made a bishop in recognition of the work he had accomplished as a missionary. The bishop became a friend of Juarez, and when the president confiscated the property of the Jesuit order, he presented Riley with a fine church in the City of Mexico, and the bishop afterwards purchased the convent of San Francisco, the finest building there next to the capitol. This purchase was made with the assistance of New Yorkers prominent in religious missionary work. The Episcopal church of the United States gave that of Mexico an allowance of $40,000 a year; the mission prospered, and the Mexican church now numbers forty congregations.

Several years ago the Mexican church became independent and its income from the United States was cut off. Bishop Riley spent a great deal of his time in the United States trying to raise means for his church, but in his attitude of independence of the organization in the United States he has labored under a great disadvantage, being opposed by the very men who had secured his elevation to a bishopric. Not long ago a Philadelphia paper called The Standard and the Cross printed the following advertisement:



BISHOP RILEY.

MEXICO.

Contributions in aid of Christian work in Mexico are most pressingly needed, and can be mailed to the address of BISHOP H. C. RILEY, Care of J. P. Heath, No. 43 Bible House, New York.

To our Christian Friends:

As there is a regular monthly expense in connection with the work, a regular monthly income is needed to meet that expense. We therefore specially ask for regular monthly contributions in its behalf. If many will each send a little every month, or quarter, or whenever they can, it will do great good. Remember, every little helps.

H. CHAUNCEY RILEY.

Immediately underneath this appeal appeared this notice:

CHURCH WORK IN MEXICO.

The position of the Protestant Episcopal church toward the work in Mexico is indicated by the following statement of the presiding bishop and others, recently published:

"We, the undersigned, hereby express our earnest and decided conviction that those who desire to promote any effective work for reform in Mexico should send their contributions to William G. Boulton, Esq., No. 202 Madison avenue, New York.

"We are compelled to believe that funds contributed through other channels will be ineffective, to say nothing more.

J. WILLIAMS, Presiding Bishop, etc.
A. N. LITTLEJOHN, Bishop of Long Island.
W. C. DOANE, Bishop of Albany.
H. C. POTTER, Bishop of New York."

Bishop H. C. Riley is therefore wholly unauthorized to solicit subscriptions.

This brings up the question as to whether the independence of the Mexican church is established, or only exists in the imaginations of the missionary bishop and his churchmen. Will contributions come in, or will the United States bishops succeed in cutting off the supply.

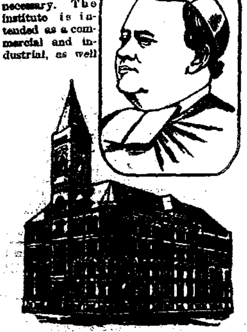
Marked in a White Oak Tree.

"M. S., 1770," is the inscription cut upon an old white oak tree near the residence of Mr. E. H. Ogletree, in this county. We are told that it was cut on there by "Massa Stevens" during the year above mentioned, and the tract of land now owned by the Ogletree family was granted Mr. Moses Stevens by the government. Mr. O. has the chain of titles from that date to the present. We notice one of the old seals that was made of wax and was so old that the dates can scarcely be seen on it. The printing is antique, and is far behind the work that is turned out nowadays by amateur printers.—Crawfordville (Ga.) Democrat.

The La Salle Institute.

The corner stone of what is to be one of the most important institutions of learning in Chicago was laid with great ceremony in that city recently. It is to be called the De La Salle institute, after John Baptist De La Salle, the founder of the Christian Brotherhood. A magnificent building, four stories in height, is now in course of erection. It is on the corner of Thirty-fifth street and Wabash avenue and has a total frontage of 259 feet. In architecture it will be distinguished rather by massive simplicity than by ornateness.

It will be four stories in height, and built of Bedford stone. The school will comprise twenty-four class rooms, and will accommodate 600 pupils easily, more if necessary. The institute is intended as a commercial and industrial, as well as a general educational, school for boys. It will be under the management of the Christian Brothers, of Chicago, of whom Brother Atchison, portrayed in this cut, is one of the leading spirits.



LA SALLE INSTITUTE—BROTHER ADJUTOR.

The order was founded in the Seventeenth century by Frere De La Salle, the presiding priest of the abbey of Rheims, one of the most ancient and most revered monastic institutions of France. Here it was that kings from time immemorial celebrated their accession to the throne. Here De La Salle, the curate of this rich and famous parish, suddenly in 1680 sold out his ordinance, gave the proceeds to charity and established the Christian brotherhood, that survives in a highly developed form to this day.

De La Salle's idea was solely to found a college of teachers—a school for the thorough education of young men as teachers. The Christian Brothers are thus the head of the oldest normal school in the world. Since De La Salle died the order, which he organized and set in action, has expanded and established itself in every Christian country on the globe.

Everything which belongs to pure, healthy blood is imparted by Hood's Sarsaparilla. A trial will convince you of its merit.

NEWSPAPER LAWS.

Any person who takes the paper regularly from the post office, whether directed to his name or whether he is a subscriber or not—is responsible for the pay.

The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office for moving away and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

The world is aghast at a horror which has occurred in Pennsylvania during the past week. The disaster must be ranked among the worst of its kind in many centuries.

The ruin was wrought by the breaking of a dam which held back the large quantities of water that had been increased by the recent heavy rains.

Below that vast reservoir previous to Friday last was a valley about thirteen miles long with the prosperous city of Johnstown and other smaller villages. The flood came and at least 10,000 people were swept to their death and nearly $60,000,000 worth of property was destroyed. To-day where the prosperous towns stood there is nothing but wrecks of buildings the wretched remnants of the blotted out communities. Here fathers can be seen whose families have disappeared, mothers mourning for their children who perished before their eyes, children without either father or mother, all destitute, many stripped of most of their clothing and dependent upon the charitable hand and the swiftly-speeding railway train to save them from fatal want. One mother placed her seven children, one by one, on floating objects, and commended them to the keeping of heaven. Fifteen hours later she was rescued, half-dead from exposure, many miles from the scene. Not one of her "jewels" will ever greet her vision again.

This terrible calamity is even worse than war in its most atrocious form, or the flood spared neither sex or age. The aged and the infant, robust manhood and delicate womanhood perished alike in the grasp of the relentless waters. Disasters of a similar nature that have occurred in this country are trivial in comparison with this.

By a vote of 11,302 to 910 the people of Syracuse decided yesterday that they wanted municipal ownership and control of their proposed water supply. This is a majority of about twelve to one. Impediments to the securing of Skaneateles Lake water will now be thrown in their way but they will doubtless get it. This will result in an advantage to Fulton as F. G. Weeks will do his paper manufacturing here if the Syracuse water supply is secured from that source.

A HISTORY OF ONE OF THE LEADING LABOR ORGANIZATIONS.

The Old Order of United Sons of Vulcan. Steady and Solid Growth of the Present Union—The "Conference System" by Which Wages Are Determined.

The Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers will begin its annual convention at Pittsburg on Tuesday, June 4. The nucleus, from which sprung this powerful, thoroughly disciplined and well regulated trades union, was formed thirty-one years ago by a few ironworkers in the city of Pittsburg. There had been attempts at organization in the trade prior to this time, and concerted action against reductions of wages had been taken in some of the departments, the very bitter strike of 1850, which was lost by the workmen, being noteworthy; but until the formation of the "United Sons of Vulcan," on April 12, 1858, no really formidable combination was instituted. The "Sons of Vulcan" restricted its membership to puddlers, but its ideas were broader than any that had preceded it, and after three years of indifferent existence it began in 1861 a steady and rapid growth, which made it, in one year, strong enough to assert its power.

In September, 1862, the first "National Forge" was organized at Pittsburg, and branches were instituted in New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and Ohio, and employers were thereafter reminded that where the wages of the puddlers were concerned there was an organization of their employes to be consulted. But the union was not fully recognized by the manufacturers until 1873.

The conference system, through which the yearly wages scales of the ironworkers are now arranged, was first introduced by the "Sons of Vulcan" in 1865, when in February of that year the first regular and thorough scale of prices was made. As time passed, strikes and lockouts were resorted to by both sides to enforce and resist demands, as the conferences were not always satisfactory to all employers, and it was not always possible for the committees themselves to agree.

PRESIDENT WEIHE.

In the meantime other branches of the trade, known as finishers, heaters, rollers, roughers, hookers, etc., formed organizations, until prior to the amalgamation of all, in 1876, there were four distinct trades unions in the rolling mills, namely—the "United Sons of Vulcan," the "Associated Brotherhood of Iron and Steel Heaters, Rollers and Roughers," the "Iron and Steel Roll Hands' Union" and the "United Nailers." Each had its separate charter, its separate officers and its own method of doing business, each peculiar to itself, and although all were working under the same roofs and for the same firms, for years complete isolation of one from all the other departments, so far as trade matters were concerned, was the condition.

Impressed with the necessity for the unification of all in one grand union, without regard to branches in the business, the members of the Columbus (O.) lodge of the Iron and Steel Roll Hands began the agitation of the subject of the amalgamation of all the workers in the iron and steel rolling mills, and in the fall of 1873 the three local unions in the Columbus rolling mills formed a temporary amalgamated association.

During the two years that followed this action by the men at Columbus several conferences were held by representatives from the various unions in most of the important cities, and constant effort was made by the thinking men to secure for the craft generally what Columbus had effected.

While this agitation for better organization was going on among the men the employers were taking steps to break the influence of the unions, and in April, 1874, the first "ironclad" in that trade was introduced. The "ironclad" was and is a pledge, in writing, that the retained employe or the applicant for work has severed his connection with the union and will not again become a member—under penalty of discharge. The manufacturers succeeded, in some places, in breaking up the unions; but this only made the active men more determined to strengthen and protect their organization, and the movement for amalgamation was hastened.

On Aug. 1, 1876, the three national unions of the iron trade met in Pittsburg, in different halls, with the understanding that they should wind up their affairs, adjourn sine die, and then all the delegates assemble in one convention and there form one organization of the craft for the United States. This programme was carried out, and on Aug. 4, in what was then known as "Emerald hall," on Sixth avenue, Pittsburg, Pa., the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel workers was formed.

SECRETARY MARTIN.

The officers elected were: Joseph Bishop, president and secretary; Edward McGinness, treasurer, and one vice president for each of the eight districts into which the territory was divided, as follows, respectively: James Penney, David Reese, William H. Morris, John A. Flute, John J. Roderick, John Jarrett, Edward Reilly and John Morrissey. The trustees for the first year were: David A. Plant, William Martin and John Jarrett. When the association met in Columbus, O., in August, 1877, it showed a remarkable growth for the first year of its existence; and it has steadily increased in membership and influence during the thirteen years of its existence. The total membership in 1876, the date of organization, was 2,500; there are at present 16,000 members in good standing on the roll books of the association. The only strike lost by the association was that for an advance in wages, which occurred in the summer of 1882.

Strikes are seldom resorted to, as by the conference system, through which representatives of the manufacturers meet a committee of the association and arrange the scale every summer, the occasion for them is done away with. The printed scale under which the iron mills are now being conducted fills nearly 100 closely printed pages, so numerous are the divisions and sub-divisions in the industry.

Since the organization of the Amalgamated association but three men have served it as president, one as secretary and two as treasurer. Joseph Bishop, of Pittsburg, was president from Aug. 4, 1876, to Jan. 1, 1883 John Jarrett, of Sharon, Pa., was elected for four terms, concluding with Oct. 1, 1883. Since then William Weihe, of Pittsburg, has been chosen by each succeeding convention, and is at present serving his sixth term.

William Martin, of Columbus, O., was appointed secretary in August, 1878, was elected at the Youngstown, O., convention, in 1879, has been re-elected at every convention since, and is now serving his eleventh term. Edward McGinness, of Youngstown, the first treasurer, served until August, 1880, when he was succeeded by James Penney, of Pittsburg, who has held the office ever since.

The association now holds its annual conventions in June of each year, and always in Pittsburg, where the general offices are located.

Secretary Martin says he knows of nothing of special importance to be brought before the meeting this year. The chief work of the convention will be to consider the scale of prices for the year.

Field Day Sports.

The field day of Fulton Union School at the fair grounds last Wednesday afternoon showed that the school possessed no small amount of athletic talent. The sports and winners were 100 yards dash; Mark Andrews, first; Ernest Taylor, second, time 12 seconds. Running high jump; B. Wilcox, first, 50 inches; Mark Andrews, second, 48 inches. Half mile run, draw, C. Babcock and R. Hubbard, time 2 min. 40 sec. Running long jump; Mark Andrews, first 17 ft. 6 inches; W. Townsend, second, 16 ft. 7 inches. Standing long jump; Mark Andrews, first, 9 ft. 2 inches; W. Townsend, second, 8 ft. 7 inches. Throwing base ball; John Stephens, first; F. Brown, second. Throwing 12 lb. shot. C. Babcock first, 45 ft. Pole vault; B. Chapman, first, 70 in.; H. C. Howe and G. Green, second, 68 inches. Mile run; Ernest Taylor, first 5 min. 35 sec; A. Chase, second, 5 min. 44 sec. The base ball game resulted in a victory for the nine of which W. Townsend was captain. Five innings were played, score 28 to 27.

An interesting feature not on the program was the hundred yards dash indulged in by the young ladies. The time of the winner is said to have been less than five minutes.

The members of the Academic department were entertained at the home of Miss Mabel Waugh at Lower Oswego Falls where a class supper was served.

Memorial Day Exercises.

The exercises here on Decoration Day were carried out fully according to the program. At 2 p. m. the opera house was crowded to its utmost capacity. Post Schenck and the Women's Relief Corps were present in a body. Adjutant Grove Dutton read the orders from headquarters and A. J. Osborne, ex-commander of the Post, acted as president of the day. Rev. W. Dempster Chase as chaplain offered a touching prayer. The large chorus of male voices under the charge of Prof. Cooper rendered excellent music. Miss Mabel Lester read a poem written for the occasion by her father, N. Lester and Mrs. R. H. Spencer of Oswego made some remarks and read a poem by Bret Harte. The orator of the day Rev. J. C. Mead of Canastota made an able address.

After the exercises at the opera house the veterans headed by the Fulton band and drum corps and accompanied by the orator, clergy, members of the Relief Corps and citizens proceeded to Mt. Adnah where the usual exercises were carried out over the graves of the patriotic dead.

Near the Scene of the Great Disaster.

LATROBE, Pa., June 2, 1889.

Editor FULTON TIMES:

DEAR SIR:—I send you papers with account of the wreck of the city of Johnstown by this mail. The affair is written very plainly on my mind. Spent the day there yesterday and had it not been for a little circumstance that at the time I considered unfortunate I would have been there on the fatal night, and of 53 guests at the Hubbard House where I stop but seven are alive. The scene is awful and simply beggars description.

In nearly every instance they were stunned by the floating debris and thus fell an easy prey to the hungry waters, their bodies being found from one to a hundred miles away.

The disaster has never been equaled in the history of this country.

The sight is one never to be forgotten. As I said before no human being can describe it.

Very Respt'y Yours,
E. V. BABCOCK.

AT THE LEWIS HOUSE.

DR. A. MEYER,

The well-known, practical and scientific optician and specialist in lenses for the eye, from New York city, formerly from Ithaca, N. Y., for two weeks, beginning Thursday, June 6th, 1889.

For the purpose of making scientific examinations of all classes of defective vision, free. Great opportunity to have your eyesight made perfect. People made to see who have not been able to read for years. The only optician that visits this place who make scientific tests of the eyes. In cases of Astigmatism, Presbyopia, Myopia, Hypermetropia, and Diplopia DR. MEYER has no superior. Let everybody try reading this article. Also to look at a distance with each eye separately. If they are not alike, lose no time before consulting an optician, as you have reason to be alarmed.

Astigmatism is a deformity that causes pain in and over the eyes through the head, sometimes extending to the small of the back. Sunlight also causes pain in and over the eyes and gaslight is often unindurable when in church or theatre. This trouble if not corrected in time will cause serious trouble.

Presbyopia is the common failure of sight, which nine persons out of ten experience between the age of 35 and 55. So common is this failure of sight that few are alarmed at its coming, but go to some place where spectacles are sold and purchase the first pair which seems to improve the sight, regardless of the consequences. This practice is dangerously wrong. In adjusting spectacles for the failure of sight, the utmost care should be taken to ascertain if other difficulties exist. It is necessary to test each eye separately, as the eyes are frequently found to be unlike and if fitted with glasses of the same focus will do irreparable injury.

Myopia or near sight. People with this difficulty see perfectly when objects are held near the eyes, but distant objects are dim and often invisible; for instance the person may be able to read perfectly and yet be unable to see the time on a large dial, or distinguish features a few feet distant. Near sighted children often injure their eyes trying to see during black-board exercises. It is the duty of teachers to report all such cases to parents, and their duty to see that the child is fitted with proper spectacles, as it is very dangerous to let this trouble go uncorrected.

Hypermetropia is a malformation of the eyeball and is always congenital. All such cases should use spectacles as early as the child is capable of taking care of them and should not be allowed to read, write or sew until the spectacles are adjusted.

Symptoms of this Trouble. A patient presents himself complaining that the eyes ache when looking at a near object: that when reading lines and words—which are at first distinct enough—when looked at for a few minutes run into one another and become misty. He states that if he closes his eyes for a short time, or rubs them, the print again becomes distinct but soon fades as before. Such symptoms are sure indications of Hypermetropia, and is dangerous to let them go uncorrected.

Hereditary defects. If a mother in early life is troubled with Hypermetropia or Astigmatism her children are more than likely to inherit the same, and for this reason thousands of children to-day are born with defective eyes, and at an early age becomes apparent through the vision. Such children cannot use spectacles too soon. All are invited to call. Consultation and Tests Free. Remember the time and place.

The undersigned take pleasure in stating that we have examined most of the lenses of Dr. A. Meyer, and give it as our belief that he is entire master of his art as an optician. He was able to demonstrate the adaptability of his lenses to almost if not all disorders of the vision not depending upon organic diseases. It is furthermore our belief that he is a candid, honest gentleman, and no one need feel afraid of being humbugged who may trust to his opinion. The credentials in his possession are from persons of character and respectability; quite a number are known to us, and we can vouch for their standing in the optical profession.

Peach growing promises to become an important industry in Connecticut. The Connecticut Valley Orchard Campany has two immense orchards at Meridan and at Berlin, and this year is the first fruitage of the trees, and it is expected that the yield will reach 40,000 baskets.

Butter Working Rules.

In the following paragraphs are condensed some rules for making butter, published by the Royal Agricultural society, England, which every butter maker will do will do well to heed:

1. Rinse all dairy utensils in cold water.
2. Scald with hot water and rinse again with cold.
3. Always use a thermometer.
4. Churn and cream to be at a temperature of 56 degs. to 58 degs. in summer and 60 degs. in winter.
5. Ventilate churn sufficiently.
6. Churn at forty-five revolutions per minute.
7. Stop churning immediately after the butter comes; the butter should be like grains of mustard seed.
8. Draw off buttermilk and wash the churn till the water is free from buttermilk.
9. Make a strong brine and pour into churn through a wire sieve.
10. Remove butter and work on a butter worker. Never use the hands.

Silos Need not be Weighted.

A cover to the silo, or weights, are wholly unnecessary. The silos that had no covers of any sort, last year, did not show more surface waste of silage than those covered with paper boards and sawdust. Only two or three inches of silage molded where no surface protection was used. The two or three inches of white mold made an air-tight cover that offered all the protection needed. The silos covered with a foot of dry straw, well tread down, showed the leart loss of any. Those who covered closely and weighted report the greatest loss. There is no more necessity of weighting a silo than of putting two hundred pounds per square foot on a potato heap.—American Agriculturist for June.

Does the Earth Really Move?

Science says that it does, but we cannot help wondering sometimes if there isn't some mistake about it, when we see how stubbornly certain old fogies cling to their musty and antiquated ideas. It was believed once that consumption was incurable, and although it has been clearly demonstrated that it is not, thousands of old-time physicians close their eyes and put their hands to their ears and refuse to abandon the theory. But for all that the world moves on, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery continues to rescue sufferers from consumptives' graves. It is a sure cure for this dread disease if taken in time. All scrofulous disease—and consumption is included in the list—[illegible]

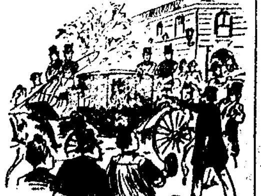
IT OPENED BEFORE THE EXPOSITION WAS HALF READY.

A Sensation at the Start—A Disappointed Conspirator Shoots at President Carnot. Inspiring Scenes at Versailles—Leading Attractions of the Exposition.

The centennial exposition at Paris gave the French artists the opportunity of their lives, and the pictures which have just arrived from that city show that they fully realized it. In the Parisian illustrated journals one may get almost as good an idea of the show as if he had seen it.

From the president's start to Versailles on Sunday morning to the last public act of Monday and the illumination of Monday night, every notable incident and many brilliant scenes appear in L'Illustration and Le Monde Illustre in the finest style of French art. Especially are they profuse in "views" of President Carnot, in whom they are unusually well pleased because he showed himself a "good soldier," rising and bowing to the people immediately after Perrin shot at him, to show that he was not hurt, and then riding on to Versailles and delivering his speech without a tremor.

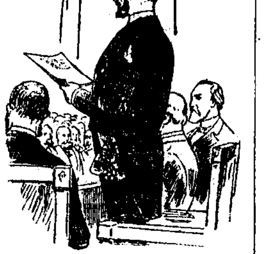


THE SHOOTING.

The occasion was indeed inspiring. The day was just a hundred years from that on which the states general met in the same hall—in what is now known as the Hotel des Meus Plaisirs—and on the spot the president unveiled a bronze tablet commemorating the event. In the noted Hall of Mirrors, in presence of his ministers, foreign ambassadors, dignitaries and a splendid assembly he reviewed the events of a hundred years.

To those Americans who fancy that progress is confined to new countries, the statements of M. Tirard's opening report and President Carnot's oration would have come in the form of an amazing revelation. It is beyond question that the general condition of the French people has improved more in a century than that of Americans; but this is because the condition of the French was so very bad in 1780, and the revolution is many times justified by its results. The French cultivators own two-thirds of the soil of France; three-fourths of the movable capital is in the hands of the middle classes; the average wealth is almost as great as in America, and the aggregate is rapidly increasing in spite of such blunders as the Panama canal scheme. Well might President Carnot conclude that this condition is the best of guarantees for the permanency of the republic, for while there is doubt as to many political maxims, there is one that is certain—that a free government can never be maintained where the masses are desperately poor.

All the reports from Paris admit one great disappointment: the exhibition is not half complete. In at least half the space there is only vacancy, and Great Britain is the only nation to begin with a full section. The others will soon have theirs complete, but the necessary work greatly mars the enjoyment of the first fortnight. The crowd in attendance is roughly estimated at half a million, and it was observed that nearly all of them were most interested in the magnificent front of the main entrance way and in the Eiffel tower.



OPENING THE EXPOSITION.

So much has been published of the Eiffel tower that it is only necessary here to say that its girth at the foot is a fifth of a mile, that the tower proper is 890 feet high and that at that level begins the campanile and rises to the lantern, 984 feet high, above which is only the peak. The electric light in the lantern is a marvel in itself, and the rays streaming out from it are represented as wonderful beyond the power of description.

Another attraction is the great champagne tun—the largest in the world—manufactured by E. Mercier & Co., the well known wine makers of Epernay, from Hungarian oak. Its capacity is equal to 200,000 bottles, or 800 hogsheads. It is twenty-five feet in height and of equal length, and weighs forty tons, the steel bands encircling it alone weighing three tons. It was drawn from Epernay to Paris in ten days by twelve yoke of horses and oxen. One end of it is bronze, elegantly carved to represent an allegorical group—La Champagne offering a bunch of grapes to Britannia, with the coat of arms of England and France quartered below. This mammoth tun stands in the palace of alimentary products, with a tasting stall and reception room adjoining. It is filled with champagne of the choicest vintage.

The Parisian papers reluctantly admit that at least half of the exhibitors are behind time, and so the Algerian, Tunisian, Moorish, Turkish and Oriental departments generally are not up to the standard necessary for effective pictures. The Mexican and South American departments are also somewhat unfinished, but are being rapidly filled; so the views herewith presented are only on the line of those to which the Parisian illustrated papers gave their space. The shooting at President Carnot and his address are, of course, the great features with the French, and the president is now at the very height of his popularity. Americans, therefore, will take a friendly interest in the views here reproduced.

It is related of Brutus that when he read Mark Antony's funeral oration over the body of Cæsar he remarked contemptuously: "Humph! Stolen from Shakespeare, every word of it."—Harper's Magazine.

THE ELECTRICAL WAY.

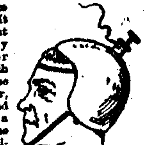
How Infinitude Will Be Solved by Murderer Kemmler.

Nearly all the arrangements have been completed for the execution of Joseph Kemmler by electricity during the week beginning June 24. Kemmler, it will be remembered, murdered his mistress, Tillie Zeigler, in Buffalo, and he was the first man sentenced to die in the new fashion. The New York Sun details the proceedings on the day of the death of Kemmler, so far as they are at present arranged, the main points of which are as follows, the execution taking place in the state prison at Auburn, N. Y.

On whatever morning shall be decided upon in the week of the execution the prisoner will be notified, and whatever opportunity he desires for religious consolation and farewell words will be given him. These over, just before the hour fixed upon for the execution the officers will enter his cell, and the death warrant will be read. His shoes will then be removed and a pair resembling army brogans will be substituted.

In the sole of these there will have been inserted a metal plate covering the whole sole, and connecting with wires passing out through the heels. While one officer is making this change of shoes another will fasten the prisoner's hands together in front and will place around his body, just beneath the armpits, a stout leather strap, with a buckle fastening it in front and snap hooks projecting from each side at the back.

Another officer will place upon the back of the prisoner's head a peculiar close fitting cap, apparently of black rubber, made around a small metal piece in the center. It will look somewhat as if made by taking a rubber football, and with a metal cap at the hole for a center, cutting off the end of the ball into a sort of hood. The cap will fit over almost the whole of the head, from the base of the brain to well toward the forehead. Inside of it, in the center about the metal piece, will be a spiral arrangement of copper wire, about five inches in diameter, and made to fit down over the part of the head that it will cover. The wires, just before the cap is placed on the prisoner's head, will be covered with sponge, saturated with salt water.



DEATH CAP.

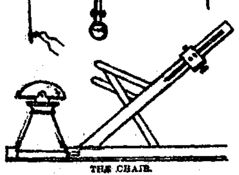
The prisoner will be sitting on a chair in his cell while these arrangements are being put on. This chair, not differing apparently from an ordinary one, but which is being made especially for the purpose, will be connected with wires leading to another room, and the prisoner sitting in the chair will, without knowing it, be subjected to a current of electricity too light to be felt, but heavy enough to give an expert electrician in the other room an exact measurement, by the use of what is known as the "Whetstone Bridge," of electrical resistance of the man. This will take only an instant, and will be done before the officers have the prisoner ready to leave the cell.

From the cell the procession will be much as now to the execution room, where the deputies and other persons permitted by law to witness the execution will be waiting.

Near the center of the room, raised upon a small platform about eight inches above the floor, will be a chair, made somewhat like a large reclining chair. The long, straight frame that forms the slanting back will be of hard wood pieces, three inches square, and will be long enough so that if a seven foot man should lie in the chair his head would rest upon the back.

The seat and arms will be of plain wood and without any peculiarities. The upper part of the back frame on each side will be fitted with a slot, in which will slide back and forth a small arrangement with a ring at the top and a thumbscrew beneath. The rings are to receive the hooks in the back of the belt about the man's body, and the screws are to fasten the arrangement in place at the spot where the rings will meet the hooks, which will vary according to the height of the prisoner. In front of the chair will be a foot rest, something like those in a barber's shop, except that the top portion, instead of being fixed, will be balanced upon a pivot to permit it to dip front or back, so that the feet will lie firmly upon it. This whole foot rest will be arranged to slide backward and forward, and to be secured with a screw at the point where the prisoner's feet will rest upon it.

From the ceiling over the back of the chair and over the foot rest will dangle two flexible wires, like those from which small electric lights swing. On the wall at one side will be a small round dial attached to a brass instrument. A hand upon the dial will indicate the intensity of the current that will pass over the wires. Near it on the wall will be a small double pole switch, a brass instrument similar to the familiar switches used to shut off or let on the current wherever electricity is used, but designed especially to show at a glance whether the current is off or on, in order to prevent accidents which carelessness in handling the apparatus might bring about. This will be all of the apparatus apparent in the room.



THE CHAIR.

The prisoner, immediately upon entering the room, will be led to the chair, and in a moment will be pushed back into it, the hooks in the belt about his body slipped into the rings in the chair, and there fastened in place by the turn of the screws. At the same moment his feet will be raised, the foot rest slipped under them and fastened by a turn of the screw, and a strap on top of the seat will be buckled tightly over his ankles. In another moment the two dangling wires will be fastened, one to the metal at the center of the back of the cap and the other to the metal connection on the heel of each shoe. A black cloth will be pulled over the face of the prisoner, the officers will stand well back from the chair, and at a signal the executioner at the switch will turn on the current, the voltage of which has previously been adjusted to suit the resistance of the prisoner, as shown [illegible] in the cell.

The [illegible] is to use a current of 1,000 volts, [illegible] as that used in the Westinghouse [illegible] lighting system. The [illegible] that figure.

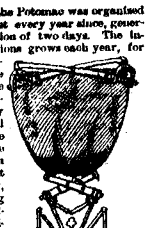
VETERANS CELEBRATE.

THE SOCIETY OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Its Coming Reunion at Orange, N. J. How the Corps Has Superseded the State as a Point of Identity and Pride—Interesting History.

The Society of the Potomac Veterans turn aside this year from their usual course and seek the seclusion of a quiet suburb for their annual reunion. Usually the meetings have been in the great cities. Last year it was celebrated with grand display on the field of Gettysburg. On June 12th and 13th the meetings will be held at Orange, N. J., a suburb renowned for its beautiful site and for its isolation from the bustle of traffic. The state of New Jersey is honored by this visit because it was famed in war for its brave soldiers, and Orange because it was so long the home of Gen. McClellan, organizer of the Army of the Potomac and its first commander.

The Society of the Potomac was organized in 1869 and has met every year since, generally holding a session of two days. The interest in the reunions grows each year, for the older the veterans become the merrier they are and the more disposed to rally around the social camp fire. The headquarters of the society have been from the start in New York city, and the managing officers have always been accessible to visitors and the society has prospered with its one annual session, growing in numbers and importance each year. The membership embraces soldiers who served east of the Alleghenies, and this includes many who at one time belonged in the Army of West Virginia, the Army of the James, all who served in the Gettysburg campaign, and the armies and detachments along the Atlantic coast.



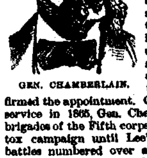
BADGE OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The reunion in 1888 at Gettysburg was the largest ever attempted by the society, and it sprung from a desire to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of the great battle of July, 1863, on the field. The fact that this field was in the north and centrally located made the plan proper and feasible, and resulted in a gathering unusual in the history of army reunions.

At the Gettysburg meeting Maj. Gen. J. L. Chamberlain was made president, and will preside at the reunion exercises at Orange.

Gen. Chamberlain is a type of the civilian volunteer of 1861-65. He was professor at Bowdoin college, and under a leave of absence entered the army as lieutenant colonel of the Twentieth Maine infantry.

With his regiment he performed good service at Gettysburg, engaged on Round Top and in the advance on Richmond, under Grant, as colonel of the Twentieth Maine, he led a brigade, and in the early assaults on Petersburg was wounded at the head of his command. For this Gen. Grant made him brigadier general on the spot, and the department at Washington and the senate confirmed the appointment. On resuming active service in 1865, Gen. Chamberlain led two brigades of the Fifth corps in the Appomattox campaign until Lee's surrender. His battles numbered over a score, all in the Army of the Potomac, during which he received six wounds. Since the war he has been governor of Maine three times, and now lives in New York city. The other officers of the society are Col. H. C. King, secretary; Col. Samuel Truesdell, treasurer, and Gen. George H. Sharpe, corresponding secretary.



GEN. CHAMBERLAIN.

The exercises at Orange will occupy two days. On Wednesday, June 12, the society will be called to order at 1:30 p. m. to listen to an oration by the Hon. Cortlandt Parker, of New Jersey. An original poem by the well known Will Carleton will be certain to reach the sentiments of the veterans, and several of the happiest talkers of the society will be heard. The business meetings of the society follow the exercises and the annual election takes place. The meetings of the society will be held in the rink, and in the evening a banquet will be spread at the Academy of Music.

On the second day, Thursday, June 13, the veterans will make an excursion up the Hudson to West Point and be specially welcomed by the superintendent of the Military academy, Gen. John G. Parke. Gen. Parke served in the Potomac district during the war, and in 1865 commanded the Ninth army corps as successor to Gen. Burnside. As a prominent member of the society he will extend the courtesies of West Point to his old comrades.

The opportunity of seeing West Point under such circumstances will be a pleasure to old soldiers. [illegible] West Point, aside from the beauty of its location, is an object of [illegible] excursion will [illegible] reunion of 1889.

A feature of the [illegible] of the Potomac [illegible] survivors of the different corps. There are now nine of these corps societies in the Army of the Potomac society, the First, Second, [illegible] pany. [illegible] by the changes and [illegible] years, and the veterans no longer look back to what you believe the war [illegible] during the war. The corps were [illegible] having regiments of several states. Now the rally word is the corps and not the state. At every meeting of the Army society the members of the corps assemble early in the morning at separate headquarters and hold a reunion of several hours. Other meetings are held during the year for social and historical purposes.

A VIEW AT WEST POINT.

The roster of corps presidents for 1889 is as follows: First, Maj. E. P. Halstead; 2d, Gen. Francis C. Barlow; 3d, Gen. Daniel E. Sickles; 5th, Gen. Fitz John Porter; 6th, Gen. Calvin E. Pratt; 9th, Col. R. H. I. Goddard; 19th, Gen. N. W. Day; signal corps, Gen. Jesse Merrill.

The places of meeting of the corps societies at Orange will be conspicuously posted at the hotels and elsewhere, and the comrades will assemble by corps at 10:30 a. m., having a three hours' session before the meeting of the army society.

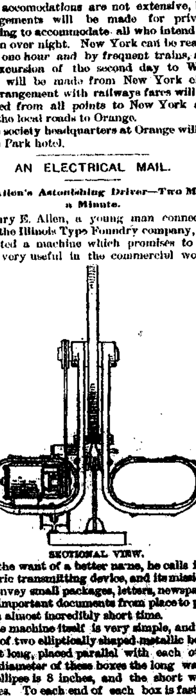
The gathering of the Potomac veterans at Orange is due to the invitation of the municipal authorities, the New England society and prominent soldiers of the state. The hotel accomodations are not extensive, but arrangements will be made for private boarding to accommodate all who intend to remain over night. New York can be reached in one hour and by frequent trains, and the excursion of the second day to West Point will be made from New York city. By arrangement with railways fares will be reduced from all points to New York and over the local roads to Orange.

The society headquarters at Orange will be at the Park hotel.

AN ELECTRICAL MAIL.

Mr. Allen's Astonishing Driver—Two Miles a Minute.

Henry E. Allen, a young man connected with the Illinois Type Foundry company, has invented a machine which promises to become very useful in the commercial world.



SECTIONAL VIEW.

For the want of a better name, he calls it an electric transmitting device, and its mission is to convey small packages, letters, newspapers and important documents from place to place in an almost incredibly short time.

The machine itself is very simple, and consists of two elliptically shaped metallic boxes, 6 feet long, placed parallel with each other. The diameter of these boxes the long way of the ellipse is 8 inches, and the short way 5 inches. To each end of each box is fastened a pair of metallic arms, the latter being suspended from the axes of two wheels about 2 feet in diameter. The machine is saddled upon an angle iron track, as shown in the annexed cut, a box being suspended from each side:

The track rests on iron gudgeons fastened on the top of high poles similar to telegraph poles, placed a little over a hundred feet apart. A wire cable runs in the hollow part of the rail, just beneath the upper surface, upon which the whole runs. It rests on the top of the iron gudgeons, the latter being carefully insulated. This cable is charged with electricity. There is a wire for the return current, completing the circuit. In one end of one of the metallic boxes is a small dynamo, or electric motor.

The small wheel runs along the side of the rail and so carries the electric current to the motor. The car can be stopped at any instant by disconnecting the circuit by a device attached to a gudgeon whenever it is desired to make a station, on the same principle as that employed by a telegraph operator in "tapping the wires" or disconnecting.

The whole machine will weigh about thirty-five pounds, and the metallic boxes will contain about as much cubic space as a bushel measure. It is now thought it can be operated at the rate of two to two and one-half miles a minute. The cost of construction will be in the neighborhood of $600 a mile. Of course it will not be useful in conveying articles of value through unsettled sections, as there would be danger of the contents being stolen unless the route were closely guarded. This would hardly be practicable. An idea of the inventor is that it will prove very useful in conveying stereotype plates to country newspapers. It will also be useful in distributing papers, and may prove very useful to city dailies. Mr. Allen expects to form a company to operate a line between Brooklyn and New York city.

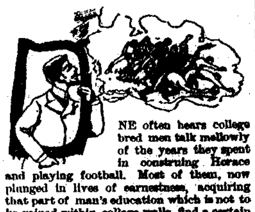
COMMENCEMENT DAYS.

HOW AND WHY THE FUTURE LOOKS SO BRIGHT TO THE COLLEGE BOY.

A Picture True as to Some Only—Modesty Comes of Experience—Sweet Girl Graduates—Bold Boy Graduates—Youthful Enthusiasm a Blessing.



ONE often hears college bred men talk mellowly of the years they spent in construing Horace and playing football. Most of them, now plunged in lives of earnestness, acquiring that part of man's education which is not to be gained within college walls, find a certain tender pleasure in recalling the days when they were so picturesquely verdant, so absolutely confident that meteoric careers awaited them as soon as they stepped forth from their alma mater and displayed their glittering attainments to a wondering world. For a college lad is the incarnation of hope—the personification of unreasonable faith.

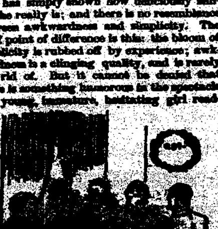
To his penetrative insight it seems that for some thousands of years this earth has been enshrouded by a spirit of wrongheadedness, and is now fruitlessly laboring on an unlighted sea of imbecility. Many a college boy is as consummate an egotist as a certain king of Spain who once said, "If I had been consulted at the creation of the world I might have spared the Maker some absurdities."

But it would be churlish to reprobate the college youth for his overweening confidence; it is a quality that will be sufficiently tempered when he has been buffeted by the world for a few years. Moreover, this very confidence, extravagant as it often is, not infrequently makes of them masterful men, when it has been modified by experience.

The distinguishing characteristic of the girl graduate is ingenuousness, and in these June commencement days she is filled with an anticipatory dread of the examination that will be matter for mirth when she is ten years older. She has tried for many months to harden herself to the examination idea, but now she has fallen into a woeful state of limpness. A black cloud of failure seems to hover over her, and her disquietude increases to positive horror as the fateful day draws nigh.

At last the day comes; after it is all over the girl cannot conceive how she managed to get through safely, and in after life she retains but a vague, hazy idea of the day's events. She dare not look at the crowd of friends who are watching her closely; she feels that she is very red in the face and that her movements are painfully awkward; she imagines, while reading her essay, that her voice is harsh and unnatural; while she is playing her selection on the piano ("Robert le Diable" or the aria in "Il Trovatore," which she has practiced hour after hour for many months, to the tremendous discomfiture of her older brother) she feels that she is performing with no expression whatever and that her fingers are like chunks of lead; in short, she feels dazed, half hypnotized, and when she has at last emerged into the clear, cold light of normal reason she is thoroughly convinced that she has made a spectacle of herself, and failed miserably; whereas she has done nothing of the sort. She has simply shown how deliciously simple she really is; and there is no resemblance between awkwardness and simplicity. The chief point of difference is this: the bloom of simplicity is rubbed off by experience; awkwardness is a clinging quality, and is rarely got rid of. But it cannot be denied that there is something humorous in the spectacle of a young, immature, hesitating girl reading [illegible]

HE WILL TURN THE WORLD OVER.



[illegible] Of course she must wear white; that is imperative, a precedent born of tradition. After deep travail she decides on her gown, and on the great day she is a vision. Even a plain girl looks well in a white dress, and the beauty of a good looking girl is enhanced a hundred fold when she is clad in white.

And then the commencement roses show off better by contrast on a ground of white. A collection of girl graduates looks like a large, kaleidoscopic bouquet.

The "boy graduate" is full of exuberance on graduation day. He is far from being abashed by the undisguised admiration of his friends, and assumes a stride like that of a dragoon. He does not flutter and shrink and look woefully cut up while reading his essay; he rolls the more turgid parts around in his mouth, and whenever he makes a point that he thinks is bound to have a tremendous effect, he looks up for the approving glances of the listeners. He is crude, of course; but he talks as though leading an army to attack a fortress, and shows many refreshing signs of latent power. His enthusiasm is a blessing; it will carry him over many a rough road before he is much older.

When the commencement is over and the time arrives for the girl graduates to part from each other to go to their respective homes they are all very much depressed and suspiciously damp about the eyes. They have become so thoroughly used to each other, have, in fact, budded into young womanhood together, and the separation is not easy. They vow to write to each other every day, and make promises to visit each other which they will afterwards find utterly impossible to fulfill. They swear eternal friendship, kiss each other good-by, and the wrench is over. They keep up a desultory correspondence for a while, and it is not long before their school days are but a memory. Many of them never see each other again, and all of them, five years after their graduation, have acquired such a vast amount of worldly wisdom that they look back to the commencement and marvel at how "ridiculously absurd" they must have been.

TEARFUL ADIEUX.

The college lads are not so wrought up over the separation. "Devilish glad to get away from the rookery" is an expression frequently heard. If you were to ask them "why?" they would say that of course the old trap is all right and all that sort o' thing, but that they want to get into the genuine swim—"plunge we in time's tempestuous flow." They talk grandly about what "a man" ought and ought not to be expected to do—in short, are riding very high horses indeed. They are very good friends with each other, but consider it a girl's luxury to feel sorry at parting. "See you in town," or "Drop you a line when I get home," is what they say, but if they happen to meet five years later they take a vast deal more pleasure in talking of their school days than do the whilome sweet girl graduates.

Two of the Indicted Men.

Here are portraits of Frank Woodruff and Detective Dan Coughlin, indicted at Chicago on the charge of having been connected with the murder of Dr. Cronin. Woodruff, it will be remembered, was arrested for horse stealing, and at first told a story, which he afterward denied, that he helped Dr. Cronin and certain other unnamed men in the disposition of the remains of a woman. Later he confessed that it was Dr. Cronin's body that was disposed of. Coughlin is the man who, it is claimed, ordered the now famous white horse.

A Song Writer's Neglected Grave.

There is a little green mound and humble marble slab in a secluded corner of Otterbein cemetery, about twelve miles north of the city, which marks the grave of the author of that famous ballad, "Darling Nellie Gray." A visitor to the spot learns from the inscription on the stone that it is the last resting place of Benjamin Russell Hanby.

The seclusion of the tomb, the neglect shown it by all save a few relatives, and the general ignorance of its location form another illustration of the forgetfulness of the human race. Notwithstanding the grave of the author of "Darling Nellie Gray" is forgotten and neglected, his own beautiful ballad has sculptured out for him a monument of memory which will endure the changes of centuries to come.—Columbus (O.) Press.

Horses in Street Car Traffic.

It is estimated that the number of horses and mules employed for street car service in this country and Canada is, in round numbers, 115,000, one being the smallest number owned by any one company, 7,000 the largest, and 105 the average. The general average of feed per animal is twenty-seven and three-quarter pounds, and the average for Kentucky is forty-five pounds. The daily consumption of food is approximately 1,600 tons, or [illegible] tons per annum, and the cost of feed per animal varies from seventeen to fifty cents per day, according to locality and season of the year.—New York Telegram.

THE WILLIAMSPORT FLOOD.

A Fultonian Tells of Some of His Experiences.

George H. Boigeol of this village, who is now engaged by the Mackey Fire Extinguisher Co., was in Williamsport, Pa., during the flood there. If it were not for the Johnstown flood it would have been considered more terrible. In a letter to his family he relates his experiences as follows:

"On Saturday morning I got up at four o'clock, the steam whistles were all blowing and water was beginning to come up very fast. It rose about three feet an hour until it was 34 feet above low water mark at 8 o'clock in the evening. After that it began to go down slowly. At about 10:30 the last span of the main bridge went down. I was on the roof of a building nearly all of Saturday afternoon. We were driven into a block by the water about noon and witnessed the destruction going on about us. About 5:45 p. m. a house went floating by with a man and woman on the roof. There were three bridges across the river here, two team and one railroad bridge—all are gone. About 200,000,000 feet of logs and many million feet of lumber went floating down stream that day.

It was Sunday noon before we were able to get out of the building, then we had to wade with the water over our rubber boots. People were huddled together in the second and third stories of buildings with nothing to eat. On Monday morning boats were running in the streets and there were cases where two or three dollars were paid to be rowed across the street. I do not think there were any houses in the city that did not have from two to eight feet of water in the first story. There was 8½ feet of water on the sidewalk in front of the house where we were. A number of lives were lost here but this is nothing to what it has been at Johnstown. People here were nearly crazed to get the news from other parts of the State and when a man reached here on foot Monday night with some Philadelphia papers he easily sold them at 50 and 75 cents each."

Oswego County Medical Society.

The sixty-ninth annual meeting of the above mentioned society was held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms yesterday. In the absence of the president, Dr. E. Frank Marsh, vice-president presided.

The meeting was opened by the reading of a report, "Of a case of Pyothorax operated on, using Netrious Oxide as an Anæsthetic." This was discussed at some length by Drs. Lee, Stockwell, Todd and Curtis. "Is Tuberculosis contagious?" was next discussed by Drs. Stockwell, Bacon and Kendall. The following which resembles Russian nomenclature to the non-professional was next discussed by Drs. Stockwell, Cooley, Todd and Marsh, viz. "In Uterine Hemorrhage occurring in the course of Purpura Hemorrhagica Simplex, should Quinine and Iron, or either of them be administered as a means of controlling the Menorrhagia?"

Dr. Todd next discussed the question "Will the use of Belladonna produce a rash like scarlet fever taken internally or externally?"

"The officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, E. Frank Marsh, Fulton; Vice-President, Percal M. Dowd, Oswego; Secretary, E. Rainier, Oswego; Treasurer, C. G. Bacon, Fulton; Censors, Jas. R. Stockwell, F. L. Harter, R. U. Cooley, Joseph Perioux.

[illegible] their patrons [illegible] business letters to all parts of the country some 10,000 small folders which set forth in a modest manner some of the advantages possessed by the village. The circulars read as follows:

"Fulton—on the Oswego River—rapidly becoming a city; has a population, both sides of the river, of 7,000; has remarkably fine scenery; is a competing point to four important cities—New York, Boston, Chicago and Buffalo; has new buildings already in progress to cost $200,000; has twenty-six passenger trains arriving and departing daily; has a cheese market on which is sold the product of thirty cheese factories. Owing to the growth of the town the Post office has been changed from third to second class. High School and Academy stands this year third in New York State outside of a few city schools. Many foreign pupils in attendance every year. Employs thirty teachers in all schools. Has six flouring mills—capacity 1,000 barrels daily; has two of the largest and best patent roller buckwheat mills in the U. S.; has just across the river a Woolen Manufacturing Co., whose property is valued at upwards of a million dollars. Employs twelve hundred hands; has large Tannery; has three immense Paper Mills, Machine shops; has large Gun Works, now being built and when equipped the plant will be worth $50,000 to $60,000. We want more such. Has Brown Stone Quarries and the Brick Yards—Box Factory, employs 40 hands; its system of Electric lighting is unexcelled; has excellent Water Works, with the purest of water; has Street Cars; a beautiful Park; has nine Churches; has an Opera House; has three Railroads and one Canal.

The village is beautifully shaded and is a most charming spot for homes.

The Village has already become a business center for a large Agricultural district, including the Towns of Volney and Granby and parts of Scriba, Palermo, Hastings, Schroeppel, Lysander, Hannibal, Constantia, Victory, Ira and Sterling.

FULTON'S WATER POWER.

One of the finest in the State of New York—the Oswego River.

A splendid chain of lakes in Central New York, holding back the water in the rainy seasons, furnishes a series of reservoirs and feeders of this deep and broad and beautiful river. Hence no serious flood, nor aggravating drouths, but a uniform, abundant and reliable flow of water the year round, rise and fall not to exceed 6 feet.

Two powers, one a natural falls, the other a substantial stone dam of 15 feet fall each, produce from 8,000 to 12,000 horse power. Not over one-half of this is utilized at present.

A new and substantial stone hydraulic race just constructed at the upper power—Also one now being constructed at the lower power—close to these competing railroads and the Oswego canal, offers unparalleled inducements to manufactnrers seeking cheap and reliable water power, easily accessable to the markets of the world.

To Fulton with its schools, its churches, its quiet Sundays, its well paved streets, its fisheries, its pleasant park and pleasant drives, and its security for life and property, we cordially invite those in want of a home or a safe place for investment.

To Manufacturers we say ALL HAIL! This is a live town and will be livelier. We shall offer every inducement to secure YOU and also to secure 15,000 inhabitants within the next three years. Address FULTON BUSINESS MEN'S ASSOCIATION for any kind of information regarding this growing village of Fulton. Live, active, progressive men are wanted. Come and see us at FULTON, New York.

Sandy Creek's Gas.

SANDY CREEK, June 10.—To-day about 11 a. m. the gas well drillers at the depth of 740 feet struck a flow of gas that exceeds ten times over any previous flow. There is a two inch pipe leading about four or five feet from the well, that has been burning night and day for the past month, and producing a blaze from 22 to 30 feet high, and at the same time producing enough gas to run the engine. To-day, however, as the drill struck through a layer of slate rock into lime rock, it commenced flowing with such pressure that it filled the driller's face and eyes full of water, mud and stone, and he had to call for help. When the drill was drawn from the well it blew the chips and stone out to the height of 50 feet. The pieces of stone were an inch square and smaller and there was a perfect shower of them. As the news spread through the town, the inhabitants of Sandy Creek and Lacona flocked to the well by scores. The flow is so strong that the men cannot drill any more at present and the gas that escapes at the top of the well sounds like the steam from a locomotive. It is thought that there is a sufficient amount of gas for heating the two villages and also to light the whole town.—Syracuse Courier.

After the business meeting the veterans adjourned to the hall for supper. After it had been enjoyed the historian of the regiment, F. W. Squires read an excellent article. Maj. Stetson's Big Spectacular Uncle Tom's Cabin Company, Playing Under Canvas Will Appear in Fulton Tuesday, June 18th, on the Circus Grounds.

Everyone well knows this is the only way to produce this grand old Spectacular Drama that has been so closely interwoven with the affairs of our nation. Nothing has been left undone in producing this drama. Among the many new features will be Col. Sawyer's negro hunting; Siberian and Cuban blood-hounds; Eva's intelligent pony, Nellie—the pet of all ladies and children; the sagacious donkey, George, introduced by Marks, sr.; Edison's electric parlor light, a complete innovation upon the old system of using calcium light; St. Clair's residence by moonlight, the most beautiful stage picture of a Southern plantation ever beheld; exciting steamboat race and collision between the steamers R. E. Lee and Natchez, the grandest and most effective stage illusion ever presented; grand realistic cotton field scene, with plantation refrains, and field hands at work; thrilling floating ice scene, introducing the savage blood hounds in the realistic blood curdling chase after Eliza escaping across the Ohio river; Eva in the heavenly realms.

See the wonderful street parade, just as the big bill said; the grand five thousand dollar Calliope, a new and novel instrnment never before seen in this country; two brass bands, the jubilee singers; Eva and her smallest pony in the world, costing over a dollar a pound; the savage blood-hounds; Marks and his donkey. They are all there. Admission 25 cents. Doors open at 2 p. m. and 7 p. m.

[illegible] The property [illegible] and about the city by the [illegible] of the Chesapeake and Ohio canal, which are completely wrecked in many places. The canal will be abandoned, as the repairs would cost several million dollars more than the company is worth. The old bed will probably share the fate of the Pennsylvania canal way, which was filled in and utilized for a railway. The Baltimore and Ohio railway will make an attempt to obtain possession.

The canal has chiefly been used for the past twenty years in the shipment of coal, and its abandonment is a great blow to the business interest of the sleepy old city of Georgetown. The canal was one of the oldest in this country. When Washington was President he conceived the scheme of a canal following the general direction that was afterwards adopted, and it became a hobby with him. Public interest was not easily excited in favor of the project however, and it was not until John Adams was President that the first ground was broken. President Adams went out to Georgetown through the villainous road of those days with a brass band and a crowd of several thousand people and a spade. With all the people looking on and the band severely lacerating the air, Mr. Adams tried to stick the spade in the earth. It struck a root, but the Presidents blood being up, he flung aside his coat and struck again and again until he had successfully landed in a wheel-barrow a pile of earth. Thereupon the people cheered wildly and the President went home and wrote the whole story, including a synopsis of his speech, in his diary. The people of Washington were solely disappointed that the canal did not go through the city and it was predicted that Washington would forever remain a puny village, while Georgetown would go on to greater and greater glories, time without end. Alexandria was also a proud commercial city at that time. To day the commerce of both towns is a meagre farce and only crazy ghosts of great store-houses stand, gaunt and deserted along the river fronts for old crones to point out and bewail the past.

The local subscriptions to the Johnstown sufferers fund pour in from all classes of people. Politicians and merchants vie with each other in giving. Amid all this graceful and grateful evidence of human sympathy, there are however instances of petty meanness and niggardliness that are surprising. I saw a subscription list yesterday that had been through the Pension Bureau. There were two endowments together that were in striking contrast, the former being for a contribution of twenty-five cents, and the latter for five dollars. I happen to know about both. The man who subscribed 25 cents has been ten years at the public crib, draws $18,000 a year salary for work that would disgrace a school boy and has a pension of $30, per month. He is accredited curious to record, to the State of Pennsylvania. The woman who gave $5.00 is a bright, cheerful little widow who is struggling along on $60 per month with two children to support, one a cripple. I saw on the same list dozens of 25 cents subscription from men whose salary should make the sum the merest trifle to them. The most miserly class of people I know are mean Government clerks. When a Government employe begins to be over-economical he becomes an expert at it. He smokes villainous tobacco in his office and begs cigarettes of his fellows to smoke on the street. Congress should give this sort of people a chance to be generous, by returning to the issuing of half-pence. A cent is too large a coin for them to give away.

Many wagons are going about town collecting clothing and other supplies for the devasted region of Pennsylvania. Wednesday night a train of thirteen freight cars left this city with orders to run to Johnstown on passenger time. The car were packed with supplies from this place, Baltimore and Philadelphia. A second train of nine cars left Thursday night. This train load was made up entirely here.

The President had a busy time Wednesday and yesterday between the office seekers and the needs of the Johnstown sufferers. All day long the War department officials were consulting him as to what actions to take and he was in constant wire communication with General Beaver. The number of Congressmen who called on Wednesday were larger than on any former day for a month.

The Little Utica Lodge of Good Templars will give a strawberry and ice cream festival at their lodge rooms in Jacksonville Thursday evening.

Nathan Palmer, an old resident of Jacksonville, was buried Sunday. The funeral services were held at the Baptist church at 2 o'clock conducted by Rev. Mr. Curtis of Lysander.

After a week of almost constant rain we had a shower Sunday afternoon that capped the climax. It was one of the heaviest rain falls we have witnessed in several years and when the shower was over more water stood on the surface of the ground than at any time in many a year. Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, June 10.

The cheese market was slightly off to-day, and stands just where it did two weeks ago. New York advices were very discouraging to-day, and buyers are anxious to get their cheese to the city early, lest a decline the latter part of the week should cause them a loss on their purchases. As a rule, also, salesmen were desirous to get rid of their stock even at the decline. Some have sold pretty close to the hoop, in order to to be able to hold next week if they think it politic to do so. It was rumored that a fraction higher than anything quoted was obtained for a few lots, but no such quotation was given in. Probably 8¼c, will seem full high before the week is over. That is about what shippers seem willing to pay this season, and such a price f. o. b. means about 7¾c. in the country.

Following are the quotations for the day:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
7	700	7¾
96	8,151	7⅞
28	2,680	8
25	2,049	8⅛
23	2,195	8¼
179	16,387
	1,653	Com.
Total	18,040

Ruling price 7⅞c. Transactions one year ago 17,013 boxes; ruling price 8cts. Two years ago, 16,758 boxes, ruling price 9⅛c.

About the usual amount of butter sold at 17@20 cents, there being rather more than heretofore at the last named price.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, June 10.

Cheese—The market to-day did not quite come up to expectations, either of buyers or salesmen. From favorable New York reports of the latter part of last week it was thought to-day's trade would show a firmer market; but dairymen may perhaps congratulate themselves that prices have not declined, rates being unchanged from last Monday. The hot muggy weather may have slight influence, but the trouble seems to lie back of that and with the shippers, who oppose any tendency to advance in prices. Factorymen showed no disposition to hold back stocks, as our list will readily show. The cheese henceforth sent from here will be wholly grass stock, and there is a strong feeling that we have seen lowest prices. The production is not as much as some expected, in fact through this section we think dairymen have on an average fewer cows than they had last year.

The transactions are:

Lots	Boxes	Price
34	1,871	8
68	5,485	8¼
1	149	p. t.
9	331	Com.
112	7,836
Farm dairy	630
Total	8,466

Farm dairies—There were 630 boxes farm cheese sold, the bulk at 8⅛c., the range being 8@8¾c., with but one lot at the latter price.

Butter—Sales of 20 packages of dairy butter were made at 16c., and 14 packages of creamery at the same price.

AT FULTON.

Twenty factories were represented with 1713 boxes of cheese which sold at from 7⅞ cents to 8⅛ cents. This made the price paid ⅛c. above the Utica ruling.

Public attention is hereby called to a remedy which acts in the speedy and painless removal of Hard and Soft Corns, Callouses and Bunions.

Price 25 cents.

Sold by K. F. Salmon, Fulton, N. Y.

Directions,

DO NOT CUT YOUR CORNS.

Apply the medicine to the corn with finger until a coating is formed over it. Do NOT RUB, giving it time to get dry before disturbing it. Apply the medicine freely every night and every morning for four days in succession; on the fifth day soak the feet in water as hot as can be well borne for a few moments, when the corn can be easily removed. Do not use a sharp knife—no cutting is neccessary. Some corns can be removed easily, while others require just a little persuasion. In some cases, particularly with bunions, it may be necessary to repeat the treatment, which requires just as many applications as first.

The medicine is not a caustic, and causes no pain; if any is produced it is caused by the pressure of the shoe. After the removal of the corn, dry the foot well and give it a single application. The coating thus formed will protect the tender part until the [illegible] It is not recommended for warts nor [illegible]

A new law has just gone into effect which it will be well for dealers to heed. Section 270 of chapter 170 of the laws of 1889, makes it a misdemeanor to sell malt or spirituous liquors to any person under 16 years of age; to receive in pledge any article of jewelry or wearing apparel from a person under 16, also to sell to any person under that age either cigars, cigarettes or tobacco in any form.

Thursday the derrick used in removing rock from the pit being blasted for a channel to the pulp mill, fell and struck a team owned by James Sears, killing one horse instantly and injuring the other. Wm. Newsbaum, the driver, was hit on the shoulder and badly injured. Peter Youngs narrowly escaped being killed. The accident occurred by one of the guy ropes breaking.—Observer.

An extremely severe rain storm occurred here on Sunday afternoon about three o'clock. Although violent and accompanied by an abundance of thunder and lightning and some hail it was not as severe as in some other parts of the county. At Oswego it was particularly severe. Large hailstones fell. The fall of rain was among the heaviest on record. It fell at the rate of 1.86 inches an hour. No very serious damage resulted to crops in this vicinity as was at first reported.

Charles Johnson Takes Large Quantities of Morphine.

Charles, better known around town as "Chuck" Johnson made a deliberate attempt to commit suicide yesterday. He had been on a spree which had lasted for two weeks or more. On yesterday morning he made a systematic visit to all the drug stores in town and got together all the morphine that he was able to buy by telling druggists different stories. At one place he told that "he wanted it for his mother," at another he stated that "he could not sleep and that he must have some." He went the rounds of the drug stores a second time and at some of them a third time, but was generally unsuccessful in securing more.

About 9:30 in the forenoon he took the accumulated doses which he had secured and walked up to the switch on Second near Oneida street and laid down on the track evidently with the intention of allowing the R. W. & O. freight train which was nearly due to run over him. He was discovered there and taken away by someone. Next he was seen by officer Ed. Jones leaning over the railing of the canal bridge. When aroused by Jones he stated that he had taken morphine and Dr. Miller, who happened to be near was called. Johnson was taken to Miller's office where a powerful emetic was given. In a short time Johnson had passed into a death like stupor from which it was thought he never would awake. Drs. Miller and H. L. Lake worked on him almost continuously from shortly after 10 o'clock until six in the evening. Stimulants were injected hypodermically and anodytes given.

Johnson is unmarried and about 35 years of age. He lives with his parents on Utica street and had been drinking very heavily of late. Probably in a dazed manner he figured that the best way out of it was to take all the morphine he could get hold of. How much he took it is impossible to tell, the doctors think 20 grains. He is reported to be out of danger this morning unless paralysis of the heart or something of that nature should result from his terrible experience.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

Police Justice Sharp was busy disposing of cases this morning.

William Merriam who last May deserted his wife and family and skipped for Michigan with a woman named LaMay returned of his own accord on Sunday. He was arrested by Officer Poole on a warrant sworn out by Overseer of the Poor H. S. Gardner on May 29. Mr. Gardner appeared this morning and asked that the prisoner be discharged as he had promised to live at home and support his family. He was discharged.

"Newt" Fuller was pulled in last night by Officer Jones charged with public intoxication. He was fined $5 or thirty days after promising to keep straight for six months. He was profuse in his promises and after paying $5 took his departure from the court room.

"Billy" Collins was about town yesterday securing advice as to the best manner for killing his wife. He was drunk and abusive to those that did not give him suitable advice. At Taylor Bros, knife factory he threatened to experiment on "Herb" Taylor and was ejected from the foundry. He was arrested by Officer Poole and sent up for six months.

William DeLong hired a horse and buggy of Rowlee to visit a very sick sister. When he did not return and it was ascertained that he had no sister, Officer Alonzo Clark was sent after him with a warrant. He captured him near Seneca Hill hilarious and having a good time generally. His Honor gave him his choice of 120 days in the "rotery" or $10 fine. He did not seem to consider his time worth $10 so he was sent.

Fred Ingersoll was arrested Monday charged with stealing eight flower jars from "Nick" Craver. One was found at the Willow Tree hotel the balance he said he had thrown into the canal. On account of his extreme cussedness in the matter the judge gave him 60 days or $40 fine. He paid the money and was discharged.

REV. CHARLES HUDSON SMITH NOT DEAD.

The Missing Clergyman Formerly of Fulton Turns up in San Francisco.

The following from the New York World is concerning the former pastor of the Presbyterian church of this village who mysteriously disappeared from Dorchester on April last:

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—"Rev. Charles Hudson Smith, of the Dorchester Pilgrim church, Boston, who mysteriously disappeared from Boston April 9, spent all last night in the city prison, having been arrested at the instigation of his brother-in-law, who saw him at the park yesterday. Superintendent of Police Smalls, of Boston, sent a communication to Chief Crowly about two months ago asking him to keep a lookout for the preacher and to arrest him on sight, as he was of unsound mind. Mr. Smith was released to-day, as there was no charge to hold him. The clergyman says he left home owing to family trouble, and he declares that he will never return. He says that after leaving home he spent the first night in Charles River Park. He had determined to commit suicide, but at the last moment his courage deserted him.

Mr. Smith dates his misfortunes from the time of his marriage. He says at first his wife and himself lived happily, but after the birth of the cihld his mother-in-law made things very disagreeable for him, and as he did not want the notoriety of a divorce suit he concluded to leave Boston.

"At the time I left Boston," continued Mr. Smith, "I was as crazy as ever a man was, and I did not recover my senses until two weeks afterwards, when I found myself in Montreal. What I have done is blamable, and I seem to deserve the condemnation of everyone, but when I am properly understood and everything is explained I will not appear so culpable. Although I have cast myself off from the church, I still believe in her doctrines and am satisfied that, before my fall from grace, I was a concientious, faithful minister who had done good for a great many people."

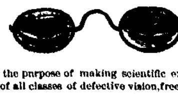
DR. A. MEYER,

The well-known, practical and scientific optician and specialist in lenses for the eye, from New York city, formerly from Ithaca, N. Y., for two weeks, beginning Thursday, June 6th, 1889.



For the purpose of making scientific examinations of all classes of defective vision, free. Great opportunity to have your eyesight made perfect. People made to see who have not been able to read for years. The only optician that visits this place who make scientific tests of the eyes. In cases of Astigmatism, Presbyopia, Myopia, Hypermetropia, and Diplopia DR. MEYER has no superior. Let everybody try reading this article. Also to look at a distance with each eye separately. If they are not alike, lose no time before consulting an optician, as you have reason to be alarmed.

Astigmatism is a deformity that causes pain in and over the eyes through the head, sometimes extending to the small of the back. Sunlight also causes pain in and over the eyes and gaslight is often unindurable when in church or theatre. This trouble if not corrected in time will cause serious trouble.

Presbyopia is the common failure of sight, which nine persons out of ten experience between the age of 35 and 55. So common is this failure of sight that few are alarmed at its coming, but go to some place where spectacles are sold and purchase the first pair which seems to improve the sight, regardless of the consequences. This practice is dangerously wrong. In adjusting spectacles for the failure of sight, the utmost care should be taken to ascertain if other difficulties exist. It is necessary to test each eye separately, as the eyes are frequently found to be unlike and if fitted with glasses of the same focus will do irreparable injury.

Myopia or near sight. People with this difficulty see perfectly when objects are held near the eyes, but distant objects are dim and often invisible; for instance the person may be able to read perfectly and yet be unable to see the time on a large dial, or distinguish features a few feet distant. Near sighted children often injure their eyes trying to see during black-board exercises. It is the duty of teachers to report all such cases to parents, and their duty to see that the child is fitted with proper spectacles, as it is very dangerous to let this trouble go uncorrected.

Hypermetropia is a malformation of the eyeball and is always congenital. All such cases should use spectacles as early as the child is capable of taking care of them and should not be allowed to read, write or sew until the spectacles are adjusted.

Symptoms of this Trouble. A patient presents himself complaining that the eyes ache when looking at a near object: that when reading lines and words—which are at first distinct enough—when looked at for a few minutes run into one another and become misty. He states that if he closes his eyes for a short time, or rubs them, the print again becomes distinct but soon fades as before. Such symptoms are sure indications of Hypermetropia, and is dangerous to let them go uncorrected.

Hereditary defects. If a mother in early life is troubled with Hypermetropia or Astigmatism her children are more than likely to inherit the same, and for this reason thousands of children to-day are born with defective eyes, and at an early age becomes apparent through the vision. Such children cannot use spectacles too soon. All are invited to call. Consultation and Tests Free. Remember the time and place.

The undersigned take pleasure in stating that we have examined most of the lenses of Dr. A. Meyer, and give it as our belief that he is entire master of his art as an optician. He was able to demonstrate the adaptability of his lenses to almost if not all disorders of the vision not depending upon organic diseases. It is furthermore our belief that he is a candid, honest gentleman, and no one need feel afraid of being humbugged who may trust to his opinion. The credentials in his possession are from persons of character and respectability; quite a number are known to us, and we can vouch for their standing in the optical profession.

The Y. M. C.—Remarkable Progress

The recent International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association of the United States and Canada, held at Philadelphia—directs attention anew to one of the most remarkable and fruitful organizations for the advancement of Christ's kingdom which the Church has produced. The small proportion of young men in the membership of our Christian churches, and the utter failure of the churches to reach a very large majority of the young men in cities and large towns, has made such an organization as the Y. M. C. A., which just fits into this needy and unoccupied field, an absolute necessity.

Under these circumstances, the rapid growth of the Y. M. C. A., both in number and scope, is not to be wondered at. Its growth has been most marked on this side of the, although by no means slight in Great Britain, Germany and Holland. There are at present in the various Christian countries of the world 3,788 distinct Young Men's Christian Associations, of which 1,194 are in this country and 79 in the Dominion of Canada. In great Britain there are 610 associations; in Germany, 673; in Holland, 459; in Switzerland, 380; in Denmark, 85; in France, 61; and in the rest of Europe, 154. The number in Asia is 50; in Madagascar and South Africa, 12; in Australia, 12; and in Tasmania, New Zealand and the Hawaiian Islands, 2, 4, and 4 respectively. Besides these, Chili has 2, the West Indies 5, and Bermuda, Mexico, Argentine Republic and British Guiana, one association each. For the year 1888, 1,110 of the 1,373 associations in the United States and Canada report an aggregate membership of 195,455 and an active membership of 94,120. They own property consisting of association buildings, real estate, libraries, furniture etc., valued at $8,944,685. There are 497 Women's auxiliaries or committees, 276 college associations, 39 colored associations, 3 Indian associations and 2 Indian college associations, 74 Railroad Branch associations, 163 organized Boys Departments, and 81 associations, reporting special work for commercial travelers, 522 associations own libraries, aggregating 385,728 volumes, and 648 support reading-rooms. A daily average attendance at the association rooms of 41,446 is reported by 586 associations. One of the most interesting items for the year is that of 7,619 situations secured through 277 associations.

Perhaps one of the most useful departments of Y. M. C. A. work is that of the college associations, which have been largely instrumental in inaugurating the missionary movement, resulting already in more than 3,000 volunteers from our institutions of learning, pledged to go as missionaries into foreign fields.

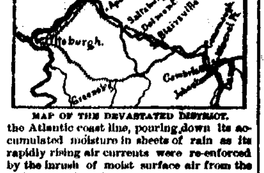
[illegible] HISTORY OF AMERICA.

Sketch of the Meteorological Conditions That Led to the Aerial Flood That Wiped Out Ten Thousand Lives on the Conemaugh.

It is still too early to contemplate with any degree of calmness the awful horror at Johnstown, Pa., by which thousands upon thousands of human lives and millions on millions of property were lost. Correspondents are still telling the awful story, but it is yet too early to give authentic pictures of the terrible desolation. A map of the devastated region is given with this. The New York Sun summarized the meteorological conditions of the rainfall, which, even had there been no bursting reservoir above Johnstown, would yet have caused one of the most memorable floods of these times.

On Friday morning a great storm center which had, as usual, advanced from the northwest, lay in a vast oval, narrowing toward the south, which stretched from Lake Huron to South Carolina. Behind it, both on the northwest and on the southwest, were two strongly developed areas of high pressure, which crowded close upon the low storm center and created steep barometric gradients, the natural result of which was high winds blowing down the atmospheric slopes toward the area of depression.

On the Atlantic side was a still greater high pressure area, or anti-cyclone, whose center of pressure over Nova Scotia and New Brunswick lay exactly in the path that the storm would naturally follow. The cyclone was thus surrounded, and its progress was arrested, so that it remained per force hovering over the country between the lakes and the Atlantic coast line, pouring down its accumulated moisture in sheets of rain as its rapidly rising air currents were re-enforced by the inrush of moist surface air from the seaboard and the lakes.



MAP OF THE DEVASTATED DISTRICT.

This was a condition of things remarkably like that which prevailed during the blizzard, for then, too, a cyclone from the west, closely pressed from behind by areas of high barometer, had its progress arrested by an immovable anti-cyclone resting upon the ocean. In the case of the blizzard the cyclonic center was disrupted, splitting up into two storms, one of which moved north and lost itself in the wilds of Canada.

The same thing occurred on Friday night when the cyclone, whose very center had hung over western Pennsylvania all day, was divided, the high pressure from the southwest having apparently been driven into it like a wedge. This time the line of retreat of the principal part of the cyclone was toward the southeast, across Virginia and North Carolina, which in turn received its floods of rain.

By Saturday the northern half of the disrupted cyclone seems to have gathered its forces again, and an unusually deep depression was formed over Lake Huron. The anti-cyclone centered over Nova Scotia in the meantime had not given way an inch, and so the advance of this northern cyclone, as far as it showed any advance at all after the disruption of Friday night, was straight toward the north, although the regular course of such storms is eastward.

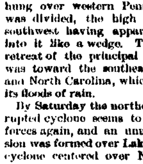
All over the great area covered by the storm on Friday and Saturday the symbols of the weather maps show that the land was hidden by a dark curtain of clouds, under the center of which the tremendous tragedy of the Conemaugh was enacted.

It is not often that so broad a region is completely veiled from the sight of our possible contemporaries in other planets, and it is an interesting reflection that astronomers in Mars, armed with telescopes equal to ours, could unquestionably have beheld the great cloud that brought gloom and disaster to so fair a spot of the earth, just as our astronomers have often watched the advance of vast clouds across the surface of Mars, and wondered what was going on beneath them.

WEISS AND TSCHIGORIN.

The Chess Players Who Succeeded in Playing to a Final Draw.

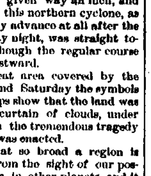
The international chess tournament at New York wound up with a draw between Max Weiss, of Vienna, Austria, and Michael Tschigorin, of St. Petersburg, Russia, for $1,000.



WEISS.

Weiss was born at Szered, Hungary, in 1857. He has played in several international chess contests in Europe, and was tied with Mr. Blackburne each time. In 1885, at Hamburg, he tied with Blackburne, Mason, Dr. Tarrasch and Englisch for second to sixth prize, Isador Gunsburg winning first prize.

Mr. Weiss has the reputation of being a remarkably sound chess player and extremely difficult to win a game from. By some he is regarded as the coming chess player of the world.



TSCHIGORIN.

Tschigorin was born at St. Petersburg in 1850. In the Berlin tourney, in 1881, he tied with Winauer for third and fourth prizes. He also played in a tourney at Vienna in 1872, and gained fourth prize in London in 1883. He played recently at Havana, where he was beaten by Steinitz. He is a man of medium height and weight, of dark complexion, black hair and prominent features.

A Growing Regard.

English papers remark with surprise the growing regard shown for America in that country, as evidenced by the warm reception given to our colors whenever they are displayed. This is particularly noticed at theatrical exhibitions when the flags of various nations are called into use. Next to their own national colors the American flag receives by far the most attention, and the German the least.—San Francisco Chronicle.

100 Doses One Dollar

If there ever was a specific for any one complaint then Carter's Little Liver Pills are a specific for Sick Headache, and every woman should know this. They are not only a positive cure, but a sure preventive if taken when the approach is felt. Carter's Little Liver Pills act directly on the liver and bile, and in this way remove the cause of disease without first making you sick by a weakening purge. If you try them you will not be disappointed.

Two large apple trees now in full bloom are growing from the roof of a building on the farm of George Newhart, Lehigh county, Pa.

You hardly realize that it is medicine, when taking Carter's Little Liver Pills; they are very small; no bad effects; all troubles from torpid liver are relieved by their use.

The Remarkable Cures

Which have been effected by Hood's Sarsaparilla are sufficient proof that this medicine does possess peculiar curative power. In the severest scrofula or salt rheum, when other prepartion had been powerless, the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla has brought about the happy results. The case of Miss Sarah C. Whittier, of Lowell, Mass., who suffered terribly from scrofulous sores; that of Charles A. Roberts, of East Wilson, N. Y., who had thirteen abscesses on his face and neck; that of Willie Duff, of Walpole, Mass., who had hip disease and scrofula so bad that physicians said he could not recover, are a few of the many instances in which wonderful cures were effected by this medicine.

Shocking Accident.

So read the headlines of many a newspaper column, and we peruse with palpitating interest the details of the catastrophy, and are deeply impressed by the sacrifice of human lives involved. Yet thousands of men and women are falling victims every year to that terrible disease, consumption (scrofula of the lungs), and they and their friends are satisfied to believe the malady incurable. Now, there could be no greater mistake. No earthly power, of course, can restore a lung that is entirely wasted, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will rapidly and surely arrest the ravages of consumption, if taken in time. The civilized world is still amazed and horrified at the magnitude of the Johnstown disaster.

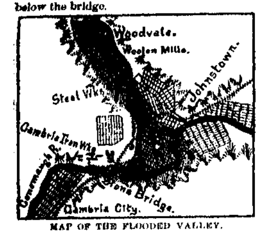
The little Conemaugh now ripples over a bed of mud and sand, a shallow stream of clear water, and it is almost impossible for the observer to realize that but a few days ago a raging, turbid flood filled the little valley almost to the house tops. Over all the flat, where mud and sand have been deposited to a depth of several feet, many hundred corpses still lie buried, hundreds, thousands more were consumed in the burning drift, and for forty miles down the valley, on every flat, in every thicket, drift and shallow, the eddying waters laid the dead. Of the 30,000 people living in the valley above the railroad bridge, not more than 20,000 are yet accounted for—though, doubtless, many more will be found alive—and many hundreds more were lost below the bridge.



MAP OF THE FLOODED VALLEY.

[The places where cross lines are to be seen are the parts that are utterly destroyed, not leaving a dozen houses standing, except at the place shown by the dark square, where a dozen or so of damaged buildings stand. Johnstown borough proper occupied about the space bounded by the railroad and the two rivers, and contained practically all the business blocks and fine residences of the city.]

The survivors of each town in the path of destruction have a different story to tell, as the observers saw the flood from different points of view. First are the few residents in the cottages by the fated reservoir. Next is South Fork, the hamlet where the flood entered Conemaugh creek. Below that Mineral Point, Conemaugh and Woodvale were completely swept away; then the flood, driving before it a mass of rolling houses and timber, broke in full force on Johnstown, swept it to ruin and lodged all this accumulated debris of destruction against the great railroad bridge. And that lodgment is probably responsible for one-half the deaths; for of those who had free course to float, whether below or above the bridge, a majority were saved. In the whirlpools created by the water seeking an outlet under the bridge, and in the crush of timbers, the stoutest swimmer fared as the weakest child—it was death to all.

Below the bridge lie Cambria City, Sheridan, Cooperdale, Saug Hollow, Conemaugh, Furnace and Nineveh in the order named, and it is a curious fact, but quite natural, that the people of those towns realized the full force of the calamity sooner than those in and near Johnstown. They had awful proof of it. Think of being suddenly roused by the roar of a coming flood, of fleeing to the hillside and looking down upon a valley filled by a raging torrent in which hundreds of corpses were visible, whirled about and mangled against floating timber, and on the surface of which hundreds of people on logs, planks and rafts were vainly screaming for help. Then was illustrated that strange truth that man is seldom so weak in great emergencies as he would naturally expect to be; while a few were completely unmanned, very many felt their nerves strung to the tension of steel and did and dared most nobly. Many a boy, many an humble man proved that day that the material of a hero was in him.

Perhaps the clearest view of the calamity, in historical order, may be gained by taking the testimony of the first witnesses at each point as the flood moved, and then the view at that point after it passed. Aside from the residents at the reservoir who seem reluctant to speak (there is an important question as to responsibility) the first to realize what was coming were Engineer H. M. Bennett and Conductor S. W. Keltz, of an extra freight train that was lying at South Fork when the dam broke. Suddenly they heard, above the sound of falling rain, a roar coming down the valley and soon saw a huge wall of water—"it looked 150 feet high"—rushing on them with the speed of a race horse.

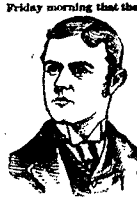
With a loud cry to waken the men in the caboose at the rear, but in vain, they detached the engine and rushed down the valley. Looking back they saw the train dashed to fragments before the flood. Theirs was an awful race for life, the flood gaining rapidly. With less than half a minute to spare they reached a high grade, checked the engine, jumped to the hillside and climbed to safety. Then they saw a curious sight: the watery volume had driven houses and trees before it till they were massed so tightly in the narrow gorge as to form a moving dam; a comparatively small amount of water passed through it, but the awful force behind drove it on, rolling it over and over till it was ground to splinters and scattered in the wider section below.

[illegible] A [illegible] MORGUE.

[illegible]

and then the waters came with a roar and a rush. This lasted for two hours, and then it began to flow more steadily."

But there was another and—it may be said without undue reflection—a far more heroic witness. This was Engineer John G. Parke, one of the heroes of the valley. He said early Friday morning that the dam would give way before night, and set thirty Italians to work making a sluice; but they were too late. Seeing that the dam must soon go, he mounted a fast horse and galloped down the valley, warning all he saw and telegraphing from South Fork station to Johnstown. Some hundreds fled to the hills, the vast majority said it was only the old cry of "Wolf!" which they had often heard, and remained to be overwhelmed.



"PAUL REVERE" PARKE.

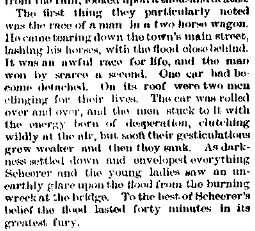
"By noon," says Mr. Parke, "everybody in the valley knew, or should have known, of their imminent danger.

"Three hours later my gravest fears were more than realized. It is an erroneous idea, however, that the dam burst. It simply moved away. The water gradually ent into the embankment until there was nothing left but a frail bulwark of wood. This finally split asunder."

Of the observers in Johnstown all were too thoroughly engaged to note anything but the nearness of death; but a few from the adjacent heights saw the whole calamity, and of all these the story of none is more pathetic than that of Mr. William Scheerer, the young banker of Newark, N. J. He was in the last car of the train that left Pittsburg that morning and reached Johnstown at 10 a. m. There was a long delay. The rain was falling in torrents; the streets of the town were already flooded; people were going about in skiffs and calling gayly to each other at the rare sport of such an occasion. At Conemaugh there was another long delay. None of the passengers felt uneasy, though they saw the flood in the creek rising rapidly. Suddenly the porter rushed in, deadly pale, and cried out that there was danger. At the same instant the engine gave a long and loud scream—the next instant it was overturned into the stream.

With one impulse the passengers rushed out on the side opposite the stream. There was a hill near, but a gully between. Three ladies were with him; one lost heart at the gully, turned back and was drowned. The others reached the hill and saw the train swallowed up. In five minutes more the whole valley was a roaring sea, and the group on the hill, drenched and almost breathless from the rain, looked upon a thousand deaths.

The first thing they particularly noted was the race of a man in a two horse wagon. He came tearing down the town's main street, lashing his horses, with the flood close behind. It was an awful race for life, and the man won by scarce a second. One car had become detached. On its roof were two men clinging for their lives. The car was rolled over and over, and the men stuck to it with the energy born of desperation, clutching wildly at the air, but soon their gesticulations grew weaker and then they sank. As darkness settled down and enveloped everything Scheerer and the young ladies saw an unearthly glare upon the flood from the burning wreck at the bridge. To the best of Scheerer's belief the flood lasted forty minutes in its greatest fury.



ONE OF JOHNSTOWN'S PRINCIPAL STREETS.

Nothing is more surprising than the calm way in which the survivors talk of their losses and sorrows. As a rule their eyes are dry and their tones low, and they gaze upon the ruins and talk of their dead with a sort of passionless apathy. The occasion is too great for tears. All those people have looked death closely in the face for hours, and no doubt they all feel as does one who expressed it thus: "I don't seem to feel any call to take on about anything; I feel just like we had all been dead and buried, and done with this world, all we Johnstown folks, and these few of us was just allowed to come back and look around awhile." That man voiced the feelings of many thousands. Many months must pass before they will renew their energy in this world's affairs, and many hundreds of them can never again be as they were.

Consider, as one instance only a little sadder than the average, the case of Mrs. Fenn, wife of an engineer, and the sole survivor of a family of nine. Many years ago the industrious and intelligent young Fenn brought his wife from the valley of Virginia and located in Johnstown. They had seven children and a comfortable, happy home life. A few minutes before the flood came Mr. Fenn started to the butcher's shop and disappeared forever. Driven to the upper room by the flood the mother prayed and encouraged the children. The water rose to their chins, the smallest children being lifted on the highest articles.

"Mamma," said the oldest, a girl, "wouldn't it be better to go outside and die in the open air?"

"Yes, dear," was the reply; "we'll make a raft and all go together."

Opening the window she caught a floating plank and on it placed the oldest child; there was a kiss and a "God bless you," and it floated away into the darkness. And so with the next and the next, the fond mother cheering the children and launching them on the flood with good-bys and kisses. At last only the youngest, 4 years old, remained, and the mother hesitated long. But the water continued to rise till there was barely breathing space between it and the ceiling; a few minutes more and escape would be impossible. So, Bessie, the darling, was fastened to a broad plank and blessed and kissed and started.

"I loved them all!" said the mother, "but I had two kisses for Bessie, for she was Tom's favorite and was such a good child. She put her arms around my neck and said, 'You know you said God would take care of me always, mamma—will he take care of me now?'

"I told her he would and she need not fear, and then she was carried away. 'I'm not afraid, mamma,' she called out, and I heard her, although I could not see her—and that's all, except that the roof was torn off and I floated off on it, and some Italians saved me at Kernville, sixteen miles from here."

"And the children?" was asked.

"We have found two of them dead—Bessie and George—and there is not a mark on Bessie's face, and oh, I am so tired! They're all gone, every one—eight of them, and I am going home to Virginia, after all these years, to rest and try to think."

Many columns might be filled with accounts of remarkable escapes. Michael Renssen, after being twice struck by timber and submerged, was caught by a lightning rod to which he clung for two hours, and escaped. Mrs. Ann Williams took refuge with [illegible] others on a roof, and all were swept off but [illegible] similar examples of heroism and self sacrifice.

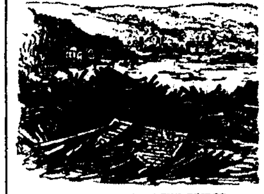
The men in the signal tower at Sang Hollow relate that a beautiful girl floated down on the roof of a building which was swung in near the tower. She screamed to the operators to save her, and one big, brawny, brave fellow walked as far into the river as he could and shouted to her to try to guide herself into shore with a bit of plank. She was a plucky girl, full of nerve and energy, and stood upon her frail support in evident obedience to the command of the operator. She made two or three bold strokes and actually stopped the course of the raft for an instant. Then it swerved and went out from under her. She tried to swim ashore, but in a few seconds she was lost in the swirling water.

Saddest of all was the sight of little children, both dead and living, floating past lashed to pieces of furniture or planks, and in a few instances actually in cradles. On one little raft were two men, and between them, dressed in white and kneeling with her face turned heavenward, was a girl six or seven years old. She seemed stricken with paralysis until she came opposite the tower, and then she turned her face to the operator. She was so close they could see big tears on her cheeks, and her pallor was as death. The helpless men on shore shouted to her to keep up her courage, and she resumed her devout attitude and disappeared under the trees of a projecting point a short distance below.



THE DRIFT AGAINST THE BRIDGE.

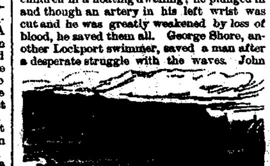
As a glance at the map will show, the river runs southwest to Johnstown, then northwest to a point just below Nineveh, then southwest and west; there are many minor turns, and between these are occasionally wide valleys, where the water turned into the woods and fields and formed local eddies, and under each of these the deposited mud and sand are very deep and actually thick set with corpses. The view, therefore, as the first train came up the valley, taking the towns in inverse order to that in which the flood struck them, was one of rapidly increasing horrors. First a corpse appeared here and there on the platforms where the humane finders had laid it, then they appeared by dozens, and soon the whole muddy flat between the train and the river appeared dotted with swollen corpses. And this train was loaded with frantic people, looking for, yet dreading to find, their near and dear ones among the dead.

"Conemaugh is laid low, Cambria City gone, Johnstown utterly demolished and not a house remains in Colville." Such was the message given these sorrowing ones when the train first halted. And there on the railroad platform lay 105 corpses. At this news and this sight a long, loud wail of grief and horror swept through the train, and many women sank fainting to the floor. As the train reached Sang Hollow a crow sailed out into the very middle of the boisterous stream, and darting down peered into the swift waters. The crow then flew away and disappeared, but on the next wave the body of a small child appeared. A wild shriek went up from the horrified passengers, and full 100 voices shouted to a number of men who were standing on the river bank, and before the dead body floated 100 feet further it was overtaken and taken from the river.

And all this time the great mass of wreckage lodged against the bridge was still burning, though many entangled in it were still alive. The fire began soon after the first house lodged, probably by the upsetting of a stove. As soon as engines could be got to the spot many streams of water were turned on it, though, after it was certain that it contained no living being, the physicians urged that it be allowed to burn. It was wedged so tight that dynamite had to be used to break it up, and weeks must elapse before it is all removed.

All visitors to the ruins are struck by the peculiar way in which the survivors accost each other. They do not speak of the lost as dead or drowned. They simply say, "Gone down." Most of the people have no idea what day of the week or month it is, and stare with a singular sort of surprise when any one reports any news of the outside world. It is rare to hear them say "Good morning" or "Good afternoon;" the regular salutations are, "Have you heard?" if they have met recently, or "How many of your folks went down?" if it is their first meeting since the flood. One little boy thus accosted replied, "Only father and mother; the rest got through." A community in which death is the rule and life the exception has strange phrases.

It were a vain task to attempt a recital of all the brave deeds done in that time of terror. Edward Dick, a young railroader, swam into the torrent and rescued an old man. He had barely taken breath when he saw Mrs. Adams, of Cambria, and her two children in a floating dwelling; he plunged in and though an artery in his left wrist was cut and he was greatly weakened by loss of blood, he saved them all. George Shore, another Lockport swimmer, saved a man after a desperate struggle with the waves. John Decker, a pugilist of local note, saved a woman and a boy, but in a third attempt was struck by a log and severely injured.



HOUSES FLOATING IN THE FLOOD.

The blackness of this cloud of woe has a silver lining. From every part of the country generous contributions in money, clothes and provisions have poured in, and a lavish stream of benevolence is now doing all that is possible to efface the ruin made by the storm of May 31.

If you are tired taking the large old-fashioned griping pills, try Carter's Little Liver Pills and take some comfort. A man can't stand everything. One pill a dose. Try them.

Edwin Forrest's Secret

The great tragedian, Forrest, had a secret which everybody ought to learn and profit by. Said he, "I owe all my success to the fact that everything I have undertaken I have done thoroughly. I never neglect trifles." That's the point—don't neglect trifles. Don't neglect that hacking cough, those night sweats, that feeble and capricious appetite, and the other symptoms, trifling in themselves but [illegible]

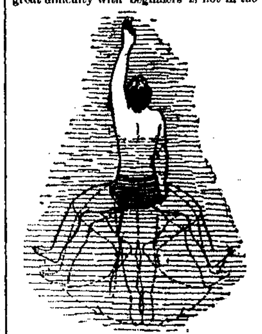
LEARNING TO SWIM.

Some of the Difficulties of the Art Explained for Beginners.

Some people take to water as naturally as a duck does, while with others it takes some time to master the swimming stroke. The great difficulty with beginners is not in the use of the arms, but in the use of the legs. It is natural for every one to paddle with the arms in the water, and this paddling motion is all that is necessary, although there are, of course, different degrees of grace displayed. But the difficulty is in the leg stroke. When a novice is learning to swim he first strikes out with his arm, and then follows with a spasmodic kick with the legs, at the same time swallowing large mouthfuls of water, as if he would get rid of it by swallowing it.



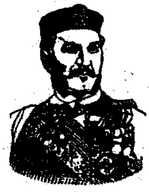
THE BREAST STROKE.

Now the cause of this is that at the start his legs are not drawn up close to his body. He is so afraid of sinking that he doesn't dare to keep still long enough to draw them up, and yet this is the first thing to be done. Then when he does kick, he kicks like a mule, straight out. He pushes against the water with the bottoms of his feet, whereas he should push against the water with the tops. Try this motion out of the water by standing on one foot and kicking with the other. Say that you stand on your left foot. Now draw up your right foot, keeping your toe as far back as possible, pushing it out so that the line from your knee to the tip of your toe will be as straight as it can be made.

Now kick, but make no motion from back to front, and at the same time out from the side, so that you will strike, not with the sole of your foot, but with the instep. By studying the philosophy of this motion, it will be plain why the whole front of the leg, and especially the web part of the foot, is such a valuable assistant in propelling the body. Perhaps a better illustration of this movement is in swimming on the back. Lying flat on the water, you draw up your legs, and while they are drawn up, push the toes down as far as possible. Then, in making the stroke, you describe a semi circle outward and upward toward the surface of the water. Study the accompanying illustration, and you will see how the stroke is made. To many, swimming, like waltzing, comes "all at once, and nothing first," so don't be discouraged if you fail the first time, after making unavailing efforts to gulp down a river, a bay or an ocean.

Montenegro's Ruler.

A new personage, hitherto but little known to the world in general, is looming up on the political horizon of Europe. It is Prince Nikita, the ruler of Montenegro. At a banquet lately given by the czar in St. Petersburg, the latter responded to a toast, in which he used words that have stirred Europe to an unusual degree, and which forbode nothing good. He called the prince of Montenegro "the only true friend of Russia," which of course leaves all the other nations that are courting the friendship of the northern colossus out in the cold. Further significance to this affair has been lent by the fact that the second daughter of Nikita has lately been betrothed to a cousin of the czar; and still more by the fact that one of the czar's sons recently congratulated Nikita as the future king of Bosnia.



PRINCE NIKITA.

Now Bosnia is at present a dependency of Austria, and any attempt to wrest it from the grasp of the latter power would inevitably result in war. Hence the outlook at present is decidedly gloomy.

Prince Nikita is, as far as his revenues are concerned, a very poor sovereign. Jay Gould, for instance, could afford to pay the salary of more than a hundred of his like and yet have enough to live on comfortably himself. But Nikita is the ruler of a very brave, though numerically not very strong, people, who for centuries have never been completely conquered by any power. The character of the country is such that an invasion is next to impossible. Hence their friendship is not to be despised, especially since, in a case of close alliance or confederacy of Montenegro with Russia and the absorption of the other Balkan states by the latter, Russia would have an easy ingress into the Mediterranean, Montenegro bordering on the Adriatic.

PLUNKETT-WORTHINGTON.

HOW THE ALTRUISTIC THINKS OF THE EGO PRODUCED A DIVORCE.

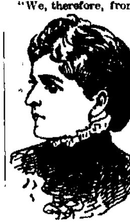
A Prominent Christian Science Teacher and Editor Submits to an Automotor Separation—His Late Wife Takes Her "Affinity"—The Philosophy of It.

Christian science has now reached the third stage, as is shown by the recent acts of Mr. John J. T. Plunkett, Mrs. Mary H. Plunkett and Mr. A. Bentley Worthington. Briefly stated, the Plunketts were made one in youth, ministerially and legally, and made themselves two last March by signing this document:

"We, the undersigned, having dedicated our lives to the service of The Good, and determined to speak, act and live in accordance with it, do declare both to you who faithfully serve and to you who earnestly seek the truth, as follows:

"For many years we have recognized that the affection between us was purely fraternal, and we have lived and worked together as friends. Having feared the results of its publication and the possibility of our example proving dangerous to others, we have hitherto concealed this fact. We have now gained riper wisdom; we know with deep and glad certainty that Truth always and everywhere proves a blessing, not a curse; we know that our action, far from being a stumbling block, will only aid the many who are striving to solve the same problem.

"We, therefore, from the most profound conviction of duty, do declare our marriage contract null and void in so far as it lies in our power to render it so. In thus candidly taking this stand before humanity, whom we love and strive to serve, we experience that 'peace which passeth understanding' which the world and the opinion of the world cannot give or disturb. The Truth has made us free!"



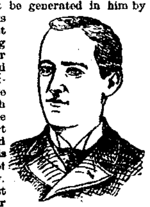
MRS. PLUNKETT.

When they had mailed copies to their friends and disciples, and received replies of various tenor, Mr. Worthington appeared upon the scene; a few friends were invited and in their presence he stood up with Mary and solemnly pronounced: "In the presence of God and you my friends here assembled I take Mary Hodgkins Plunkett to be my wife, promising, with divine assistance, to be unto her a faithful and loving husband, forever and forever."

She repeated the same words, with the necessary variations, and so the thing was complete. Not quite, however. There was still Mr. Plunkett and a couple of young Plunketts—Pearl, aged 12, and Paul, aged 8—and behind these is the state of New York with a great big volume of statutes, and several court decisions on such affairs as this Plunkett-Wortington transfer, and now the public and the public prosecutor propose to have their say, and so the history of the parties has been well raked up. Mr. Worthington is easily "classified;" he is a well to do gentleman of 43, an operator in mines, a San Franciscan till last autumn, imbued with free and easy California ideas.

The Plunketts were the original faith-curists of New York city, founded the school and healing parlors at 13 West Forty-second street, and established The International Magazine of Christian Science. She is an uncommonly well preserved woman of forty, he is three years younger and quite an attractive gentleman. Their business grew rapidly. There are at least 100,000 believers in Christian science in the United States, and those in New York and adjacent sections looked on Mr. and Mrs. Plunkett as teachers and leaders. Last autumn Mr. Worthington appeared at No. 13, and soon became a devotee of Mrs. Plunkett. As near as an alien to the faith can make out the cure thereafter proceeded by a symmetrical and ascending series of autogenetic Thinks, on the following system:

According to the basis doctrine of the sect, Disease is Sin, or it is an Idea, a Think; to get well the patient must auto-generate a Health Think, or it must be generated in him by sympathetic Thinks of the attendant and sympathizing Thinkers. If one or more try it and sprain their Thinkers they must give place to fresh operators and the subject must exert his will power and Think that he is well or going to get well right away. And all this must be done in the fear of God and the complete faith that Christ triumphed over death and that it is the privilege of a true believer to live a perfect life and die a painless death of pure old age, just as a leaf flutters gently down the autumn wind when the stem ceases to supply it with sap. It follows quite logically that the Think of an operator may influence a subject in many other things than health.



MR. PLUNKETT.

Well, Mr. Worthington let loose his Thinks on Mrs. Plunkett, and by absorption she took his idea that they were foreordained sympathetic Thinkers and Prenatal Affinities, and that Mr. Plunkett had come in as a sort of accident. The latter gentleman agreed so far as the divorce, but when he learned that Mrs. Plunkett was to affiliate with Mr. Worthington, Mr. Plunkett's Thinks became Non-Sympathetic, and he wanted to know what was to become of the children and the joint property and his life insurance for $4,000, made out for his wife's benefit. It is, however, against the rules of the Christian Scientists to employ lawyers or doctors, and so he will do nothing. Mr. Worthington gives his views in these words:

"Well, Christian Science is truth and teaches truth. So far it has not attempted the problem of sex—that of marriage; but we are the pioneers in this new field. That is why we fear there may be some among our own people who will not understand us. This is something new. We believe it will solve the question of the failure of marriage. Marriage laws, as they are, are unwise, unjust. Men and women who are not mated are tied together. They ought not to be kept in that bondage. There must be some fit method for their divorce. We hope to educate others so that in time this method may be made the method of the law. If the world could comprehend our motives it would not judge us harshly. No, we are not believers in free love, but rather in perfect marriage, and the marriage of today is not perfect, not honest, not Christian."

When a man hath forfeited the reputation of his integrity he is set fast, and nothing will then serve his turn, neither truth nor falsehood.—Steele.

Masonic Aprons

The following are points well taken, for in the Masonic apron two things are essential to the due presentation of its symbolic character. First the Mason's apron should be a pure unspotted white lambskin apron for in all countries it has been esteemed an emblem of innocence and purity. Secondly, from all instances we are taught that the lambskin was anciently used as our emblem of purity and for this reason has been preserved in the apron of F. and A. M. European as well as Canadian F. and A. Mason's esteem these aprons as emblems of morality and are handed down from one generation to another and in years after the death of some Brother and you will hear his wife or children say my husband's or my father's apron:

To the Editor of the Brooklyn Eagle:

I would like to inquire of some brother Mason through your columns how the linen or satin apron came to be introduced and worn by A. F and A. Masons, when there is nothing of a Masonic character about either of them? It is nearly forty years since I was initiated into the mysteries of Ancient Free Masonry. At that time there was nothing but the lambskin or white leather apron worn and every brother furnished his own apron. In Mackey's "Encyclopedia of Masonry" it says: "There is no one of the symbols of Masonry more important in its teachings or more interesting in its history than the lambskin or white leather apron. Commencing its lessons at an early period in the Mason's progress, it is impressed upon his memory as to the first gift he receives, the first symbol which is explained to him and the first tangible evidence which he possesses of his admission into the fraternity. Whatever may be his future advance in the royal art, into whatever deeper arcana his devotion to the mystic institution or his thirst for knowledge may subsequently lead him, with the lambskin his first investure, he never parts; changing perhaps its forms and decorations, and conveying at each step some new but still beautiful illusion; its substance is still there, and it continues to claim the honored title by which it was first made known to him on the night of his initiation as the badge of a Mason." As to the material, then, it would appear that a Mason's apron must be made of lambskin. No substance such as satin, silk or linen could be substituted without destroying the emblematic character of the apron, for the material of the Mason's apron constitutes one of the most important symbols of his profession. By the lambskin the Mason is reminded of that purity of life and conduct essentially necessary to his gaining admission into the celestial lodge above, where the Supreme Architect forever presides. It seems to me from all I can learn in the history of Masonry, that the linen silk or satin apron is out of place and should be no longer tolerated or worn, for the reason that they bear no Masonic significance. The lambskin has been worn in all ages, and by kings and princes, who are not ashamed of it. Why not wear it now as the only true badge of a Mason?

AN OLD MASON.

BROOKLYN, June 5, 1889.

Ex-Minister Bloom Revolted.

For some days prisoners in the county jail, including the sailors, have been making a vigorous "kick" on the quality of the food furnished and this morning inaugurated a revolt by refusing to pass out the dishes after they had partaken of their morning meal. Under Sheriff Van Buren went in to see about it. The first cell was that of Rev. Joseph Bloom, who emphatically informed the officer that if he wanted the dishes he had better come and get them. Mr. VanBuren yanked the minister out of the cell and flopped him into an empty cell at the top of the tower which is not provided with a bed and there Mr. Bloom will be allowed to meditate for a day or two. Michael Donovan who was in the next cell, and who had also refused to obey orders, concluded that it was best to obey and passed out his dishes and his good example was followed by the rest.—Oswego Times.

Editor Fulton Times:

Our age is one of organization! Men of every position in life understand that individual effort alone cannot insure complete success, that in union there is strength, that the combined energies of several minds and wills obeying conventional rules and constitutions in harmony with the teachings of religion, the fundamental principles of Christian morality and the just laws of the country, bring forth good fruit, change the passions of man into virtues and transforming the individual, transforms society.

Men unite for benevolent purposes, for political purposes, for religious purposes; laborers unite in order to counteract the influence of wealthy capitalists and tyranical masters; wicked men unite to accomplish more easily and rapidly their evil work and diffuse the knowledge of their pernicious principles.

Among all these organizations none deserve a greater share of sympathy encouragement and assistance than Temperance Societies. Their object is to enable individuals to become better, to give edifying example; to distribute alms to the poor and needy, to make better church members, to save men's reputations, keep them from ruining their health and destroying the happiness of their families, to place them in the right path where religion finds them and takes their soul and spiritual welfare in charge.

Temperance societies by their work quietly protest against the abuse of intoxicating drink and against the iniquitous workings of the saloon.

The Catholic church is foremost in this grand work of organizing Temperance societies and the most zealous bishops and priests who with intelligence of duty possess a sincere love of immortal souls, do all in their power to establish Catholic temperance societies.

If Catholics drink to excess it is little use for them to boast of their religion, they cannot deceive God and they cannot deceive the devil all the week and until late Saturday evening and then profess to be God's children on Sunday simply because they are able enough to read their prayer book on that day. Drunken Catholics are too numerous in our village and they are a burning disgrace to their church and their lives demonstrate the necessity of good Temperance societies to check their passion for drink, furnish them a suitable place to meet and spend their leisure hours in sobriety as, christian men.

Any man whether he occupies a pulpit or the chair of a humble church member who by word or example discourages organizations which he knows to be good in themselves is either an unconverted victim of intemperance, or an habitual guzzler, or is engaged in the liquor traffic, or else is so blind as to see no evil in drunkenness, no evil in prejudice, no evil in lax principles, no evil in doing as we please and allowing others to do the same, he is a man who not having the courage to be temperate himself would make an effort to justify his cowardice by liberal doctrines on temperance which bring others to their destruction.

Archbishop Ireland who is a model prelate, an intelligent and zealous prince of the Catholic church and one whom every bishop and priest may follow without fear is the author of the following work which should be read attentively and be committed to memory by all earnest christians:

"Who has ever tried to organize and maintain a total abstinence society—tried earnestly—and failed? Some come who may again fall away; they will return, or others will take their places, but the society remains. Give me in a parish a handful of earnest men, a priest and a few laymen, and a total abstinence society is a fact. But they must be earnest men; that is, they must work, and they must themselves practice total abstinence. It is too much to ask the practice of total abstinence for the sake of others? The question, I think, should not be put to children of the Catholic Church, the home of self-sacrifice, zeal and heroic charity. What do we give up in abandoning liquor? The pleasure of a momentary excitement. What do we do by the sacrifice? We dry the tear of wretchedness, we feed the hungry, we raise up our race, we save souls, we honor religion.

Numbers, however, will remain who will not take your total abstinence pledge. Have you no influence over them? It would be a great mistake to fancy that the total abstinence movement suppresses intemperance only so far as men join its ranks. Its regular membership is but part of its work—perhaps even the smaller part. Society at large is influenced by the movement. The total abstinence banner lifted in a parish is a reminder to all that temperance is a crying evil. Drinking usages become odious. Frequentation of saloons grows to be disreputable. Public opinion comes to pronounce itself strongly in favor of temperance. The great lever for good or harm is public opinion; color public opinion with your thoughts and individuals are easily reached. Heretofore the misfortune has been that public opinion, at best, administered but a mild reproof to intemperance. It was a weakness to be pitied, not a crime to be dreaded. The drunkard was petted for his good qualities of heart and mind instead of being shunned for his pernicious example. The saloon keeper took his place among the pillars of church and society. Public opinion warranted, demanded, treating, the use of liquor at all social gatherings and friendly meetings; thus pitfalls were multiplied, the love of liquor encouraged and intemperance with a great number rendered almost necessary. With your movement all this is changed and your work reaches far beyond your own ranks. Whether men take the pledge or not your movement benefits them; a healthy total abstinence society [illegible] a whole community.

[illegible]

The [illegible] of the hour is a grand tidal wave of total abstinence sweeping over the land. The strongest protest possible must be made against intemperance; total abstinence is the protest. Will it be made with sufficient force to save the people? This is the vital question for the future of Irishmen in America, and, I might add, for the future of religion. Total abstinence is the saving principle. Will the men be found in the required number to make it a living power? The answer rests with the priests and laymen of the country with those whose position and influence mark them as leaders of their fellow-men.

The scene we witness this morning in the cathedral of St. Paul inspires the brightest hopes. Influential laymen, representing nearly all the States of the Union, join hands, near God's altar, with their priests, beneath the waving folds of total abstinence banners, and promise their lifelong labor to the sacred cause. You tell us that in your homes there are numbers animated with the same sentiments, bent equally upon doing good and saving their fellows. We could wish for no better omen.

To the priests of the church who labor to further the cause of total abstinence, I offer in a special manner my congratulations and my thanks. With them pre-eminently rests the future of their people. Their earnest co-operation is all that is needed to insure the success of the total abstinence movement.

The traditions of centuries combine with the lessons of faith in making the priest more conspicuously the leader of the Irish people. The people loyally follow their priests, and where the priests fear to walk, the people will not dare to advance. Heavy responsibilities weigh upon priests laboring amid Irish populations; but at the same time how hopeful is the field opening before them, if, with a firm hand, they grasp their magnificent opportunities, and with unwavering heart follow them out to victory!

May Heaven, my breathren, pour down its richest blessings upon your Union; and continuously add to its peaceful and glorious triumphs."

Let us read good works, not judge nor condemn too soon and never place an abstract in the way to prevent any man from doing good.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

George St. Clair was arrested by officer Jones yesterday for stealing a double barreled shot gun from Alfred Morehouse. The gun was found at St. Clair's home about 6 miles east of the village. When brought before Police Justice Sharp he did not seem to realize that he had done anything wrong and offered to give all the money he had ($2) to settle the matter up. As the family consisting of a wife and three small children would become a town charge if he were "sent up," the justice decided to postponed the case until July 2d.

The same St. Clair has gained no small amount of noteriety as the one that assisted Mrs. Van Auken to bury the husband she had murdered. Some two years ago he discharged a gun load of shot into a young man named Brenning for refusing to come down from cherry tree. St. Clair is not a vicious character but does not seem to know more than some whole families.

[illegible] BUFFALO [illegible]

[illegible] Knocking Out the [illegible] Convention of Florists — [illegible] for Johnstown Sufferers at the Fair Grounds.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 17.—Perhaps the most striking thing about this city at the present time is the weather. I don't know just exactly what the weather is striking for, but whatever the demands, it seems to me there will have to be a compromise some where before long. The public is becoming exhausted in its futile efforts to keep pace with the weather's vagaries, and is howling for a settlement of the difficulties and a return to something approaching a business-like basis. As matters stand at present no man can venture to leave his residence in the morning without carrying an extra change of clothing, and as seven out of every ten of the business men of Buffalo go to their respective places of business on bicycles, this enforcement of extra baggage is a serious inconvenience. It isn't so bad on the days which start in hot and end cold, as it is on the days (and we have had lots of them lately) which begin with a crispness that makes pea-jackets and ulsters comfortable, and wind up with tropical intensity. It is then that the bicycle, as a substitute for the coupe or even the horse car, betrays its disadvantages. The spectacle of a business man in loose coat flannels, trundling home an assortment of furs with his long winter ulster dragging its tails in the dust behind the little wheel of his steel horse, while the rider is afraid to stop lest either a snow squall or a thunder storm overtake him, is amusing only to those who do not ride "the wheel."

The rumpus which has obviously been going on in the office of the Weather Clerk will however, I predict, prove as nothing to the row which is browing in the office of the Buffalo City Council. And it's all about Fourth o' July. It seems that a committee of the Council was recently entrusted with the important mission of devising means of suitably celebrating the glorious Fourth, and that this committee has laid out a programme which calls for the expenditure of $2,950, variously allotted to fireworks, rowing races, clay pigeon shooting, baseball games, balloon ascensions, yacht races and gun powder salutes. Here is a variety of sport which ought to be dirt cheap at the figure named, but unhappily there are "kickers" among the taxpayers. Buffalo is not a niggardly city by any means. With scarcely an effort it has to date raised the handsome amount of $24,425.26 for the Johnstown sufferers, but there are a good many people who do not exactly see why the aldermen should be allowed to vote away the people's money in the subsidizing of ball games, shooting matches, etc. Hence the difficulty.

It isn't to be wondered at that there should be a row over the proposed item of $250 for a baseball match. Baseball is a subject concerning which the people of this city have a right to be sensitive. The official record to date shows the International club bearing the name of the Queen City to be the last in the race for fame. There does not appear to be any club in the International league which is not prepared at a moment's notice to pick up the Bisons and "wipe the ground with them." As a consequence of this lamentable fact, Buffalo is losing its interest in the national game and the new grounds of the club, which have been removed from an aristocratic neighborhood where they were formerly situated, to a more distant site out on Main street, are no longer thronged with enthusiasts.

While it is true that there can be found in the United States a good many people, still outside of the lunatic asylums, who argue that a lapse of interest in baseball is evidence of a city's decline, facts and figures seem to prove that Buffalo is getting along very well in spite of the fact that her ball club is made up of "chumps." The tax assessment rolls of the present year show an increase in taxable property over 1888 of $352,818.81.

Every year this town is becoming more and more conspicuously the home of conventions and national gatherings. The books are full of dates of important assemblages which are to occur this summer, concerning each of which I shall endeavor always to give your readers some advance information. One of the most interesting meetings, I imagine, will be the national gathering of florists, which is to be held Aug. 21 and 23. The members of the Society of American Florists of Buffalo are sparing no pains to make the occasion a notable one in every respect. I fancy, from what I hear, that the prestige which Rochester has won in horticultural matters is the secret of a good deal of the interest which is being taken by Buffalo people in the forthcoming convention of florists. They mean to show Rochester that she cannot remain ahead of Buffalo even in the pretty matter of posies.

Just at present Buffalo is musically interesting. Surely your readers who are called from their pleasant summer homes to a sojourn here for a few days on business, will be glad to learn that the evenings are being made pleasant for all strangers by both instrumental and vocal entertainments. To-night the Spencer Opera company takes possession of the Star theater for a season of several weeks in light operas, and on Saturday evening last, after much trepidation, the beautiful Academy of Music was opened, a la Theodore Thomas's Central Park concerts, to the joint communion of music and beer. It was an experiment, and was a success. The wealth and culture of the city was not deterred from attending the concert through the fact that refreshments were served at the round tables, and the programme was delightful.

For the benefit of the flood sufferers, Mr. C. J. Hamlin, as president of the International Fair association, has given the free use of the splendid race track in the exposition grounds for a series of trotting races, which are to take place on Thursday next. It is thought that a large sum will be realized for the noble cause on that day, as a number of the speediest flyers in the country are already here. In the Fair Grounds visitors will be surprised at the preparations which are going on for this year's exposition. Another one of those enormous horse show buildings with their splendid tan-bark courts, is in process of construction and mammoth quarters are being erected for sheep and swine. The Art Gallery (only the L of which was built last year) is to be completed according to the architect's plans, and there is, I am told, to be a Palace of Illusions, about which I will tell you in another letter. The Fair opens this year on the 3d and closes on the 13th of September, and already I find the city active in its preparations for the great event.

The Mills and Petrie prize of $10 was awarded to six different pupils. They stood the highest in ten different branches. The music was of a high order, conducted by Mrs. McDonnell of Pulaski. We learn that our principal and preceptress will leave us. Miss Stone will be preceptress in Johnston, in this state. Prof. Moore has engagements in the east. No teachers have been engaged to take their places. Teachers of a high order will be secured.

Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, June 17.

It was a big and booming market to-day and salesmen were wily enough to take advantage of it to ship off all the cheese they dared to. The enormous volume of sales shows this, altho' it is a fact that to-day's sales represent the flush, and probably will not be equaled again this season, if ever. The truth is that nobody has much confidence in present prices, whether salesmen or buyers, and the former are so well satisfied with prices now paid that they wish to take advantage of them. If receipts run up to 90,000 boxes this week, as they seem very likely to do, it is impossible to predict what result this may have upon the market. If prices depend on short sales abroad they will remain stiff until those sales are covered, then there will be a tumble.

Following are the quotations for the day:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
1	100	8c.
22	2,080	8¼
96	9,930	8⅜
27	2,927	8½
39	3,713	8⅜
20	1,638	8⅝
1	138	8⅝
1	130	9c.
2	260	p.t.
209	20,976
	1,619	Com.
Total.	22,595

Ruling price 8⅜c. Transactions one year ago 18,175 boxes; ruling price 8cts. Two years ago, 11,924 boxes, ruling price 8c. Sales of creamery butter were 92 packages at 17½@20c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, June 17.

Cheese—The market opened strong, and an advance of at least a quarter of a cent per pound was clearly shown from the start. It was early talked that 8¾c., and possibly 9c., would be reached, but buyers soon dispelled hopes of factory men securing these figures, and they advised being conservative and against forcing prices above their legitimate bounds, as has been done heretofore, and so avoid the "reaction" that so often comes at such times. Salesmen, it may fairly be said, were more ready than they usually are to heed these warnings, and they did not stand off quite as firmly as usual. No cheese is reported at over 8½c., and yet it is fair to say that quite a number or lots stand a good chance of securing 8¾c., as in a number of cases, it was understood, that buyers would give this price if the condition of the New York market would warrant it. Liberal quantities were sold, and the factory men were ready to sell all cheese in a marketable condition.

The transactions are:

23	1,830	8¼
76	6,125	8⅛
13	1,334	p. t.
15	765	Com.
126	10,054
Farm dairy	820
Total	10,874

Farm dairies—The sales in the morning of farm cheese reached 820 boxes, prices for which ranged at 8@9c., but one lot at the latter price. The bulk sold at 8⅛ and 8¾ c.

Butter—There were about 40 packages creamery butter sold at 16@17c., and 14 packages consigned and 21 packages farm dairy sold at 10@17c.

AT FULTON.

Eighteen factories were represented at this market Monday with 16,000 boxes of cheese which sold at 8⅜ to 8¾ cents.

A SUCESSFUL FIRM.

Connell & Patterson Require More Room For Their Increase in Business.

On the 12th of December, 1887, a little over a year and a half ago, the new firm of Connell & Patterson opened their dry goods store in the Gardner block, on Oneida street. The two proprietors were versed in the trade, the senior member having been for many years head clerk at Bacon's while the junior member served in a like capacity at the "Bee Hive." Each knew well the wants of Fulton people and those in this vicinity. They started in with one clerk and an excellent but comparatively small stock of goods purchased of C. E. Sackett. People soon saw that their goods were selected with skill and discrimination. They were just what Fultonians wanted. Their trade doubled, tripled and quadrupled until now they have to employ six instead of one clerk. It has also been found necessary to enlarge their store and Mr. Gardner is now making preparations to build an addition of twenty feet on the rear of the store. This addition when completed will be used as their carpet and oil cloth department. A cloak department has also been added which will be equal to any in this section.

The establishment continues to increase in popularity and their honest dealings and excellent goods are bound to bring them the success that they deserve.

After refreshments it was announced that Mr. F. A. Emerick, Mrs. J. R. Fairgrieve, Dr. N. F. Hall and Miss Mary Johnson were entitled to the elegaat prizes which were accordingly awarded to them. Music and dancing followed and everyone had an excellent time.

Another cycle has passed and the time is at hand when another class of young students complete their work in Fulton Academy and pass out from its portals to enter higher institutions of learning or to begin life's struggle which follows the completion of school work.

Following the custom of colleges and universities where baccalaureate sermons are given before graduates, the graduating class of Fulton Union School listened to an able discourse given for their special benefit by Rev. W. Dempster Chase in the Methodist church on Sunday evening.

The church was well filled at the opening hour when the graduates consisting of eight young ladies and the same number of young gentlemen marched to seats reserved for them and proceeded by four of the under classmen who acted as ushers for the occasion.

Dr. D. M. Rankin and Rev. Chas. Olmstead were also in the pulpit. The latter appropriately read a part of the closing chapter of Ecclesiastes, Dr Rankin offered an earnest prayer and after singing Mr. Chase commenced, taking his theme from II Kings 6 chapter and 5th verse: "But one was felling a beam, the axe head fell into the water; and he cried, and said, Alas, Master; for it was borrowed." He announced that he was to talk to the class, the rest of the audience could listen if they wished. They all listened as the discourse teemed with thoughts and advice that were wholesome and suited the cases of many that were not graduates.

The graduating exercises will begin promptly at 8 o'clock in the opera house on Friday evening. The tickets are 25 cents with no charge for reserved seats which can now be secured at Watson's.

Editor Bennett Gets the Prize.

It has been generally conceded that Fred Bennett of the Patriot would be the next postmaster of Fulton and yesterday President Harrison appointed him as such.

To many the appointment will not strike a favorable cord as the newly appointed postmaster is accustomed through his paper to step heavily upon the corns of individuals. A fellow editor however knows, if no one else does, the amount of money that is put into printers' ink and supplies, which is given to party and individuals, in return for which often not so much as a "thank you ma'am" is given.

Mr. Bennett has earned the commission and by having the inside track has secured it, we therefore offer our congratulations.

On the Fay Road.

The appropriation for repairs on the Fay road made on last town meeting day has been used during the past few weeks and the road presents a much improved appearance.

The improvements in that part of the village are marked. The extension of Broadway which will soon be made, will strike the Fay road near the house of Oscar Dines, the largest bee keeper in this locality.

On this road is the farm of Dr. Haviland to which he has given the name "Valley View." From this he keeps seven horses and four head of cattle. The four short horns are well know to persons posted on good breeded cattle.

The heifer registered at Santa Clara is one in which the doctor takes particular pride and is said to be the finest in this section. She was recently purchased of Mr. Andrews of Geddes. A span of spotted colts, two thoroughbred driving horses, the breeding mare and filly "Oklahoma" make up the list of horses. The barn at "Valley View" is being fixed up and preparations are being made for building a silo.

The farm of James Hoff next east we also notice has been greatly improved in many respects since Mr. Hoff took possession. Here also can be seen some fine cattle.

Never allow any one to tease your horse in the stable. The animal only feels the torment and does not understand the joke.

Keep a horse's bedding dry and clean underneath as well as on top. Standing in hot, fermenting manure causes thrush.

Feeding silage from the top, rather than cutting it down from the sides, is considered preferable by Professor Cook and many other good authorities.

Let your horse stand loose, if possible, without being tied up to the manger. Pain and weariness from a confined position induce bad habits.

Farm life gives full employment to hands, too full when not regulated by intelligence and because of that lack runs into hard drudgery.

The fact is beyond dispute, says a prominent Illinois dairyman, that the fine aromatic flavor of butter, and also its keeping qualities, depend upon the management of the cream from the time it is separated from the milk until it goes into the churn.

Over feeding is the common bane of the pig, according to The American Agriculturist, which advices a pint of milk and two ounces of boiled cornmeal mixed as a daily ration for the first week, and a gradual increase may be made, substituting raw cornmeal.

The clover field is the place for the pigs that have been weaned. They will need very little other food. A mess of skimmed milk, or buttermilk, with a small quantity of ground oats at night, will cause the pigs to grow rapidly if they have the run of clover.

A well known New Jersey nurseryman has declared that "crowding is one cause of peach yellows. If your trees are too thick pull out every other row, and as a rule you will cure the yellows. Trees are sometimes set as close as eight or ten feet, but should be eighteen or twenty feet apart."

When a horse comes in from a journey, the first thing is to walk him around until he is cool. This prevents his taking cold. The next thing is to rub him dry. This removes dust, dirt and sweat and allows time to recover and the appetite to return. Also, have his legs well rubbed by the hand; nothing so soon removes a strain.

Corn For Silage.

A floating item seasonably advises those who grow fodder corn for ensilage or Winter feed to bear in mind that experiments made at the Massachusetts experiment station showed that corn cut at the stage when the kernel was just beginning to glaze, furnished nearly twice the nutritive value of that cut when the tassels first appeared. It is better to plant the small, early varieties of corn, rather than the large, Southern varieties, as the former reach their full nutritive value a month earlier than the latter.

Small Farm Economies.

A mixture of kerosene and lampblack is a good application to keep steel surfaces bright.

If the whiffletree breaks, don't throw it into a corner. Remove the irons. They can be fitted to new wood.

The further you are from market the greater is your need of condensing products by feeding grain and stover to animals.

By keeping the cattle off the pasture one day longer in the spring, you may keep them upon it two days longer in the fall.

A handy thing to have is a box containing an assortment of bolts, nuts, rivets, nails and a hammer, pinchers and cold-chisel.

Keep a few panes of window glass and a paper of tacks and some putty on hand. When the window-pane is broken, don't makeshift; replace it. —N. Y. Mail and Express.

Oceans of Milk.

"There are $2,000,000,000 invested in the dairying business in this country," said a citizen with a predilection for statistics. "That amount is almost double the money invested in banking and commercial industries. It is estimated that it requires 15,000,000 cows to supply the demand for milk and its products in the United States. To feed these cows 60,000,000 acres of land are under cultivation. The agricultural and dairy machinery and implements in use are worth over $200,000,000. The men employed in the business number 750,000 and the horses over 1,000,000. The cows and horses consume annually 30,000,000 tons of hay, nearly 90,000,000 bushels of corn-meal, about the same amount of oatmeal, 275,000,000 bushels of oats, 2,000,000 of bran, and 30,000,000 bushels of corn, to say nothing of the brewery grains, sprouts and other questionable feed of various kinds that is used to a great extent. It costs $450,000,000 to feed these cows and horses. The average price paid to the laborer necessary in the dairy business is probably $20 a month, amounting to $180,000,000 a year. The average cow yields about 450 gallons of milk a year, which gives a total product of 6,750,000,000 gallons. Twelve cents a gallon is a fair price to estimate the value of milk [illegible] total return to the dairy [illegible] $810,000,000 if he sold all his milk as milk. But fifty per cent. of the milk is made into cheese and butter. It takes twenty-seven pounds of milk to make one pound of butter, and about ten pounds to make one of cheese. There is the same amount of [illegible] pounds of milk that there is in [illegible] of cheese. A fat steer [illegible] [illegible]

A STREET IN SEATTLE.

The first San Francisco was built entirely of wood and vanished in a night—by the most sweeping and comprehensive fire, perhaps, that ever occurred on the American continent. The second San Francisco was a wonderfully composite affair; the old Spanish-Mexican-South American element built adobe houses, the wealthy Americans of long residence built of stone and iron, the [illegible] of brick and the new comers of wood. That San Francisco mostly went up in smoke about five years later, and then they built of brick and stone, making the mistake this time of building too high. The earthquakes soon scared them out of that, and so the present San Francisco is a reasonably safe city.

In Oregon and Washington they do not have earthquakes, and as lumber is invitingly abundant and very cheap the temptation to build cities of it was too great. As late as 1875 Portland, Ore., was a wooden city and most of its streets paved with pine plank and blocks. Seattle was more thoroughly a lumber city than any other on the coast; the lumber trade laid the foundation for its greatness, and, despite the many solid blocks of solider materials, it continued to be largely a wooden city, and when once the fire got a good start the city went in a hurry. The city had been built just about long enough for the lumber to get well seasoned and soaked with oil and the generally combustible waste of civilization.

There is a good deal of romance about Seattle. The first white man who visited the region, standing on the lofty point or plateau which is just across Elliott bay from the present city, and noting the splendid view of Puget sound and the convenient harbor, told the Indians that there was to be the site of a great city and advised them to establish their trading post there. The Indians laughed, but when successive white visitors repeated the prophecy they derisively gave the point the name of Alki, which means [illegible] or, as a joke, "Some time; perhaps." The whites good naturedly adopted the name and it became "Alki Point," and the "Alki" has become the present fact, though the city did not spring up on the point.

The citizens of Washington (territory or state) modestly claim that it has more timber uncut than Maine, Minnesota and Wisconsin jointly had at the start, and it certainly has immense deposits of coal, iron and copper, and a very large area of the finest fertile land in the world. All this, with more good harbors than any equal frontage on the west coast of both Americas, and a climate that, taken the year round, cannot be surpassed. And of a very large part of this Seattle is the natural depot. Five railroads now center there—the Seattle, Lake Shore and Eastern, the Northern Pacific, the Puget Sound Shore, the Seattle and Walla Walla, and the Columbia and Puget Sound. When their representatives asked congress for statehood they set the population of the city at 25,000 and of the territory at 200,000. One may discount liberally for American political enthusiasm and still believe that Seattle is considerable of a place.

The early history of Seattle is obscure. Strictly speaking, it had no founder—it just came of itself. Indians gathered there to trade, white men went there to sell beads, paint, powder, whisky and other adjuncts of civilization to the Indians. After the trader came the miner, and at an early day in the development Ross Browne estimated that the territory had yielded $10,000,000 in gold. The marked peculiarity of Washington and its great advantage is that it contains all the geological formations in a comparatively small area—indeed, nearly all are found in the Puget Sound basin, of which Seattle is the metropolis. About 1880 one may say its boom began, and increased so rapidly that at the time of the fire Seattle's population was increasing at the rate of 1,000 a month.

Some official figures will serve to show its growth. For the fiscal year 1888 the revenue of its postoffice was $40,000; 495,000 tons of coal were shipped; 164 vessels landed, the average daily hotel arrivals were 600, and the real estate transfers aggregated $15,000,000. The first figures put the total loss by the fire at $25,000,000; but this is evidently a gross exaggeration, as the character of the buildings proves. The total will probably not exceed $10,000,000.

Will Commemorate the Pilgrimage.

The Roman Catholic pilgrims who last spring went to the Holy Land under charge of the Rev. Charles A. Vissani, of the Franciscan order, have concluded to commemorate their pilgrimage by rebuilding the Church and Convent of the Transfiguration on Mt. Tabor. The idea originated with Mgr. Seaton, of New Jersey, who headed a subscription list with $100. No Catholics of any other nation have any building on Mount Tabor. Labor is said to be very cheap there, and stone and lime are at hand in great abundance. The total cost is estimated at not over $25,000. No trouble is anticipated in raising the amount, and doubtless, soon this famous sacred mountain will have upon it a building erected by American Catholics.

A Busy Season on the Farm.

Early summer is always a busy time on the farm. So many things demand attention at once that the farmer must be on the alert, and both systematic and prompt, to prevent delay and damage. Corn and other spring crops require weeding and cultivating at the right time, and thoroughly. And while these cannot be neglected, other crops must not be overlooked. The grass and grain crops are coming on apace and will soon be ready for cutting and garnering. The man who plans his haying and harvesting work in advance—providing the necessary tools and implements, and securing competent men and teams for their prompt and easy manipulation—will thereby greatly facilitate and cheapen the most important of his field operations. "Work well planned is half done," and he who forecasts his labors rightly now, will save muscle and money a little later, System, order, and promptness in performance will enable the farmer to take things comparatively easy, even in the busiest of seasons. The wise husbandman knows the superiority of brains to brawn, and will govern himself accordingly.

Your Friend Committed Suicide.

You never suspected it, none of his friends dreamed of it, he did not know it himself, but it is exactly what he did, nevertheless. Do you remember his sallow complexion! Do you recollect how he used to complain of his aches and constipation? "I'm getting quite billious, he said to you one day, "but I guess it will pass off. I haven't done anything for it, because I don't believe in 'dosing.'" Soon after that you heard of his death. It was very sudden, and every one was greatly surprised. If he had taken Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets he would be alive and well to-day. Don't follow his example. The "Pellets" are easy to take, mild in their action, and always sure.

Silage in Place of Roots.

Some one truly says that the American climate is not well adapted to root growing. The English farmer, with moister, cooler Summers, can grow larger root crops than we; but he cannot depend upon growing corn, even for fodder, which is undoubtedly the best ensilage crop. Hence, in this country ensilage will take the place that roots do in England. It is not, any more than roots, a perfect feed, but should be diversified with dry hay or straw and grain.

The Calendar of Gems.

January.

By her who in this month is born
No gem save Garnets should be worn,
They will insure her constancy,
True friendship and fidelity.

February.

The February born shall find
Sincerity and peace of mind,
Freedom from passion and from care
If they the Amethyst will wear.

March.

Who on this world their eyes
In March first open shall be wise,
In days of peril firm and brave,
And wear a Bloodstone to their grave,

April.

She who from April dates her years
Diamonds should wear, least bitter tears
For vain repentance flow; this stone,
Emblem of innocence, is known.

May.

Who first beholds the light of day
In springy sweet flowery month of May
And wears an Emerald all her life,
Shall be a loved and happy wife.

June.

Who comes with summer to this earth,
And owes to June her hour of birth,
With ring of Agate on her hand
Can health, wealth and long life command.

July.

The glowing Ruby shall adorn
Those who in warm July are born!
Then will they be exempt and free
From love's doubt and anxiety.

August.

Wear a Sardonyx, or for thee
No conjugal felicity;
The August born without this stone,
'Tis said, must live unloved and lone.

September.

A maiden born when autumn leaves
Are rustling in September's breeze,
A Sapphire on her brow should bind
'Twill cure diseases of the mind.

October.

October's child is born for woe,
And life's vicissitudes must know;
But lay an Opal on her breast
And hope will lull those words to rest.

November.

Who first comes to this world below
With drear November's fog and snow
Should prize the Topaz's amber hue,
Emblem of friendship and lovers true.

December.

If cold December gave you birth,
The month of snow and ice and mirth,
Place on your hand a Turquoise blue,
Success will bless what'er you do.

THE PROPER THING.

Sailor hats are again in great favor.

Old-fashioned lawns and dotted muslins are revived for warm days.

Strait skirts predominate among women of fashion and elegance.

Many of the bordered pattern dresses are accompanied by a sash to match.

Full sleeves are so varied in shape that some fashion may be found to suit any figure.

The inexpensive striped India silks make pretty light dresses for summer wear.

One of the conspicuous features of this year's fashion is the wide, Oriental sleeve.

The Directoire cape is graceful and becoming, and is one of the successes of the season.

Skirts of white Saxony lace or of Chantilly lace are worn with a Directoire coat of light silk.

The Japanese cottons are again shown in gray-blue figures and flowers on white grounds.

Soft-finished piques, with their repped ground in colors, strewn with small flowers, will be popular.

New black laces for dresses have large raised designs representing flowers, laurel leaf branches, etc

Pretty capotes with flowers and ribbon trimming are worne with white and tulle face veils by young matrons.

Gingham gowns for summer excursions are made with a French waist and nearly straight skirt.

Thin homespuns, smooth-faced twilled and lustrous mohairs are materials chosen for traveling dresses.

The corsage without darts is especially suited to thin fabrics, and is very generally adopted for summer toilettes.

Empire pokes for country wear come closely down at the sides and curve far out in front, making excellent shade hats.

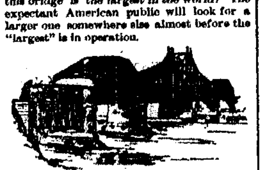
THE WORLD'S PROGRESS.

THE LARGEST DRAWBRIDGE IN THE WORLD AT NEW LONDON.

A Flying Machine Which the Inventor Believes Will Work All Sorts of Aerial Wonders—Reopening an Unused Iron Mine.

About the middle of the present century, when the first great triumphs of engineering skill which mark the age took place in America, they attracted great attention. But today chasms and rivers are bridged, precipices are ascended by steam, the Atlantic is crossed in six days, and people have ceased to wonder. They scarcely ask, "What next? but accept each new work as a matter of course.

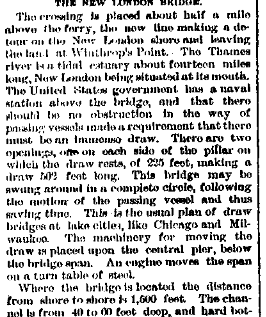
For years those accustomed to travel over the "Shore Line" railroad between Boston and New York have looked forward while on the road to an agreeable change at the crossing of the Thames river at New London, Conn., where trains have been put on a ferry-boat and floated across. A bridge is about being finished at this crossing, and the "Groton ferry" will soon be a thing of the past. What matters it to say that the "draw" of this bridge is the largest in the world? The expectant American public will look for a larger one somewhere else almost before the "largest" is in operation.



THE NEW LONDON BRIDGE.

The crossing is placed about half a mile above the ferry, the new line making a detour on the New London shore and leaving the land at Winthrop's Point. The Thames river is a tidal estuary about fourteen miles long, New London being situated at its mouth. The United States government has a naval station above the bridge, and that there should be no obstruction in the way of passing vessels made a requirement that there must be an immense draw. There are two openings, one on each side of the pillar on which the draw rests, of 225 feet, making a draw 503 feet long. This bridge may be swung around in a complete circle, following the motion of the passing vessel and thus saving time. This is the usual plan of draw bridges at lake cities, like Chicago and Milwaukee. The machinery for moving the draw is placed upon the central pier, below the bridge span. An engine moves the span on a turn table of steel.

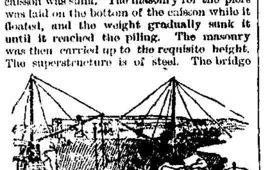
Where the bridge is located the distance from shore to shore is 1,500 feet. The channel is from 40 to 60 feet deep, and hard bottom is only found 130 feet below the water surface. An open caisson was sunk into a dredged hole 18 feet below the natural bottom, and in this piling was driven down to hard bottom. Upon the piling an open top caisson was sunk. The masonry for the piers was laid on the bottom of the caisson while it floated, and the weight gradually sunk it until it reached the piling. The masonry was then carried up to the requisite height. The superstructure is of steel. The bridge completed will be one of the most imposing in America. There is about it something of the appearance of the suspension bridge which arises from the curves of its superstructure.



REOPENING THE TILLY FOSTER MINE.

The ability of engineers of the present day to remove earth rapidly is well illustrated in the reopening of the Tilley Foster mine, about fifty miles from New York, on the New York and Harlem railroad. The ore contained in this mine is very valuable, and has been largely used in the production of Bessemer pig, but owing to an overlying stratum there was great difficulty in mining. In order to support the roof, large quantities of the ore had to be left in position. Concrete pillars were tried, but found liable to be crushed. All plans having failed it was at last determined to remove the super strata and expose the ore.

The work was commenced two years ago, in June, 1887, and has since been steadily pushed forward. Up to March, 1889, 230,000 cubic yards of material were taken out. There is now a great hole 450 feet long, 300 feet wide and 170 feet deep. Of the material removed there have been 15,000 cubic yards of rock in which ore was mixed, but this is small compared with what must follow, for there are still 350,000 cubic yards of rock to be excavated to secure a million tons of ore. The excavation of this rock costs $1.15 for each cubic yard. The material is removed by means of a series of wire cables stretched across the pit, which lower empty car bodies into the pit and bring them up full and place them on trucks. The blasting material used is rackarock.



THE LATEST FLYING MACHINE.

If the solution of problems of transportation by land or sea, of methods of delving into the earth, have been solved, one great division in mechanics is still the vast unknown it has always been. We are practically no nearer navigating the air than we have been for a century or more. But the restlessness of the inventor shows itself as conspicuously in this field as in the others. Every year one or more new contrivances with which to fly through the air are brought out, and some of them are very ingenious. But thus far none have solved the problem. How mocking must be a little sparrow to one of these investigators, which from a fence post, turning its tiny head aside, looks archly at the mechanical genius glued to the earth except for the support of a cumbersome balloon, and then sails up to the eave of a roof. Can there be anything more humiliating? For many years men have watched the simple mechanism of the bird [illegible] and a disk wing pivoted on the vertical wing, ropes extending into the basket for operating the wings.

A suction wheel is mounted above the basket and at its rear, the power being transmitted through a friction wheel. In the basket are wheels mounted, to be rotated by crank arms and treadles after the bicycle fashion.

The different compartments of the balloon are covered with silk, as is usual, and the top compartment is made to shift into different positions according to direction and strength of wind.

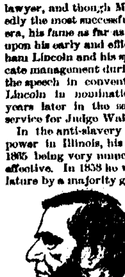
The mechanism in all its various features can hardly be understood except with the aid of a model in operation. Like all other machines of the kind, there are a number of connections and bits of mechanism too detailed to specify in a brief article.

THE LATE LEONARD SWETT.

A Brilliant Lawyer Who Was a Friend of Lincoln.

Leonard Swett, the eloquent lawyer, recently deceased, was not a very old man, and yet he had to a certain extent outlived his fame, which was at its maximum some twenty-five years ago. Alexander Hamilton once said, with something like a sigh, that no fame was so evanescent as that of a great jury lawyer, and though Mr. Swett was undoubtedly the most successful jury lawyer of this era, his fame as far as it is lasting will rest upon his early and efficient support of Abraham Lincoln and his splendid services in delicate management during the war. He made the speech in convention putting Abraham Lincoln in nomination, and twenty-eight years later in the same city did the same service for Judge Walter Q. Gresham.

In the anti-slavery contest he was a great power in Illinois, his speeches from 1853 to 1865 being very numerous and wonderfully effective. In 1858 he was elected to the legislature by a majority greater than that of the regular Republican ticket, this being the only office he ever held. He then engaged earnestly in the work of securing the nomination of Lincoln—writing to public men and organizing other workers. If it can be said of any one man it must be said that Leonard Swett made Abraham Lincoln president. He declined to take office under the administration, though the Peruvian mission and other places of honor were offered him, but he remained in Washington through most of the war, was frequently consulted and employed in delicate and confidential missions. He went to Missouri with discretionary powers to remove Gen. Fremont and reorganize the department, and did the work with rare skill and diplomacy. At the close of the war he located in Chicago, where he became the successful lawyer, taking comparatively little share in politics.



LEONARD SWETT.

Leonard Swett was born Aug. 11, 1825, on a farm in Oxford county, Me., worked hard in youth and gained a tolerably liberal education by study in the winters. Emigrating to the west at majority, he enlisted as a private for the Mexican war and returned an invalid, unable to get any further than Illinois. This fixed his residence at Bloomington, in that state, where he entered on the practice of law on the same circuit with Abraham Lincoln, Stephen T. Logan, U. F. Linder, Edward D. Baker and others who have made that circuit immortal. Judge David Davis long presided over that circuit. In 1854 he married Miss Laura R. Quigg, and they had one child, Leonard Herbert Swett, now about 30 years old. She died early in 1886, and the next year he married Miss Marie Decker, who had been his clerk in the law office for several years—a marriage which excited much Chicago comment at the time.

Mr. Swett's experience at the bar was remarkable. He defended twenty-nine men accused of murder and secured the acquittal of all but one, who was sentenced to the penitentiary for life, but afterwards pardoned. He then took charge of the Anarchists' cause after they had been removed to the supreme court, but was defeated. In civil cases he was scarcely less successful. His untiring industry in preparing his cases and his power before a jury brought this success. In person he was imposing—six feet two inches in height and weighing, when in health, 225 to 250 pounds. His wife, son, brother and three sisters are the only near relatives who survive him.

Uses of Electricity.

It doesn't seem possible that pa would do such a thing, but The Belfast Age says he did. According to that paper a Belfast man has a small electric battery which he put to a novel use. His wife occasionally makes him stay at home to take care of the children. He was left the other day, and wanted to go across the street badly, but the children were too young to be left alone. He finally set the battery going, then placing the handles in the children's hands started the current strong enough so they couldn't let go, and left them. They were there on his return. The beauty of this story probably is in the electrical current of imagination that runs through it.

The Yacht Valkyrie.

It is now a question as to whether there will be any race for the America cup this year at all, but most people will be interested in the accompanying cut of the yacht Valkyrie (from a photograph taken during one of the English races) which was built by Earl Dunraven for the express purpose of carrying the cup back to England. She is a graceful craft.

GREAT DISPLAY AT PARIS.

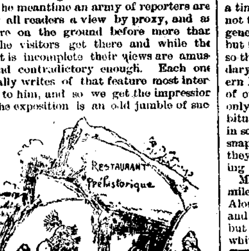
AS A SHOW MERELY IT IS THE GREATEST ON EARTH.

The Useful Not Well Represented Yet—The Curious and the Beautiful Abundant. The Home Life and Work of All Races in All Ages Well Portrayed.

The American workman, to whom the passage money is an unattainable fortune, is invited to see the Paris exposition by proxy and at a trifling individual expense.

This is substantially the proposition of Mr. Edward W. Scripps, who proposes to leave for Paris on the 24th of July with forty representative and genuine workingmen, each chosen by the associations of the trade he represents; and these forty are not only to see the exposition, but to investigate the condition of European laborers from the south of France to the north of Scotland and make a full report. The claim is made that many valuable suggestions will be gained, even as Americans learned to do many things better by seeing how the foreigners did them at the Philadelphia exposition of 1876. Only practical workmen will be taken, each a master in his own craft, and as each would naturally take most interest in the foreigners in his own lines, the variety of opinions returned would be amusing as well as instructive.

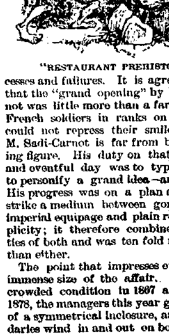
In the meantime an army of reporters are giving all readers a view by proxy, and as they are on the ground before more than half the visitors got there and while the exhibit is incomplete their views are amusing and contradictory enough. Each one naturally writes of that feature most interesting to him, and so we get the impression that the exposition is an odd jumble of successes and failures. It is agreed at the start that the "grand opening" by President Carnot was little more than a farce. Even the French soldiers in ranks on that occasion could not repress their smiles and sneers. M. Sadi-Carnot is far from being an imposing figure. His duty on that historic date and eventful day was to typify something, to personify a grand idea—and he couldn't. His progress was on a plan all his own—to strike a medium between gorgeous royal or imperial equipage and plain republican simplicity; it therefore combined the absurdities of both and was ten fold more ridiculous than either.



"RESTAURANT PREHISTORIQUE."

The point that impresses every one is the immense size of the affair. Warned by the crowded condition in 1867 and in again in 1878, the managers this year gave up the idea of a symmetrical inclosure, and so the boundaries wind in and out on both sides of the Seine, and the antennae of the exposition, so to speak, stretch into quiet quarters a long ways from the Champ de Mars, and strangers ignorant of the city often leave the grounds and go along a street, which they suppose is leading them directly from it, only to come square upon another section of it. There is a vast amount of walking to do, and delicate visitors who can afford it have themselves wheeled about in regular invalids' chairs.

There are three miles of outdoor walks protected by awnings, and many more not protected. The grounds take in the whole Quai d'Orsay and a large section of the left bank of the Seine, all the bridge of Jena and all the Trocadero grounds on the other side of the Seine, besides the Champ de Mars, Ecole Militaire, Esplanade des Invalides and other noted places and open squares. Indeed, one has to study the map carefully, in connection with the descriptions, to see where the show ends and Paris begins. The spectacular part of the exposition is already a great success. All the structures representing all styles of human dwellings of all times, from the cave and brush and bark hut to the palace, are in good form, and the "restaurants of all ages" are comically complete.

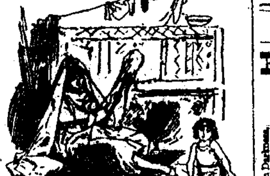


SENEGAL SOLDIER.

On these last the Parisian satirists have turned themselves loose, though the correspondents indicate that their wildest caricatures scarcely surpass the facts. L'Illustration, the illustrated paper, gives a series of views from the "first full meal recorded in history" (that of Adam and Eve) down to the wild Indian dining at the Vienna cafe. In the "Prehistoric Restaurant" the waiter is dressed to represent the original man of the "Stone Age," and the Parisian exquisites who dine in the cave consider him a "howling success." The mammoth tun of champagne, which required twelve oxen to draw it into the grounds, is always surrounded by a curious crowd, [illegible]

[illegible] the Turks fabricate many delicate textures of leather and wool, a few Americans are there to exhibit the telephone and many other proofs of the subtlety of American genius. And the music and dancing of nearly all nations is equally well represented in various pavilions.

In machinery, however, the exposition is as yet a poor affair, and the French made almost a failure of their part of it. The elevator for the Eiffel tower is being put in by an American, and the working of the colored fountain display was finally intrusted to an Englishman. The gathering of soldiers from the semi-civilized nations is unique and wonderfully varied, the French, of course, taking most interest in and giving to the world the best pictures of those in their own possessions or with whom they have close relations. To the American mind there is something ludicrous in these "French soldiers," with black faces and woolly hair, and the "Cavalryman of Senegal" would be taken on this continent for a specimen of "burnt cork minstrelsy." But the French take him "au serieux." They have few color prejudices and can scarcely understand the American idea on that subject.



ALGERIAN EXHIBIT.

All reports agree that as a display the exposition is simply wonderful—"greatest show on earth"—"a polyhippic and unrivaled colossal aggregation," as the bills say, but in the line of the useful—well, the right men have not got there yet.

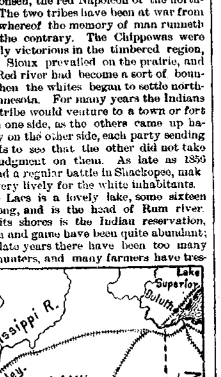
THE CHIPPEWAS.

Something About the Indians Who Have Broken Out in Minnesota.

The Chippewas have "broke out," which is almost as much of a surprise to Minnesota as an "outbreak" among the Quakers would be in Pennsylvania. The Chippewas have been peaceable so long that many people would have forgotten their existence but for the names they scattered on the geography from Lake Erie to Winnipeg; but the late murders at Mille Lacs show that the wild nature is still hereditary in them.

There was a time when these Indians, more properly called Ojibbeways, were the terror of the northwest, and in their long wars with the Sioux they had a roll of heroes equal to that of Homer, ending with the great Pahyah Goonseh, the red Napoleon of the northwest. The two tribes have been at war from a time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. The Chippewas were generally victorious in the timbered region, but the Sioux prevailed on the prairie, and so the Red river had become a sort of boundary when the whites began to settle northern Minnesota. For many years the Indians of one tribe would venture to a town or fort only on one side, as the others came up habitually on the other side, each party sending in scouts to see that the other did not take snap judgment on them. As late as 1856 they had a regular battle in Shackopee, making it very lively for the white inhabitants.

Mille Lacs is a lovely lake, some sixteen miles long, and is the head of Rum river. Along its shores is the Indian reservation, and fish and game have been quite abundant; but of late years there have been too many white hunters, and many farmers have trespassed on the Indian lands. The Chippewas had been peaceable so long that no one dreamed of their doing any damage; but their annual gathering gave occasion to air and discuss their grievances, and their dances excited the young bucks to the point where they felt that they must go off and kill somebody. It takes at least ten generations of careful culture to breed the wild nature out of any race of man or stock of animals.



MAP SHOWING LOCATION OF TROUBLE.

The Ojibbeways are the northern and main branch of the great Algonquin family, and centered on Lake Huron, stretching as far east as Ohio, and to the far northwest, from which they came. Indeed, all the tribes this side of the Rocky mountains, and many farther west, have clear traditions of having come from the north, each invasion driving its predecessors before it. They took part with the French and then with the English against the Americans, but made a permanent peace in 1816. Retiring westward from Michigan and Wisconsin they expelled the Sioux from upper Minnesota, and have remained there some sixty years. They are noted among Indians for having produced some remarkable scholars. One of them, George Copway, wrote the traditional history of his people and attracted much attention in England. Another, Peter Jones, is a writer of ability. They have a written language, newspaper, and many books. The missionaries speak very highly of those in Minnesota; many of them are well-to-do farmers, and so it may safely be concluded that there will be no general uprising.

History of the Johnstown Flood.

Messrs. J. W. Keeler & Co., Phila., (successors to Hubbard Bros.) have in press for early issue a complete and accurate History of the Johnstown Flood, including all the other cities and towns that have suffered likewise. It will be well illustrated. Will be sold through agents, or mailed direct on receipt of $1.50. The demand will undoubtedly be immense.

The thrilling experiences, pathetic incidents, deeds of heroism, unparalleled suffering, devastation and death, and the sypathy shown in the contributions of millions for their relief form a history of most intense interest to all, and a history everyone will want to preserve in book form. Deafness Can't Be Cured by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

[illegible] owners of certain water rights along the hydraulic canal in this village, as to the amount of water they were using, the exact number of inches their deeds entitled them to use and in a number of cases there was claimed no limit had been prescribed, or at least, left so indefinite as to cause great dissatisfaction. Various plans had been suggested whereby each one could have determined his just rights and have settled without recourse to law, all the disputed points. The need of this was made more apparent as the water in the river has grown perceptibly less, while a growing demand for more is seen, and earnestly sought by the business community. Almost every single owner and manufacturer has known, and acknowledged that in using the old fashioned central-discharge water wheel, quite a percentage of water was used more than the legal limit of 140 inches under 12 feet head, as has always been recognized as the amount allowed and sold for "one run of stone." And as different ones have replaced these wooden wheels by the improved, and far more powerful turbine, using in the aggregate less water, there has been a growing desire to have others do likewise or at least "in a dry time" not use more water than they are entitle to. To state the case briefly a friendly suit was instituted, all the parties interested agreeing to abide by the decision rendered, after having full opportunity in person or by attorney, of pleading their case and presenting all the proofs by deeds and otherwise. William Kernan, Esq., a brother of the Hon. Francis Kernan of Utica, was agreed upon to hear and determine the rights of each as given by their deeds of water lots. Hon. Charles Rhodes of Oswego, who is acknowledged to be the best authority on hydraulic matters in this state, whose knowledge must extend back more than a third of a century and include as it does, a full understanding of the old "tub-wheel" "under-shot-wheel" with all the adjuncts in a tannery and woolen mill, acted as counsel and witness. It is believed the much mooted question of whether the old tannery lot is entitled to water will be decided in the affirmative, at present vital to the interests of the gun factory. Among the firms interested were the Oswego Manufacturing Co. owning the box factory, represented by the Hon. S. M. Coon; the Hoyt estate, Genesee Mills by G. S. Piper; W. G. Gage & Co. by Arvin Rice; Hunter & Comstock Arms Company, by N. N. Stranahan; the Victoria Paper Mills, by H. E. Nichols. Nearly all firms on the race were represented by legal counsel.

A hearing occurred last Thursday and Friday at the office of Howe & Rice attracting much attention. The court took all the deeds, papers, etc. bearing upon the several interests and another and probably final hearing will be held August 1st.

The Century.

The Century for June, opens with "The Convict Mines of Kara" by George Kennan, one of a series of interesting articles by this famous writer. This is of especial interest, describing the political prisons of Siberia, Russia, located in a dreary valley between two mountains 5,000 distant from St. Petersburg. The Kara mines are virtually isolated from the rest of the world and are reached only by boats in summer and by sledges drawn over the ice in winter. Mr. Frost, an artist, accompanied the writer, and the illustrations are faithful pictures of convict life while at work in the gold mines, and immured in prison cells. The description given by Mr. Kennan of the terrible and inhuman treatment of these convicts—a large proportion being sent there for life, for having an opinion different from the Czar—leads one to exclaim while reading the article "Truth is indeed stranger than Fiction."

This number also includes 150 pages of other interesting reading matter, while the number is especially noteworthy in illustration; some twenty-five expert wood engravers contributing.

History of Alaska.

The time so long waited for by the reading world has come when The History Company would allow the incomparable historical series of Hubert Howe Bancroft to be broken and sold in separate sets, and it marks a period in the history of literature. Thousands who have desired to possess some of the volumes, but did not care to buy them all, can now be accommodated, greatly to their own benefit and the benefit of the country.

The manner in which Mr Bancroft accomplished his unique undertaking is generally known to our readers—his in-gathering of material from the four quarters of the earth; his expenditure of the best thirty years of his life and over a million of money; the erection of a building specially for the accomodation of his priceless library; the writing of his history, etc, etc. Had not this been done the history of Alaska never could have been written. The country should be proud of the man who has done this, unaided and alone, and should patronize his works liberally, as well from motives of patriotism as on account of their merits.

It is a most fascinating study to follow this author in his labors. "The whole story," says the British Quarterly Review, "Mr. Bancroft has told with much force and eloquence and impartiality." The New York Nation declares that "especial good judgment has been shown in balancing conflicting authorities," while the Sacramento Record Union says that "in gratifying the desire to add to the treasure-house of the world's knowledge, we are indebted for records that will endure as long as this country has a history. See advertisement in another column [illegible] to whom [illegible]

[illegible] all such matters. [illegible] Ward drove a wagon attached to the Signal Service, and on his rounds became enamored of the milk business. The capital required to buy one outfit was small and it was only the question of a little adroit financiering to secure it. The merry milkman was only in business a few months when the several-millionaire philanthropist W. W. Corcoran noticed his attentive business energy and encouraged him to put forth stronger efforts. It was the reconstruction period in the history of Washington business. Old houses were vanishing and new ones coming to the front.

No one was surprised then when Frank K. Ward bought two more wagons and established himself in headquarters. The Corcoran money had again been taxed to assist a worthy man. For the next three or four years the growth was phenomenal. Ward was not even contented to allow his headquarters to remain merely a repository and distributing point for his half hundred wagons. He fitted up in one part of the building a lunch room. The furnishing was pretty and the food palatable to the large class that like pie and milk. The venture so succeeded that one after another branches were opened about town, until Ward's trademark, "Alderney" appeared on a dozen neat places about town. These rooms were all similarly fitted, wicker furniture, polished floors, ornamental scales for weighing yourself, music boxes, flowers and canaries in brass cages. Everything was scrupulously clean. Frank K. Ward had the respect of everyone. His luck became proverbial. When he generously gave a valuable horse and buggy to a charitable fair to be raffled off, everyone was glad that he was the lucky man to draw it.

Everything might have gone on swimingly to the end of life if Ward had not one failing. He was not a gentleman. His name at the bank was good for many thousand dollars, and when his old benefactor Corcoran died, he still retained respect and confidence. He belonged to the Masonic fraternity and many will remember that he distributed milk, sweet and seemingly pure, at the San Francisco conclave that had been put in cans in Washington five days before, of course it must have been heavily drugged, but it was a surprise to the Californians. At every charitable bazaar and at the fairs of the crack local military organization he was foremost in contributing, and from whatever impulse the giving comes people warm toward generous souls. But Ward loved notoriety, thirsted for it. He was noisy in his attempts to impressed every person he met with his importance. Neglect was death to him.

Now, to be constantly the central figure in any legetimate social cast in Washington is nearly impossible, for the city is for the greater portion of the year the rendezvous of the most important persons of every line of life.

So Ward sought the social outcasts, and became a great character among the sporting class. He hobnobbed with cheap actors and "tin-horn" gamblers. Often in the saloon in which he this week committed murder, he was wont to throw pennies at a crack in the floor for $100 a toss. He never drank anything but wine, and his diamonds were mounted and worn strictly in the approved gambling style. Lacking mental resources outside his business and being as genuine a vulgarian as ever lived, he sought relaxation in stupid alleged jokes. He would astonish some weak barroom ghost by taking off his old plug hat and jumping on it and then giving the physical wreck five or ten dollars with which to buy a new one. His associates included a Brooklyn Congressman with sporting proclivities, and in time a running horse was named after him.

No business can really be trusted to run itself and as the human machinery needs rest, Ward was compelled to neglect his business in order to be up all night with the boys. Still, he spent money like water and when new business rivals came into successful competition, he was not worried. Even when things went their worst and a few months ago he became a bankrupt, he retained his sporting proclivities, and no change was observable except that he drank harder than ever and his resorts were still lower dives. A few weeks ago, he received a serious beating at the hands of a young man named Adler. On Tuesday night of this week he met him in a saloon, and seemingly without provocation, without the shadow of an excuse, wantonally shot him to death.

A Pleasant Event.

On Monday evening a pleasant social event occurred at the home of deputy sheriff C. S. Murphy on Erie street—the tenth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy's married life. A large number of relatives and friends assembled and spent a most enjoyable evening. At eight o'clock supper was announced and the neat and well spread tables spoke volumes for the taste and culinary abilities of the hostess. The coffee was served by Miss Mary Burke and the Misses Mary and Annie Murphy. The evening was [illegible] work; but lots were purchased, and the new building commenced, and on Aug. 28, 1838, it was dedicated. It was built of plain brick, oblong in shape, and cost $7,000. Wings and galleries were afterwards added, the addition of the wings making the church cruciform in shape. Formerly the churchyard was such in the old sense, but burial in it was discontinued in 1849.

John Loughlin was consecrated bishop of Brooklyn in 1853 and made St. James' his cathedral. Since then a number of prominent clergymen have officiated in it. Prior to 1868 Bishop Loughlin selected ground for a new cathedral. The corner stone was laid, but the work has not yet been completed.

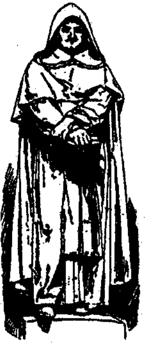
GIORDANO BRUNO IN MARBLE.

Curious Career, Disputes and Doctrines of the Iconoclast.

Giordano Bruno has a monument in Rome at last, which is much the same as if August Spies should have a monument in Chicago; and the agnostics and other innovators of Italy made its unveiling the occasion of a great demonstration against the church. About 30,000 people from all parts of Italy witnessed the demonstration.

All this was not so much for what Bruno did or said or wrote, for not one person in ten thousand knows what his real opinions were; but it was for what he has been assumed to represent. He was the Bob Ingersoll of the Sixteenth century, attacking with wild humor all the assailable points of the people's faith, but overlooking its beauties. He roamed over southern Europe and England for fifteen years, disputing with all who would contend with him, ridiculing the local opinions of the place he happened to be in, writing an immense number of essays and publishing some forty books and pamphlets. Very naturally, he got into trouble with the authorities in many places, was expelled from the Dominican order, was driven from Geneva by the Calvinists, ridiculed out of Paris by the philosophers and finally put to death at Rome.

He was born in 1548 near Naples and came to his death Feb. 17, 1600. All his works were long out of print when collected and published as curiosities fifty years ago, but even now they are only found in a few libraries. His numerous satires cannot be appreciated because modern readers cannot appreciate the conditions of his time or master the details, and his philosophy has largely become obsolete or ridiculous by the great flood of recent science. His great principle, however, survives and has lately been fully elaborated by modern philosophers, and as far as the common mind can see does not differ materially from that of Herbert Spencer.



THE BRUNO STATUE.

He maintained that there is one original and fundamental principle or substance, and but one; all that we see or feel are but appearances of it. It is at once the original intellect and matter, and is eternal. Mind and body, spirit and matter, are merely varying phenomena of the eternal one. So there is a soul in everything, and all is immortal, but in constant change. This appears to be only the modern doctrine of the persistence of force. Bruno died with coolness and bravery, stoutly refusing to recant any of his views, and for this, if anything, he deserves a monument.

Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, June 24.

Although there was a decline of ⅛c. in prices to-day, salesmen did not hold back for what the buyers would pay. And although last week was more or less unfortunate for buyers, they seemed to tackle the offerings with just as much courage to-day. Fact, is that while no price seems to have been named before 5:30 p. m., there was considerable activity after that time, and the last hour of the market saw some lively work. Buyers were willing to pay about 8¾ to 8½c. for fancy stock, and occasionally a fraction higher, and the competition at this range was quite active. Sales were mostly of the first week in June cheese, here and there a factory being found that was just closing out its May stock. On an average cheese is now off to June 7 or 8, leaving about two weeks' stock on shelves. Transactions are as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price
7	700	7¼
15	1,458	8c.
78	7,980	8¼
23	2,212	8¼
31	3,099	8⅜
21	2,274	8½
3	340	8⅝
1	100	8¾
179	18,163
	1,383	Com.
Total.	19,546

Ruling price 8½c. Transactions one year ago 20,040 boxes; ruling price 8¼c. Two years ago, 18,220 boxes, ruling 8¼c.

The cheese at 7¼c. was said to be slightly skimmed.

It will be noticed that for three years now the ruling has run very evenly. The year before it was 7¼c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, June 24.

Cheese—The market was considerably, disappointing to salesmen to-day, who had better prices, than last week. Trade was consequently a little slow for a time, but it afterwards rallied and became quite brisk. Prices are off about ¼c. from last week. Salesmen made a hard push for better figures, but failing to secure them they sold for the best they could get, and the sales aggregated nearly as much as last week. It was rumored that 8½c. had been paid for several lots, but they were reported at 8¼c., with a condition that the other fraction would be paid if the New York market warranted it. It is the general opinion here that there is no legitimate grounds for the market being so flucturating, it being the belief that it is the work of speculators entirely.

The transactions are:

67	4,910	8c
51	3,859	8¼
1	108	8⅛
3	202	p. t.
5	377	Com.
127	9,456
Farm dairy	971
Total	10,427

Farm dairies—The sales of farm cheese are more than usual, amounting to 971 boxes. Prices range at 8 to 8¼c; but one lot at the latter price. The bulk sold at 8¼c.

Butter—There were about 43 packages creamery butter sold at 16@16c½. and 37 packages farm dairy sold at 16@17c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-one factories were represented at this market Monday night with 1882 boxes of cheese which brought 8¼ to 8½ cents.

"If a woman is pretty,
To me 'tis no matter,
Be she blonde or brunette,
So she lets me look at her."

An unhealthy woman is rarely, if ever, beautiful. The peculiar diseases to which so many of the sex are subject, are prolific causes of pale, sallow faces, blotched with unsightly pimples, dull lustreless eyes and emaciated forms. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription; and with the restoration of health comes that beauty which combined with good qualities of head and heart, makes women angels of loveliness. "Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

Commemoration of St. John's Day.

The Masonic fraternity accepting the invitation of Rev. Brother Brunning, to attend the Universalist church on Sunday last, turned out in a body, and marched in procession from the Lodge, about a hundred strong. Upon their arrival there, they found the church, around the pulpit, had been admirably and most tastefully decorated with flowers, by the ladies of that church, and the house literally filled with people, except the seats to be occupied by the masons. The preliminary services were rendered in a very impressive manner, Past-Masters, I. C. Curtis and S. Parmelee assisting the regular choir, with Mrs. Ida Watson at the organ. The Rev. Brother took a compound text from Psal. 56-11 and Rom. 7-19, "In God have I put my trust; I will not be afraid what man can do unto me." "For the good that I would, I do not." In the room we can allot to this subject; we cannot do justice to the sermon delivered by the Rev. Brother who was certainly at his best, and can only say that by common consent, it was considered most admirably fitting for the occasion, full of historic fact, the highest moral sense and religious fervor. In which was woven most appropriately much of the written and unwritten work of the order and used with great tact for instruction, and even reproof. The spirit of the sermon kept the hearers unflaging attention for forty-five minutes and the sermon itself grew more in interest from beginning to end. And while due and full credit was given for the grand moral being of this noble order, it was specifically urged that it did not and could not fill the place of the church, and therein it was urged that to the moral excellences of Masonry be added churchly, religious and spiritual life which would work masterly good to the community and to the world at large, because of the number and learned forces of this universal body. During the delivering of the discourse there was recited two short poems, one on the "Trusty Mason" and at the close the other, which was full of loving spirit and tender sentiment, entitled "One hour with you and you and you." Upon their return to the Lodge the Masonic brethren, in order to show their appreciation of the services, passed unanimously the following well deserved resolution, viz:

RESOLVED, That a vote of thanks be, and are hereby tendered to the Rev. Bro. Brunning for his interest in our moral, and spiritual welfare, as evidenced in the discourse he gave this morning.

How's Your Liver?

The old lady who replied, when asked how her liver was, "God bless me, I never heard that there was such a thing in the house," was noted for her amiability. Prometheus, when chained to a rock, might as well have pretended to be happy, as the man who is chained to a diseased liver. For poor Prometheus, there was no escape, but by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, the disagreeable feelings, irritable temper, constipation, indigestion, dizziness and sick headache, which are caused by a diseased liver, promptly disappear.

These industries will bring a score or more of skilled mechanics with their families to Fulton. Each of these industries are increasing yearly and will prove a great boom to prosperous Fulton.

CHARLES JOHNSON DEAD.

His Second Attempt at Suicide Successful.

Charles A. Johnson who attempted to commit suicide in this village some two weeks ago by taking morphine repeated the experiment in Oswego on Friday last. He was found by the police in a dazed condition and taken to police headquarters and placed in a cell. Although Johnson told the officers that he had taken morphine they did not believe him thinking that he was drunk. At 3 o'clock Saturday morning he was found laying on the couch in his cell dead.

Letters were found on his person showing that he had decided upon the 21st as the day to commit suicide. A final request was also found requesting that he be buried at Mt. Adnah, that Samuel Green make a prayer and Ed. Cole have charge of the funeral arrangements. His wishes were carried out, his remains being brought from Oswego Monday at 3:30 and interred in the family plot at Mt. Adnah.

Great Slaughter Sale of Dry Goods and Clothing.

Every person in business knows the season has been backward. The cold and wet weather has kept in tack a good portion of our summer stock of dry goods and clothing. We are not going to carry them over. We believe the first loss is the best there is. Only about 7 weeks of actual summer trade before us. We will make such reductions as will induce everybody in need of summer clothing to come at once and take advantage of the extremely low prices, Every article in the line of summer wear will be sold at cost of importation and manufacture, and our customers must take these things into consideration. That we do not carry any goods that we cannot guarantee, and all of well-known standard makes, and if not satisfied, money refunded if returned in good condition. Remember that these are not goods purchased for advertising purposes, but are regular lines of summer goods in which we are overstocked. Come in and see that this is business.

The floral decorations and birds being the same as in the morning. The Annual Event of More Than Usual Interest.

The good work of the Fulton Schools was shown on Friday evening by the excellent class of eight young men and eight young ladies that appeared on the stage of the opera house last Friday evening and received from the hands of the President of the Board of Education their diplomas. It was still further evident that the community has a deep interest in the school and those that go out from it as graduates, and well it may for under the guidance of Prof. Clapp and his able corps of teachers the school has gained an enviable rank among the schools of this state.

The music secured for this evening was the best we have ever heard in Fulton on similar occasions. At eight o'clock Rev. Chas. Olmstead offered an earnest prayer which was followed by music. Fred C. Draper whose high rank as a scholar entitled him to become salutatorian of his class welcomed all in a short but excellent address.

Miss Kittie Maynard was the first young lady to speak. This difficult position on the program was filled with perfect self possession and her subject "Which Way?" was handled gracefully and easily. Many in the audience thought one of the prizes would be awarded to her.

"Modern Journalism" was the subject of Herbert W. Flaxington's oration. This youthful speaker skillfully wove into his article the influence of the press in England and America. The graphic description it gave of important events. He touched upon the eagerness that it was read by anxious friends in time of war and worked in very cleverly the important part it played in the recent Johnstown disaster. As subsequent events proved he was awarded one of the prizes

Georgietta M. Grigson's essay was "Living Monuments." The essay was full of animation and good thoughts. She claimed that everyone should be ambitious to do something that would leave a monument of their worth. As illustrations she sighted Florence Nightengale and her noble work in the Crimean war, George Washington and heroes of '76.

Blanche E. Boomer took "Utopia," "the perfect land of nowhere," as she termed it, for her essay. Our legislature was contrasted with Utopian law. Utopian customs, language, grammar with our people's cuscustoms, language, grammar. The whole was spiced with well written and arranged contents and ended with the announcement that "the room for improvement was the largest room in the world." It was evident to all that this young lady would carry off one of the prizes.

William G. Townsend was the next speaker. His subject was "Our Immigrants." He claimed that immigration now was different from that of 50 or 60 years ago—that now we were accustomed to welcome to our shores the oppressed of all nations—that legislature should restrict this. As a result of this indiscriminate latitude to immigration he related the trouble and bloodshed brought on by Socialists and Anarchists at Chicago and elsewhere. His arguments were strong and his subject well handled.

"The Inventor and the Invented" was Sidney W. Kelley's subject. This speaker presented a good appearance and with a well modulated voice made a favorable impression as he related the work accomplished by inventors by means of the microscope and telescope. Steam and electricity received attention in his carefully written article as well as printing, "the art preservative of all arts."

Frances E. DeGraw had selected for her essay "The Minstrel and the Monk." The influence of these personages left their influence upon generations that followed was the essential point and was ably carried through the essay. Miss DeGraw's graceful appearance on the stage made a most pleasing effect on the audience.

"Obstacles an Advantage" was Albertus Loomis' subject. To illustrate his point, he traced the history of nations showing obstacles that were overcome and how they brought out what was in a man and proving that if these obstacles had not appeared life would have glided along, illustrious persons would have died and nothing more heard of them. Abraham Lincoln, James A. Garfield and Milton were used as examples to prove his theory.

Fred C. Draper in his subject traced "The Samoan Trouble" in a manner that showed him well posted in this event that has recently been of so much national interest. He went back 30 years and graphically told the relations of Samoa and Germany and the United States which culminated in the great storm and wreck of vessels some three months ago. During the rendering of this oration rain poured in torrents and although the speaker had a clear and strong voice it could scarcely be heard.

May E. Betts, the recipient of the second ladies' prize had as the subject of her essay "Children in Dickens." The hardships endured by this noted author in childhood she attributed as the reason for his great love for children. She gave a synopsis of his early life and cited instances of his tender feeling for the young with particular stress on his "Death of Little Nell."

Eleanor A. Goman related how the Indians had been driven from their favorite streams and forests—how in instance after instance promises made them had been broken—how education and refinement would scarcely be expected from them as they anticipated no improvement in their condition. Her plea for "The American Indian" was strong and well written.

Carrie Stowe and Fred Brown had prepared orations but owing to extra amount of work during the last term were excused from delivering the same.

Prof. Clapp announced that Wm. G. Bennett had prepared an oration but for the sake of variety would give a recitation, Will Carleton's lively piece "The Wheelman was what this young gentleman had selected and during its recital the interior of the opera house was a sea of smiles.

Mabel I Waugh's essay, "The Message of the Bells," was beautifully written and showed no small amount of careful thought in its preparation. Miss Waugh is an excellent scholar and she clearly showed it in her essay.

Herbert C. Howe not only led his class in scholarship but he carried off the first prize for the best written and delivered oration. The subject of the oration that did the business was "Civilizing Forces." These he claimed were war, commerce and missionary. The first was rapidly going into disuse but the other two were increasing in potency. His valedictory address to class, instructors and under graduates completed the rostrum exercises of the class of 1889.

State diplomas were then presented by State Regent, Carroll H. Smith of Syracuse; who took occasion to congratulate the people of Fulton in having so fine a school and paying a high compliment to Prof. Clapp whom he said Chancellor Pierson of Albany pronounced to be one of the best in the State.

The President of the Board of Education, Francis E. Bacon, after a few well timed remarks in which he gave the class some good advice stating that the time had come when they mustdo the building and planning for themselves, presented them with their diplomas.

The committee for awarding the prizes were Prof. C. H. Treadwell of Oswego, Prof. Blodgett, Supt. of Schools at Syracuse, and Miss Ida Griffin, School Commissioner. The awards were announced by Prof. Treadwell as follows: Oration, first prize, Herbert C. Howe; second prize Herbert W. Flaxington. Essays, first prize, Blanche E. Boomer, second prize, May E. Betts.

The graduates were all recipients of beautiful flowers from friends a sample of which was presented to each after they had finished speaking by little Barker and Cameron Bristol.

CARD OF THANKS.

I desire to extend sincere thanks to friends for the many kindnesses rendered and for the abundance of flowers sent before the funeral of my deceased wife.

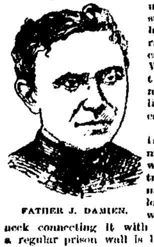
FATHER DAMIEN, THE LEPER PRIEST, AND HIS SUCCESSORS.

Some Account of Leprosy—Its History, Its Treatment and Its Extent—It Does Not Flourish Usually in Either Cool or Damp Climates.

The recent death of Father Damien, the "Hero Martyr of Molokai," the prompt acceptance of his vacant place and work by Father Lambert Conrady, who is doomed to the same fate, and the appearance of isolated cases of leprosy in America, have awakened a new interest in that dread disease. At the beginning, the sad fact must be acknowledged that but little more is known of its cause and essential nature than was known when "Gehazi went forth a leper as white as snow," and when the Jewish law was so strict and so thoroughly enforced that even a stricken king had to abandon his throne and become an outcast. But some important facts as to prevention and possible cure, still more as to alleviation, have been discovered, and in this line Father Damien did and suffered enough to entitle him to immortality.

This devoted priest, whose portrait has but just reached America and is here given, was a Belgian, born Jan. 3, 1840; at the age of 16 he devoted himself to celibacy and good works, and in 1872, when all of manhood was before him, he reached the Sandwich Islands as a missionary. On the 9th of May, 1873, he entered on his work as resident missionary in the leper settlement, devoting his life voluntarily to those stricken people, and but recently the ravages of leprosy ended his noble life. When he entered the leper settlement it was almost literally a "hell on earth."



FATHER J. DAMIEN.

Molokai, the leper island, is forty miles long and ten wide; at the extreme end is a peninsula three miles long and a mile wide; across the neck connecting it with the main island a regular prison wall is built, and on all sides the cliffs rise some 3,000 feet above the sea except at one place, where there is a gentle slope to the landing. On this secluded spot have been imprisoned for many years from 500 to 900 people, dying by inches, uncared for morally until the good priest came, and but poorly provided with necessaries at any time. The Hawaiian government enforced their segregation, but too long neglected their comfort.

When Father Damien arrived the lepers had no houses but such flimsy huts as they could construct, no medical attendance and only the poorest food. The weakest and most despondent at once lay down and died; the stronger began what he called "the orgies of despair." There was a considerable tract of fertile land and taro root and sweet potatoes were tolerably plenty; of the latter the leper made a fiery liquor and drank to frenzy, followed by temporary oblivion. The hulu-hulu (a pagan dance) was their common amusement, and its conclusion is usually in the most abandoned licentiousness. In this dance and its products, in playing cards and in the frenzy or stupor of intoxication most of these doomed creatures wore away their days. Their motto was: Aole kanawai ma keia wahi. "In this place there is no law."

Yet in that dread retreat noble sentiments survived and heroic devotion was witnessed; healthy husbands accompanied their stricken wives and wives their husbands to a certain death, but children not tainted were forbidden entrance. As in the Orient, a leper is "civilly dead" in those islands; his estate is administered upon and his family relations are dissolved as if he were buried. In some parts of the east this idea is carried so far that a sort of burial rite is observed and a shovelful of earth is cast upon the leper at the time of his official banishment to typify his complete extinction. In Kalawao, as the place is called, Father Damien wrought a wonderful reform.

The government was roused and the peninsula was soon dotted with neat cottages, in the center a handsome chapel, and near it a residence for the priest. Cows were taken to the retreat and a generous diet of milk and vegetables insured. A regular medical board now makes frequent visits. The mortality has decreased one-half and the disease so greatly mitigated as to raise sanguine hopes that a cure may be discovered. The morality of the settlement is good, and comfort and happiness are not entirely unknown.

For twelve years this hero labored in daily association with the lepers, then the disease showed in leprous tubercles in his face, and early in 1886 he was prostrated most of the time. But the world was ringing with his fame and faithful followers appeared. That year arrived Father Conrady, a young priest, native of Oregon, and soon after seven sisters of the Franciscan order came to serve as nurses in the leper hospital. Father Damien used his remnant of strength in writing a comprehensive report to the Hawaiian government, with many valuable suggestions, and it is scarcely possible to read it without tears. He barely indulges a hope that a cure may be discovered, but proves that it may be greatly mitigated and the danger of infection minimized.

True leprosy is very rare in any branch of the Aryan race, and comparatively so in any race living in a cool or damp climate with an abundance and variety of vegetables. In Norway it has lately infected several persons, and in two localities of Canada. An American lady was recently secluded in Philadelphia with the disease in its worst form, having contracted it in Brazil, and a few deaths have occurred on this continent since the Chinese immigration set in. It made frightful ravages in Europe soon after the crusades, but was finally banished by quarantine and improved conditions. The Jews appear to have completely eliminated it from their race by long observance of the Mosaic law. In the crowded sections of Asia, where hundreds of millions live in filth and poverty, is its true habitat. We may feel reasonably sure that Canada and the United States will escape, despite the Chinese, as long as they remain clean and Christian and have abundant food.

A Book with a History.

Mrs. John Ogilvie Roorback, of Mystic, has one of the twenty-two copies of the Episcopal prayer book, and administration of sacraments, in the Mohawk language, printed by special order of the Rev. John Ogilvie, assistant minister of Trinity church, New York, under whose auspices the entire work was published in 1769. These few copies were ordered by him to be bound in calf and gold, to be used as presents to particular friends. The book in question came into the hands of Sir William Johnson, superintendent of Indian affairs, and was given to Thomas, a chief of the Oneidas, for whom he had a great regard. Jan. 6, 1770, it came into the hands of Eleazer Williams (reputed dauphin of France) and was presented by him to the present owner.—Hartford Courant.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says: "I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A sample of these wonderful Powders will be sent Free to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists.

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. ELIZABETH ZANE.

This dauntless pioneer maiden's name
Is inscribed in gold on the scroll of Fame;
She was the lassie who knew no fear
When the tomahawk gleamed on the far frontier.
If deeds of daring should win renown,
Let us honor this damsel of Wheeling town,
Who braved the savage with deep disdain—
Bright eyed, buxom Elizabeth Zane.

'Twas more than a hundred years ago,
They were close beset by the dusky foe;
They had spent of powder their scanty store,
And who the gauntlet should run for more?
She sprang to the portal and shouted, "I!
'Tis better a girl than a man should die!
My loss would be but the garrison's gain.
Unbar the gate!" said Elizabeth Zane.

The powder was sixty yards away.
Around her the foemen in ambush lay;
As she darted from shelter they gazed with awe,
Then wildly shouted, "A squaw!" "A squaw!"
She neither swerved to the left or right,
Swift as an antelope's was her flight.
"Quick! Open the door!" she cried, amain,
"For a hope forlorn! 'Tis Elizabeth Zane!"

No time had she to waver or wait,
Back she must go ere it be too late;
She snatched from the table its cloth in haste
And knotted it deftly about her waist.
Then filled it with powder—never, I ween,
Had powder so lovely a magazine;
Then, scorning the bullets, a deadly rain,
Like a startled fawn fled Elizabeth Zane.

She gained the fort with her precious freight;
Strong hands fastened the oaken gate;
Brave men's eyes were suffused with tears
That had there been strangers for many years.
From flint lock rifles again there sped
'Gainst the skulking redskins a storm of lead,
And the war whoop sounded that day in vain,
Thanks to the deed of Elizabeth Zane.

Talk not to me of Paul Revere,
A man, on horseback, with naught to fear;
Nor of old John Burns, with his bell crowned hat—
He'd an army to back him, so what of that?
Here's to the heroine, plump and brown,
Who ran the gauntlet in Wheeling town!
Hers is a record without a stain—
Beautiful, buxom Elizabeth Zane.

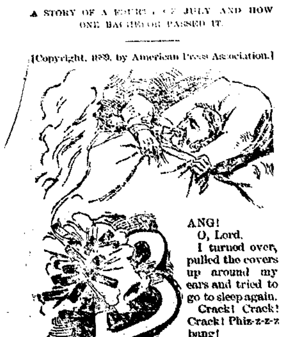
WICKED FAN FLINT.

A STORY OF A FOURTH OF JULY AND HOW ONE BACHELOR PASSED IT.

[Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.]



BANG!

O, Lord.

I turned over, pulled the covers up around my ears and tried to go to sleep again.

Crack! Crack! Crack! Phiz-z-z-z bang!

I opened one eye to see if it were not time to get up. It was only gray daylight. The sun hadn't risen. I pulled my watch from under the pillow.

"Five o'clock."

Three hours before breakfast.

There is no use thinking of getting up, or lying here awake. I must go to sleep again; and I turned back on the other side, drew up the covers once more, and in five minutes was dropping off into a slumber, when Bang!

Who was it that suggested the celebration of this fourth day of July with crackers and bombs? I wished that I could bore a hole in his head and introduce a dozen of each. Between the explosions I slept for five or ten minutes at a time and had fitful dreams. I dreamed that I was working an immense nut cracker, with handles six feet long, and that I had the head of Thomas Jefferson in its jaws and was cracking his skull. It was fratured with a loud

Crack!

I awoke with a start. It was another of those infernal bombs.

I had come up to the country to visit my friend Tom Flint at his father's place, "Wildwood,"—to get rid of the firing in the city. My nervous system was always delicate and I never could stand sudden noises. Consequently it always seemed to me that every one took delight in banging doors, knocking over chairs and dropping heavy weights right by my ears. Independence day had been a terror to me as a child, and now I was a man grown—a man approaching middle age—I dreaded it more each year.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, [illegible]

I had come into the country with another purpose. I had long admired my host's daughter, my chum's oldest sister. Not the younger one—not that imp of iniquity, Fan—

yes, Fan, not Frances or Fanny, but Fan. She was too wicked to be called anything else. I had no such taste as to want to possess that thorn in the side of every quiet person. Alice was my favorite—my darling, my angel. I loved Alice as much as I hated Fan and fire crackers.

I listened to hear the voice of another imp in the family—Dick. Dick was 5. I supposed he had gotten up early and was firing his explosives. Everything was quiet except an occasional crack or a bang near my window. Where can the cursed thing come from? There's no one on the lawn; at least I can't hear any voices.

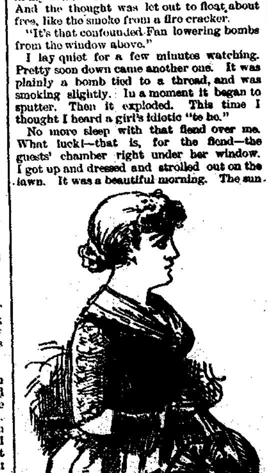
A couple of hours passed during which I alternately dozed, started, wondered. At last I looked at my watch again. It was 7 o'clock. My window was broad open. It had been too hot the night before to think of closing it. I lay on my back looking out. All at once I saw something which I, at first, thought was a big spider lowering himself on its web. When it was before the center of my window it exploded.

Something at the same moment exploded in my brain. It was the shell of a thought. And the thought was let out to float about free, like the smoke from a fire cracker.

"It's that confounded Fan lowering bombs from the window above."

I lay quiet for a few minutes watching. Pretty soon down came another one. It was plainly a bomb tied to a thread, and was smoking slightly. In a moment it began to sputter. Then it exploded. This time I thought I heard a girl's idiotic "te he."

No more sleep with that fiend over me. What luck!—that is, for the fiend—the guests' chamber right under her window. I got up and dressed and strolled out on the lawn. It was a beautiful morning. The sun was sparkling on the dew; there was the fresh smell of the country, and not a sound to be heard. The children were not out—for some unexpected reason. What a quiet sleep I might have enjoyed had it not been for that diabolical practical joker. Sweet sixteen! If ever there is villainy in a girl it is at sixteen.



ALICE.

Cashier

Wm. E. Durgin of Boston Loan Co., 275 Washington street, says: I recommend Sulphur Bitters as the very best medicine I have ever used. There is nothing like them to give [illegible]

I went up on to the piazza and stood looking at the noble trees about me; the little lake, covering a dozen acres, a short distance from the house; the broad stretch of ground about the beautiful place where dwelt the family whose guest I was. They were all rich as Crœsus, and they all seemed as naturally reckless as rich; all save one—Alice. Alice was gentle and lovely, and guileless. She loved pictures and books and music and verse—and I loved her especially because she loved verse. I loved verse; and when we were together there was a sweet interchange of poetic thought. "Dear Alice," I thought as I looked at the beautiful landscape, bathed in the light of the morning sun, "how different from your brothers and sisters!"

Just then the door opened with a great deal of unnecessary clatter and out rushed a young wild Indian, with no hat, and a kilt buttoned on to his waist.

"Good morning, Mr. Bliss. Hurrah for the Fourth of July! Isn't it jolly? Get out of the way and I'll turn you a summerset." And before I could stop him he rushed to the rail of the piazza, put both hands on it, turned a handspring and lit six feet below on the sward. I was standing where I couldn't see him when he struck the ground, and hastened to pick up his corpse. Wicked, reckless people never get hurt. He had lit right on his feet, and was rushing around in a circle dragging a string of crackers after him. As he ran he lit the end.

Then I went into the house.

At breakfast while old Mr. Flint was saying grace I was stealing glances at Fan, who sat opposite. Innocent, devout creature! It seemed that she couldn't bow her head low enough. The tip of her nose almost touched her plate. She was not only wicked, she was deceitful.

THAT BOY.

Then when the grace was finished, she looked up at me and had the unblushing assurance to ask me:

"Did you sleep well, Mr. Bliss?"

I gave her a look; a look that, if she had any feeling, would have annihilated her.

"I was kept awake this morning, Miss Flint, by explosive spiders."

She never winced.

"Got 'em again!" cried Tom from the other end of the table.

Fan had begun to open an egg for Dick, and it would have taken the magnifying power of the Lick telescope for any one except me to see the deviltry in her eye.

What a sister-in-law! I had almost a mind to give it up.

I have no time or patience to dwell on the events of the early part of that eventful day. There were a great many noisy children about; and there was a young lieutenant just out of West Point. He had not smelled enough powder at playing soldier or heard enough about forts and guns and things, so he must needs insist on the inane amusement of firing a pistol at intervals of one minute all day. If the shots had come all at once, or even irregular, I could have stood it, but they came at such expected intervals, and I dreaded them so many seconds before the explosion, that they wore me out. I wished the fiercest of wars would break out and that the lieutenant would be put right up in the front.

I thought what a beautiful corpse he'd make on a gun carriage.

This lieutenant, by the by, was an admirer of Alice's. He was nearer Alice's age than I, and used to [illegible] were each arguing for our favorite poet. Tennyson was mine—Longfellow was Alice's.

"Consider," I was saying, "the depth of delicate sentiment in

"Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean,
Tears from the depth of some divine despair,
Rise in the heart and gather in the eyes."

Bang!

My coat tail must certainly be entirely blown away. That child of Satan, Dick, had stolen up behind me and slipped a lighted bomb in my pocket.

Dear Alice! She looked up at me with such sympathy. The poet's words were practically illustrated. There was real despair with me and tears in her eyes.

Dick ran away with a whoop and we resumed our conversation.

"I can't see, Mr. Bliss, how you can prefer Tennyson to Longfellow, who has so much more depth and who teaches us so much. Take, for instance, the 'Psalm of Life:'

"Tell me not in mournful numbers
Life is but an empty dream"—

Whiz-z-z-z-z-z-z-z-z bang!

Some idiot who couldn't wait for it to get dark to set off fireworks had tried to send up a rocket. It had slipped from its support, and passed directly in front of us.

"This is positively dangerous!" I said.

My companion was too frightened to say anything.

We walked, trembling, down to the lake and joined a party on a platform to which the boats were tied. Two of that party were my enemies—the lieutenant and Fan. They were sitting on the rude chairs chatting. We had not been with them five minutes when the lieutenant pulled out his pistol and drove us away with his confounded firing.

I had made up my mind to know my fate from Alice before I slept that night. I was soon to go on a journey and would have no other opportunity. We strolled about the grounds for half an hour. Occasionally we would look down on the party by the lake. Something was going on. I seemed to have a presentiment of evil. I saw Fan wrap something in a small piece of paper and hand it to the lieutenant. What he did with it I knew not. I was becoming deeply interested in what I was saying to Alice, watching her cheeks that reflected the soft blushes of the evening sky. Presently we heard Fan calling:

FIRE!

"Alice! Al—ice! Oh! Alice!"

"Don't let us go," I said.

And we didn't. We continued our work.

"Alice! O, Alice! Al—ice."

We gave it up. We knew she would screech till we came; so we went.

"Come and sit here with us and stop prowling around," said Fan.

"Yes, do," echoed the others.

There was nothing else to do; so we sat down. There was but one seat for me. It was a chair on a low flat sled used to push the girls on the ice in winter. It was placed with its back to the water and on the edge of the platform.

Notwithstanding the desire of the party to have us join them, no sooner were we seated than two of them went off to sit elsewhere; then, two others followed and others, till all were gone. What struck me as very singular was that they took their chairs with them. There was no place for me to sit except where I was sitting—on the sled chair.

My opportunity had come. I deftly led the conversation on to that subject which most interested me. I began by telling Alice how when I first saw her I had——

"Don't you smell smoke?" she interrupted.

"No," I replied, somewhat impatiently.

"At the very moment of our meeting," I was saying, "I knew that in you I had found one whom"——

"There is certainly burning powder near," she interrupted again; "I smell it."

"You are mistaken. I could smell powder if any one could, for I hate it. Alice," I continued, after a brief pause—I took her hand. I knew lovers always take the lady's hand when they propose, so I took Alice's—"may I not hope that those esthetic tastes which we share, and which can alone form the basis of an ideal love, may I not count upon"——

I had been so rattled by the explosions all day that I couldn't find language to express what I wanted to say.

"Alice," I commenced again, feeling a sudden swelling of something in my bosom, "my whole heart—my—speak to me, Alice—tell me that"——

I felt the chair rise beneath me. I heard a deafening sound. I was tilted backward. I rose a few feet in the air. My head described a circle, and then was suddenly doused in cold water; and Alice, who had a moment before felt the warm pressure of my hand, saw the soles of my boots as I sank beneath the wave.

They say drowning people think of all the sins they have committed. I know not how this is, but I do know [illegible] called to treat Alice, whose nerves had received a terrible shock. The older people vowed that they must know who perpetrated the outrage.

Old Mr. Flint stormed, Mrs. Flint cried. Tom vowed that he'd thrash the perpetrator within an inch of his life if he caught him. A more uncomfortable Fourth of July party was never assembled under one roof.

The next morning Fan was packed off to a school where they took summer boarders, only to be expelled at the end of a month for general cussedness. The lieutenant joined his company in the western wilderness; was wounded in a skirmish with the Indians and was back in sixty days. Alice nursed him. It's absurd to suppose any woman can nurse a young man, especially one who wears buttons and who has been shot in battle, without being attracted to him, even if he is a fiend incarnate. Alice—the gentle, meek eyed Alice—fell in love with the scapegrace who had assisted Fan to blow me up. When I returned from a trip on which I went soon after the "Fourth" I found a letter from Alice. It announced her engagement with the lieutenant, who, "poor dear fellow," she said, "has suffered so much from his wound."

IN THE WATER.

I resolved to leave America and take up my residence in a land which had not achieved its independence; and I may say affirmatively that if the place of my residence ever does achieve its independence and celebrates its anniversary by the firing of guns, pistols, crackers, bombs and such like articles only fit to be fabricated in the abode of Mephistopheles, I shall take my departure to such a country as is still under the tyrant's yoke.

There was one result of the whole affair of that memorable "Fourth" in the country, which is a matter of daily astonishment to me. When I think of it as an actual fact it is impossible for me to realize it. I hardly dare state it, for no one will believe me.

I am married.

And who is my wife?

I spent another "Fourth" several years after with my friends at Wildwood. A girl 19 years old got after me and literally hunted me down.

She bothered me.

She flirted me.

She laughed at me.

She tortured me in a thousand different ways. At last I told her that if she didn't marry me and let me get a rest I'd end in a lunatic asylum.

The fiend that caused me all this vexation was none other than that barbarian—Fan Flint.

F. A. MITCHEL.

A Firecracker.

Inside my paper sides I keep a demon who does nought but sleep; but touch me off, and lo! he wakes, and every tympanum he shakes. I love to be touched off, and then alight beside some wise old hen, and watch her scratch her keen left eye, and then (bang!) see her try to fly. I love to light beside some miss and watch her while I gently hiss and then go bang! and hear her screams (ah! this is one of my pet dreams). I love to lie beneath a horse, and watch him run away of course. I think it is the greatest fun if I can only scare some one. You say I'm cruel? Of course I am. But then you know I am no clam. What if I scare you through and through? Remember that I'm to run up, too!

New York's First Fourth.

Knowledge of the act and a copy of the Declaration of Independence reached New York on the 9th of July. Orders were given to have the brigades formed on the parade grounds at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Within a hollow square, which occupied what is now the city hall park, between the city hall and the postoffice building, Washington sat on horseback, while one of his aids read the document that declared the colonies free and independent states. The soldiers welcomed the announcement with cheers, there was general rejoicing throughout the city, and the poor debtors were released from prison to join in the festivities.

The Marvelous Success.

The constitution of the United States now virtually rules almost the entire western continent, and the peoples of Europe, as they attain greater freedom, now look to us for precedents and model and adapt their institutions, so far as they are able under existing conditions, after ours. The true glory of America is becoming manifest to all the world; and the Declaration, whose 113th anniversary we will soon celebrate, is the universal charter of freedom.

He Was Competent.

"Gentlemen," he said to the town committee on fireworks, "if you want any one to take charge of the village display this eve, I'm your mutton."

"I don't know," muttered the chairman. "It's a dangerous undertaking for one man. What are your qualifications? Ain't you afraid of getting hurt?"

"Not much. For three years I was a baseball umpire"——

"You're engaged."

There was a fresh youngster from Skye,
Who tried on the Fourth of July
To jam in his pocket
An undersized rocket.
He has gone to the sweet by and by.

THE FLAG AND ITS MAKER.

CAPT. SAMUEL CHESTER REID, OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

He Was the Man Who Gave the Stars and Stripes the Character They Finally Assumed, and Here You May Read of Him and His Work.

Capt. Samuel Chester Reid, of New York city, was the man who gave the United States flag its final character, and his wife and her lady assistants made the first one. As is well known, the original flag adopted at the formation of the government differed somewhat in the arrangement of colors from the one now in use, and congress, having no adequate idea of the rapid increase of states, provided for a new stripe in the flag for each new state. The admission of Indiana, in 1816, brought the number up to nineteen, and the display of so many stripes evidently marred the symmetry of the flag; so, on the 4th of April, 1818, President Monroe approved the act of congress fixing the number of stripes at thirteen, for the original states, and a star for each of all the states, the whole forming a large star in a blue field. At 2 p. m. of April 13, 1818, this flag, made by Mrs. Reid, was first displayed over the hall of the house of representatives.

Congressman Peter H. Wendover, of New York, was chairman of the house committee charged with the duty of designing the new flag, and as such consulted Capt. Reid, then at the height of his fame as a naval officer; the captain naturally thought of a flag most suitable for naval display, and all who see the Stars and Stripes streaming from the mast of an American ship must admit that his conception was perfect. He drew the plan of the flag exactly as it is, and Mr. Wendover was so pleased with it that he commissioned Capt. Reid to have one made in New York. Mrs. Reid (daughter of Capt. Nathan Jennings, of Connecticut, who served through the entire revolution) at once called in her most deft fingered lady friends and in a few days the lovely silk banner was on its way to Washington.

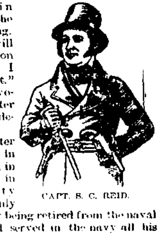
It reached there April 13, and was, as aforesaid, immediately unfurled over the representatives' end of the Capitol. In his letter of that date acknowledging the receipt of the flag Congressman Wendover said: "Mr. Clay, the speaker, says it is wrong that there should be no charge in your bill for the making of the flag. If pay for that will be acceptable, on being informed I will procure it." Of course the revolutionary daughter and her helpers declined all pay.



CAPT. S. C. REID.

Samuel Chester Reid was born in Norwich, Conn., in 1783, and died in New York city Jan. 28, 1861, only three years after being retired from the naval service. He had served in the navy all his active life, had borne an honorable part in many battles, and had won what was perhaps the most extraordinary naval victory of the war, all things considered.

On the 26th of September, 1814, the American brig Gen. Armstrong, of 246 tons, entered the harbor of Fayal, in the Azores, and was caught there by the British Plantagenet, of 74 guns, the Rota, of 38 guns, and the brig Carnation, of 18 guns. As the commodore, in command of the first, and the fleet, desired to take the American vessel without injury and use it for a transport, he sent four armed boats for the purpose, not expecting that the Yankee would be rash enough to resist. He did, however, and repulsed the boats with considerable loss.

That night, the sky being clear and the moon at full, the British commodore sent fourteen barges and launches, containing 400 picked officers and men, with full supply of swivels, carronades, blunderbusses and side arms. Capt. Reid had but ninety officers and men, but he had the advantage of the brig's deck and concentration of force when the British tried to board. The result was a battle of extraordinary severity and desperation. Again and again boarding parties of British reached the deck of the brig and were beaten off. The losses on both sides were terrible. Knowing that his vessel must be captured at last, Capt. Reid exchanged a few shots with the British next day, then fired his guns through the bottom of his own vessel, and as it began to sink he and his men jumped over and swam ashore. The governor of Fayal had the figurehead of the "Gen. Armstrong" (a big image of the general himself) placed over the north gate of the town, and the people, supposing it to be the image of a new American saint, called it "El Santo Americano," and crossed themselves devoutly as they passed under it.

[illegible] should be taken from the [illegible] of the brood, and be carefully cared [illegible] separately.

A Maryland farmer tells that low wagons with wide tires make easier work in hauling out manure.

A Vermont maple sugar maker says that the great point is to keep the sap pure and clean so as to retain its original color; this once lost or lessened cannot be regained.

Fresh-ground bones should be occasionally mixed in with the soft food for chickens. It aids growth, and helps to prevent weakness of the legs.

If the floor of the hennery is the ground, and inclined to be damp, a board floor should be substituted. Roup, the terror of the poultrymen, can be directly traced in many cases, to a wet, sloppy floor in the hen-house.

The Value of Underdraining.

Ever since underdraining was first introduced, farmers who had not witnessed its effect were accustomed to say: "Oh, yes, we presume draining will make the land drier in the spring, and will enable us to plow the ground and get in the crops earlier and with less work, but in the summer the land is so dry that it bakes into bricks. We don't want to drain it and make it drier. It is to dry now." Thousands of farmers in old times made such remarks. But, thanks to the agricultural press, thanks to farmers' clubs, thanks to fairs and farmers' institutes, and grange meetings, and to railroads, that make it easy for farmers to travel to and fro, whereby knowledge is increased—thanks, in short, to the wonderful age in which we live, we have not for several years heard this objection made to underdraining. It is true our old friend the Deacon still says, "Give me a good open ditch so that I can see the water run." But all farmers now admit that draining is a good thing, and would be glad, as our old friend Timothy Bunker, Esq., said, to have the "bottom knocked out" of every wet spot on the farm.

It is strange, however, now that farmers are thoroughly convinced of the value of underdraining, that some of our agricultural writers, wanting, we may suppose, something to talk about, have started the notion that draining intensifies the bad effects of drouth! Of course there is no truth in it. Land that needs draining was never injured by draining—either in spring, summer, autumn, or winter, in seasons cold, hot, wet, or dry.—American Agriculturist for June.

Feeding Cows.

A hearty cow, fresh in milk, observes the New England Farmer, and eating dry food, will frequently drink five or more ordinary pailfuls of water in a day. If this be taken into the system near the freezing point it must be warmed by the heat of the body, which heat costs the farmer money, just as the heat from the wood or coal we burn in our stoves costs money. It was long ago discovered that heat saved by tight walls and roofs is cheaper than the heat produced from hay and grain. It is now being learned that wood, coal and kerosene oil is a cheaper fuel for warming water for animals than hay and grain. One feeder estimates that during the present winter five cents' worth of fuel used for warming the drinking water for his cows has returned him $1.50 worth of butter. Is it best to feed cows all the corn meal and wheat brand they will bear? was one of the many questions found in the question box at the Connecticut State board meeting. Mr. Secretary Gold replied, yes, up to the point where the cow might be injured or the food wasted. He once tried to dry off a cow by increasing her allowance of corn meal, but found that particular cow was a milk machine, rather than a beef producer, and the more meal she ate the more milk she gave. Animals can never be fed by set rules, except such rules as the intelligent watchful attendant makes for each animal from day to day.

For Young Farmers.

Rarely, indeed, do we find in print advice more worthy of being heeded by those for whose benefit it is intended than this: "Mr. G. Lougee, of East Parsonsfield, Me., writes to the Mirror advising young farmers never to mortgage their farms; that if they owe money, to be sure and pay the interest annually; never to play cards or read novels as long as they can get a good agricultural paper for a dollar a year; to abstain from the use of tobacco, except upon calves, to kill lice with [or upon lambs, to destroy ticks]; to keep good fences, and to have an orchard." Good advice, that, for many young farmers a good deal further from sunrise than the Pine Tree State.

Hop Plasters applied to the chest cure coughs and colds quicker than any cough syrup.

[illegible] said an experienced farmer: "I believe I could raise a good crop of corn if not a drop of rain fell from the day it was planted until the day it was cut." He looked to the stores of water in the soil, and was careful that no weeds sucked up this moisture and robbed the corn plants. Clover and other deep-rooted plants bring up nitrogen, phosphates, potash, and other corn food from the sub-soil, and leave them near the surface in the form of vegetable matter; a severe drouth does the same thing. Capillary attraction raises the water charged with plant-food, and as it evaporates, leaves it on the surface. The great drouth of last year has left our land in good condition. Now for a big corn crop!—American Agriculturist.

AN INDEPENDENT CAREER.

One Secret of Power—Webster on "Inspiration"—Law of Success.

Every one, in beginning his independent career, has to consult two things: (1) his natural ambition; (2) his ability. Now, he may have considerable taste in some direction, but be unable to get the drill and practice necessary to eminence in that line. "I should like myself to write for the press," wrote a gentleman to me. "I inclose a sample." I said to him to succeed in becoming a versatile writer, able to tell tersely what you have to say, and then to have enough to say that people care to read, requires daily practice in composition from the time one is 12 years old, and it needs at least twenty years of keen, careful study in the way of mind furnishing.

It is often said that Roscoe Conkling's power over a crowd of listeners is incomprehensible. I know that he was incomprehensible to me until I watched and found the secret of his power. He is naturally gifted to sway the multitude; but this is not all. He has, through all his career, sedulously practiced self restraint. Nothing will induce him to waste his power on the scuffle of debate. He never speaks until he is prepared, and then he swings the hammer of Thor.

Webster followed the same course, and was never a debater unprepared. Some one said that his great speech against Hayne was an instance of unstudied power. "It is not so," said Webster. "I prepared that speech in the main years before for another occasion. It so happened that debate never took place. I had my notes in a pigeon hole, and when Hayne made his attack upon me and upon New England I was already posted, and only had to take down my notes and refresh my memory. If he had tried to make a speech to fit my notes he could not have hit it better. No man is inspired—I never was."

Probably men of the Webster type never are inspired in a better way than to make good preparation. To make a good editor one must begin at the bottom and climb. Dickens said of novel writing: "I do not believe it possible that any natural or improved ability can claim immunity from the companionship of the steady, plain, hard working qualities. I never put one hand only to my work, but my whole self, and I never depreciate the work." I have an acquaintance of some genius who considers it essential to assert that he throws off his work spontaneously, without severe labor. His boasting is silly; but, fortunately for him, he does work assiduously, and his work is to the point.—M. Maurice, M. D., in Globe-Democrat.

Old Persian Wine Jars.

I arrived in Persia in the middle of the grape season, and shortly after reaching Teheran became an interested spectator of the process of making wine there. The house in which I spent the winter belonged to Mr. N——, a member of the Persian telegraph department. It was a native built house, with a square court yard in the center. One of the first things that awakened my curiosity was three huge earthenware jars standing in a row on one side of the compound. They were jars that stood as high as a man's shoulder, and bellied out much in the shape of slender barrels. Each vessel held about thirty-five gallons.

"What are they for—to hold rain water?" was the natural query that suggested itself to me.

"No," said N——, "they are wine jars, regular old Persian wine jars, that were in use 2,000 years ago."

"But not these same jars—2,000 years!"

"No, not exactly; but those three jars have probably had wine fermented in them every season for the last 100 years." He then went on to explain further about the jars.

The Persians believe that these wine jars improve with age, just as the wine itself does, and that better wine can be made in old jars than in new ones. A wine jar 100 years old is worth several times more than a new one, not because of any value attached to its antiquity in the abstract, but because it is a thoroughly seasoned vessel. Good wine, they say, cannot be made in new jars; the older the jars the better the wine.

The Mohammedan injunction against the making and drinking of intoxicants has had the effect of making sad hypocrites of three-fourths of the upper class of Persians. Even the mullahs and seyeds get drunk in [illegible], but openly they not only shun [illegible], but they profess to regard those who do so with abhorrence. When the wine making season arrives there is so much wire pulling and diplomacy employed among the Persians to make wine on the quiet, without incurring a scandal, as there is here in a political campaign.—Thomas Stevens in New York Sun.

The Persian on Horseback.

It is strange that, although the Persians are all horsemen, they do not know how to ride [illegible]

[illegible] fearful of the dangers around me that it was only for the sake of appearances that I have not run away. On the other hand whenever I have found myself plunged into sudden danger that I did not expect I have not felt the slightest fear. I have been in fights and gone all through them with consummate courage and wise behavior, as it seemed to others, without, in reality, knowing what I was doing. And after it was all over I have wilted like a wet rag."—N. Y. Sun.

Play With the Children.

Play with the children. Some one said a good thing the other day in the Northeastern Christian Advocate, under the head of "Fun at Home." I wished that I could pin it up before the eyes of every father and mother, but I can only use a few of the words here. It says, among other good things: "The time will come, before you think, when you would give the world to have your house tumbled by the dear hands of those very boys; when your hearts shall long for their noisy steps in the hall, and their ruddy cheeks laid up to yours; when you would rather hear their jolly whistle than the music of all the operas; when you would gladly see dirty carpets—ay, live without carpets at all, but to have their bright, strong forms beside you once more." Yes, it is all true, but we do not stop to think of it, do we, in our hurry for life? Do we save our best selves for our children? and do they appreciate us when we do? To the latter question I should answer "Yes" emphatically, too. It may not show itself at first, but depend upon it, neglected children will tell their own story, in few or no words. There is a difference between making a slave of one's self and giving our best selves to them. They will learn to serve as much better if we lavish our sweetness upon them.

ELIZABETH ZANE.

This dauntless pioneer maiden's name
Is inscribed in gold on the scroll of Fame:
She was the lassie who knew no fear
When the tomahawk gleamed on the far frontier
If deeds of daring should win renown,
Let us honor this damsel of Wheeling town,
Who braved the savage with deep disdain—
Bright eyed, buxom Elizabeth Zane

'Twas more than a hundred years ago,
They were close beset by the dusky foe;
They had spent of powder their scanty store,
And who the gauntlet should run for more?
She sprang to the portal and shouted, "I!
'Tis better a girl than a man should die!
My loss would be but the garrison's gain
Unbar the gate!" said Elizabeth Zane.

The powder was sixty yards away,
Around her the foemen in ambush lay;
As she darted from shelter they gazed with awe,
Then wildly shouted, "A squaw!" "A squaw!"
She neither swerved to the left or right,
Swift as an antelope's was her flight.
"Quick! Open the door!" she cried, amain,
"For a hope forlorn! 'Tis Elizabeth Zane!"

No time had she to waver or wait,
Back she must go ere it be too late;
She snatched from the table its cloth in haste
And knotted it deftly about her waist,
Then filled it with powder—never, I ween,
Had powder so lovely a magazine;
Then, scorning the bullets, a deadly rain,
Like a startled fawn fled Elizabeth Zane.

She gained the fort with her precious freight;
Strong hands fastened the oaken gate;
Brave men's eyes were suffused with tears
That had there been strangers for many years.
From flint lock rifles again there sped
'Gainst the skulking redskins a storm of lead,
And the war whoop sounded that day in vain,
Thanks to the deed of Elizabeth Zane.

Talk not to me of Paul Revere,
A man, on horseback, with naught to fear;
Nor of old John Burns, with his bell crowned hat—
He'd an army to back him, so what of that?
Here's to the heroine, plump and brown,
Who ran the gauntlet in Wheeling town!
Hers is a record without a stain—
Beautiful, buxom Elizabeth Zane.

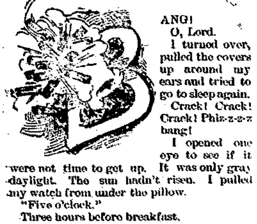
WICKED FAN FLINT.

A STORY OF A FOURTH OF JULY AND HOW ONE BACHELOR PASSED IT.

[Copyright, 1889, by American Press Association.]



ANG!

O, Lord.

I turned over, pulled the covers up around my ears and tried to go to sleep again.

Crack! Crack! Crack! Phiz-z-z-z bang!

I opened one eye to see if it were not time to get up. It was only gray daylight. The sun hadn't risen. I pulled my watch from under the pillow.

"Five o'clock."

Three hours before breakfast.

There is no use thinking of getting up, or lying here awake. I must go to sleep again; and I turned back on the other side, drew up the covers once more, and in five minutes was dropping off into a slumber, when Bang!

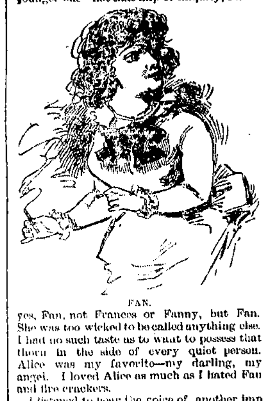
Who was it that suggested the celebration of this fourth day of July with crackers and bombs? I wished that I could bore a hole in his head and introduce a dozen of each. Between the explosions I slept for five or ten minutes at a time and had fitful dreams. I dreamed that I was working an immense nut cracker, with handles six feet long, and that I had the head of Thomas Jefferson in its jaws and was cracking his skull. It was fractured with a loud

Crack!

I awoke with a start. It was another of those infernal bombs.

I had come up to the country to visit my friend Tom Flint at his father's place, "Wildwood," to get rid of the firing in the city. My nervous system was always delicate and I never could stand sudden noises. Consequently it always seemed to me that every one took delight in banging doors, knocking over chairs and dropping heavy weights right by my ears. Independence day had been a terror to me as a child, and now I was a man grown—a man approaching middle age—I dreaded it more each year.



FAN.

I had come into the country with another purpose. I had long admired my host's daughter, my chum's oldest sister. Not the younger one—not that imp of iniquity, Fan—yes, Fan, not Frances or Fanny, but Fan. She was too wicked to be called anything else. I had no such taste as to want to possess that thorn in the side of every quiet person. Alice was my favorite—my darling, my angel. I loved Alice as much as I hated Fan and fire crackers.

I listened to hear the voice of another imp in the family—Dick. Dick was 5. I supposed he had gotten up early and was firing his explosives. Everything was quiet except an occasional crack or a bang near my window. Where can the cursed thing come from? There's no one on the lawn; at least I can't hear any voices

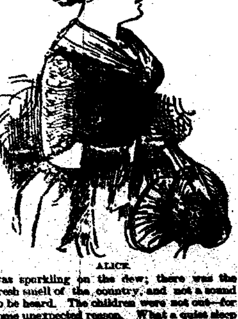
A couple of hours passed during which I alternately dozed, started, wondered. At last I looked at my watch again. It was 7 o'clock. My window was broad open. It had been too hot the night before to think of closing it. I lay on my back looking out. All at once I saw something which I, at first, thought was a big spider lowering himself on its web. When it was before the center of my window it exploded.

Something at the same moment exploded in my brain. It was the shell of a thought. And the thought was let out to float about free, like the smoke from a fire cracker.

"It's that confounded Fan lowering bombs from the window above."

I lay quiet for a few minutes watching. Pretty soon down came another one. It was plainly a bomb tied to a thread, and was smoking slightly. In a moment it began to sputter. Then it exploded. This time I thought I heard a girl's idiotic "te he."

No more sleep with that fiend over me. What luck!—that is, for the fiend—the guests' chamber right under her window. I got up and dressed and strolled out on the lawn. It was a beautiful morning. The sun was sparkling on the dew; there was the fresh smell of the country, and not a sound to be heard. The children were not out—for some unexpected reason. What a quiet sleep I might have enjoyed had it not been for that diabolical practical joker. Sweet sixteen! If ever there is villainy in a girl it is at sixteen.



ALICE.

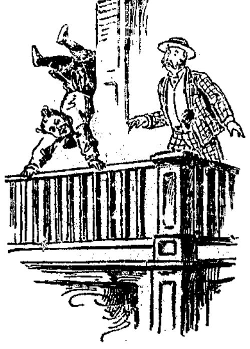
I went up on to the piazza and stood looking at the noble trees about me; the little lake, covering a dozen acres, a short distance from the house; the broad stretch of ground about the beautiful place where dwelt the family whose guest I was. They were all rich as Crœsus, and they all seemed as naturally reckless as rich; all save one—Alice. Alice was gentle and lovely, and guileless. She loved pictures and books and music and verse—and I loved her especially because she loved verse. I loved verse; and when we were together there was a sweet interchange of poetic thought. "Dear Alice," I thought as I looked at the beautiful landscape, bathed in the light of the morning sun, "how different from your brothers and sisters!"

Just then the door opened with a great deal of unnecessary clatter and out rushed a young wild Indian, with no hat, and a kilt buttoned on to his waist.

"Good morning, Mr. Bliss. Hurrah for the Fourth of July! Isn't it jolly? Get out of the way and I'll turn you a summerset." And before I could stop him he rushed to the rail of the piazza, put both hands on it, turned a handspring and lit six feet below on the sward. I was standing where I couldn't see him when he struck the ground, and hastened to pick up his corpse. Wicked, reckless people never get hurt. He had lit right on his feet, and was rushing around in a circle dragging a string of crackers after him. As he ran he lit the end.

Then I went into the house.

At breakfast while old Mr. Flint was saying grace I was stealing glances at Fan, who sat opposite. Innocent, devout creature! It seemed that she couldn't bow her head low enough. The tip of her nose almost touched her plate. She was not only wicked, she was deceitful.



THAT BOY.

Then when the grace was finished, she looked up at me and had the unblushing assurance to ask me:

"Did you sleep well, Mr. Bliss?"

I gave her a look; a look that, if she had any feeling, would have annihilated her.

"I was kept awake this morning, Miss Flint, by explosive spiders."

She never winced.

"Got 'em again?" cried Tom from the other end of the table.

Fan had begun to open an egg for Dick, and it would have taken the magnifying power of the Lick telescope for any one except me to see the deviltry in her eye.

What a sister-in-law! I had almost a mind to give it up.

I have no time or patience to dwell on the events of the early part of that eventful day. There were a great many noisy children about; and there was a young lieutenant just out of West Point. He had not smelled enough powder at playing soldier, or heard enough about forts and guns and things; so he must needs insist on the inane amusement of firing a pistol at intervals of one minute all day. If the shots had come all at once, or even irregular, I could have stood it, but they came at such expected intervals, and I dreaded them so many seconds before the explosion, that they wore me out. I wished the fiercest of wars would break out and that the lieutenant would be put right up in the front.

I thought what a beautiful corpse he'd make on a gun carriage.

This lieutenant, by the by, was an admirer of Alice's. He was nearer Alice's age than I, and used to call her Alice in the most disagreeable and familiar way. Fan and the lieutenant were very chummy. They were both [illegible] were each arguing for our favorite poet. Tennyson was mine—Longfellow was Alice's.

"Consider," I was saying, "the depth of delicate sentiment in

"Tears, idle tears, I know not what they mean,
Tears from the depth of some divine despair,
Rise in the heart and gather in the eyes."

Bang!

My coat tail must certainly be entirely blown away. That child of Satan, Dick, had stolen up behind me and slipped a lighted bomb in my pocket.

Dear Alice! She looked up at me with such sympathy. The poet's words were practically illustrated. There was real despair with me and tears in her eyes.

Dick ran away with a whoop and we resumed our conversation.

"I can't see, Mr. Bliss, how you can prefer Tennyson to Longfellow, who has so much more depth and who teaches us so much. Take, for instance, the 'Psalm of Life:'

"Tell me not in mournful numbers
Life is but an empty dream"—

Whiz-z-z-z-z-z-z-z-z-z bang!

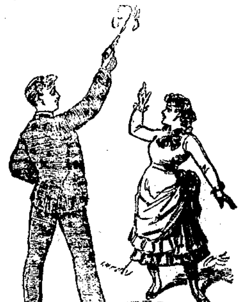
Some idiot who couldn't wait for it to get dark to set off fireworks had tried to send up a rocket. It had slipped from its support, and passed directly in front of us.

"This is positively dangerous!" I said.

My companion was too frightened to say anything.

We walked, trembling, down to the lake and joined a party on a platform to which the boats were tied. Two of that party were my enemies—the lieutenant and Fan. They were sitting on the rude chairs chatting. We had not been with them five minutes when the lieutenant pulled out his pistol and drove us away with his confounded firing.

I had made up my mind to know my fate from Alice before I slept that night. I was soon to go on a journey and would have no other opportunity. We strolled about the grounds for half an hour. Occasionally we would look down on the party by the lake. Something was going on. I seemed to have a presentiment of evil. I saw Fan wrap something in a small piece of paper and hand it to the lieutenant. What he did with it I know not. I was becoming deeply interested in what I was saying to Alice, watching her cheeks that reflected the soft blushes of the evening sky. Presently we heard Fan calling:



FIRE!

"Alice! Al—ice! Oh! Alice!"

"Don't let us go," I said.

And we didn't. We continued our work.

"Alice! O, Alice! Al—ice."

We gave it up. We knew she would screech till we came; so we went.

"Come and sit here with us and stop prowling around," said Fan.

"Yes, do," echoed the others.

There was nothing else to do; so we sat down. There was but one seat for me. It was a chair on a low flat sled used to push the girls on the ice in winter. It was placed with its back to the water and on the edge of the platform.

Notwithstanding the desire of the party to have us join them, no sooner were we seated than two of them went off to sit elsewhere; then, two others followed and others, till all were gone. What struck me as very singular was that they took their chairs with them. There was no place for me to sit except where I was sitting—on the sled chair.

My opportunity had come. I deftly led the conversation on to that subject which most interested me. I began by telling Alice how when I first saw her I had——

"Don't you smell smoke?" she interrupted.

"No," I replied, somewhat impatiently.

"At the very moment of our meeting," I was saying, "I knew that in you I had found one whom"——

"There is certainly burning powder near," she interrupted again; "I smell it."

"You are mistaken. I could smell powder if any one could, for I hate it. Alice," I continued, after a brief pause—I took her hand. I knew lovers always take the lady's hand when they propose, so I took Alice's—"may I not hope that those æsthetic tastes which we share, and which can alone form the basis of an ideal love, may I not count upon"——

I had been so rattled by the explosions all day that I couldn't find language to express what I wanted to say.

"Alice," I commenced again, feeling a sudden swelling of something in my bosom, "my whole heart—my—speak to me, Alice—tell me that"——

I felt the chair rise beneath me. I heard a deafening sound. I was tilted backward. I rose a few feet in the air. My head described a circle, and then was suddenly doused in cold water; and Alice, who had a moment before felt the warm pressure of my hand, saw the soles of my boots as I sank beneath the wave.

They say drowning people think of all the sins they have committed. I know not how this is, but I do know that, while under water during that uncomfortable ducking, I [illegible] called to treat Alice, whose nerves had received a terrible shock. The older people vowed that they must know who perpetrated the outrage.

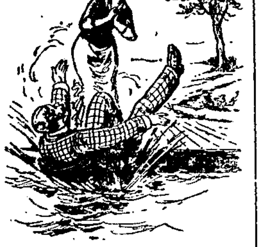
Old Mr. Flint stormed, Mrs. Flint cried. Tom vowed that he'd thrash the perpetrator within an inch of his life if he caught him. A more uncomfortable Fourth of July party was never assembled under one roof.

The next morning Fan was packed off to a school where they took summer boarders, only to be expelled at the end of a month for general cussedness. The lieutenant joined his company in the western wilderness; was wounded in a skirmish with the Indians and was back in sixty days. Alice nursed him. It's absurd to suppose any woman can nurse a young man, especially one who wears buttons and who has been shot in battle, without being attracted to him, even if he is a fiend incarnate. Alice—the gentle, meek eyed Alice—fell in love with the scapegrace who had assisted Fan to blow me up. When I returned from a trip on which I went soon after the "Fourth" I found a letter from Alice. It announced her engagement with the lieutenant, who, "poor dear fellow," she said, "has suffered so much from his wound."



IN THE WATER.

I resolved to leave America and take up my residence in a land which had not achieved its independence; and I may say affirmatively that if the place of my residence ever does achieve its independence and celebrates its anniversary by the firing of guns, pistols, crackers, bombs and such like articles only fit to be fabricated in the abode of Mephistopheles, I shall take my departure to such a country as is still under the tyrant's yoke.

There was one result of the whole affair of that memorable "Fourth" in the country, which is a matter of daily astonishment to me. When I think of it as an actual fact it is impossible for me to realize it. I hardly dare state it, for no one will believe me.

I am married.

And who is my wife?

I spent another "Fourth" several years after with my friends at Wildwood. A girl 19 years old got after me and literally hunted me down.

She bothered me.

She flirted me.

She laughed at me.

She tortured me in a thousand different ways. At last I told her that if she didn't marry me and let me get a rest I'd end in a lunatic asylum.

The fiend that caused me all this vexation was none other than that barbarian—Fan Flint.

Inside my paper sides I keep a demon who does nought but sleep; but touch me off, and lo! he wakes, and every tympanum he shakes. I love to be touched off, and then alight beside some wise old hen, and watch her scratch her keen left eye, and then (bang!) see her try to fly. I love to light beside some miss and watch her while I gently hiss and then go bang! and hear her screams (ah! this is one of my pet dreams). I love to lie beneath a horse, and watch him run away of course. I think it is the greatest fun if I can only scare some one. You say I'm cruel? Of course I am. But then you know I am no clam. What if I scare you through and through? Remember that

New York's First Fourth.

Knowledge of the act and a copy of the Declaration of Independence reached New York on the 9th of July. Orders were given to have the brigades formed on the parade grounds at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. Within a hollow square, which occupied what is now the city hall park, between the city hall and the postoffice building, Washington sat on horseback, while one of his aids read the document that declared the colonies free and independent states. The soldiers welcomed the announcement with cheers, there was general rejoicing throughout the city, and the poor debtors were released from prison to join in the festivities.

The Marvelous Success.

The constitution of the United States now virtually rules almost the entire western continent, and the peoples of Europe, as they attain greater freedom, now look to us for precedents and model and adapt their institutions, so far as they are able under existing conditions, after ours. The true glory of America is becoming manifest to all the world; and the Declaration, whose 113th anniversary we will soon celebrate, is the universal charter of freedom.

He Was Competent.

"Gentlemen," he said to the town committee on fireworks, "if you want any one to take charge of the village display this eve, I'm your mutton."

"I don't know," muttered the chairman. "It's a dangerous undertaking for one man. What are your qualifications? Ain't you afraid of getting hurt?"

"Not much. For three years I was a base-ball umpire"——

"You're engaged."

There was a fresh youngster from Skye,
Who tried on the Fourth of July
To jam in his pocket
An undersized rocket.
He has gone to the sweet by and by.

THE FLAG AND ITS MAKER.

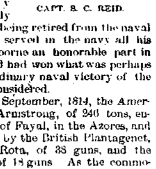
CAPT. SAMUEL CHESTER REID, OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

He Was the Man Who Gave the Stars and Stripes the Character They Finally Assumed, and Here You May Read of Him and His Work.

Capt. Samuel Chester Reid, of New York city, was the man who gave the United States flag its final character, and his wife and her lady assistants made the first one. As is well known, the original flag adopted at the formation of the government differed somewhat in the arrangement of colors from the one now in use, and congress, having no adequate idea of the rapid increase of states, provided for a new stripe in the flag for each new state. The admission of Indiana, in 1816, brought the number up to nineteen, and the display of so many stripes evidently marred the symmetry of the flag; so, on the 4th of April, 1818, President Monroe approved the act of congress fixing the number of stripes at thirteen, for the original states, and a star for each of all the states, the whole forming a large star in a blue field. At 2 p. m. of April 13, 1818, this flag, made by Mrs. Reid, was first displayed over the hall of the house of representatives.

Congressman Peter H. Wendover, of New York, was chairman of the house committee charged with the duty of designing the new flag, and as such consulted Capt. Reid, then at the height of his fame as a naval officer; the captain naturally thought of a flag most suitable for naval display, and all who see the Stars and Stripes streaming from the mast of an American ship must admit that his conception was perfect. He drew the plan of the flag exactly as it is, and Mr. Wendover was so pleased with it that he commissioned Capt. Reid to have one made in New York. Mrs. Reid (daughter of Capt. Nathan Jennings, of Connecticut, who served through the entire revolution) at once called in her most deft fingered lady friends and in a few days the lovely silk banner was on its way to Washington.

It reached there April 13, and was, as aforesaid, immediately unfurled over the representatives' end of the Capitol. In his letter of that date acknowledging the receipt of the flag Congressman Wendover said: "Mr. Clay, the speaker, says it is wrong that there should be no charge in your bill for the making of the flag. If pay for that will be acceptable, on being informed I will procure it." Of course the revolutionary daughter and her helpers declined all pay.



CAPT. S. C. REID.

Samuel Chester Reid was born in Norwich, Conn., in 1783, and died in New York city Jan. 28, 1861, only three years after being retired from the naval service. He had served in the navy all his active life, had borne an honorable part in many battles, and had won what was perhaps the most extraordinary naval victory of the war, all things considered.

On the 26th of September, 1814, the American brig Gen. Armstrong, of 246 tons, entered the harbor of Fayal, in the Azores, and was caught there by the British Plantagenet, of 74 guns, the Rota, of 38 guns, and the brig Carnation, of 18 guns. As the commodore, in command of the first, and the fleet, desired to take the American vessel without injury and use it for a transport, he sent four armed boats for the purpose, not expecting that the Yankee would be rash enough to resist. He did, however, and repulsed the boats with considerable loss.

That night, the sky being clear and the moon at full, the British commodore sent fourteen barges and launches, containing 400 picked officers and men, with full supply of swivels, carronades, blunderbusses and side arms. Capt. Reid had but ninety officers and men, but he had the advantage of the brig's deck and concentration of force when the British tried to board. The result was a battle of extraordinary severity and desperation. Again and again boarding parties of British reached the deck of the brig and were beaten off. The losses on both sides were terrible. Knowing that his vessel must be captured at last, Capt. Reid exchanged a few shots with the British next day, then fired his guns through the bottom of his own vessel, and as it began to sink he and his men jumped over and swam ashore. The governor of Fayal had the figurehead of the "Gen. Armstrong" (a big image of the general himself) placed over the north gate of the town, and the people, supposing it to be the image of a new American saint, called it "El Santo Americano," and crossed themselves devoutly as they passed under it.

(Written for The Times.)

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, June 28th, '89.

It fell to my lot the past week to witness a "Buffalo dance" of the Winnebago Indians on their reservation in Nebraska. The reservation is about thirty miles from Sioux City, and with two others of our Bicycle Club I wheeled over to the indian camp. Started at 7:30 a. m. and crossed the Missouri river on the new pontoon bridge to South Sioux City, Neb. As this bridge and the last mentioned town with its twin village, (Covington) are worthy of a separate letter. I wont enlarge in this except to say that Covington and South Sioux City is peopled by saloon keepers, sports, and fast women entirely, and that to the exclusion of all honest or honorable line of trade. They have taken the scum and filth of Sioux City, and made a pest spot of one fair portion of Nebraska.

The first stop was made at Dakota City, eight miles from the start over fair roads. South from Dakota City we ran onto the open prairie, and such a scamper for a few miles. Road as level and smooth as a floor, with no dust. The brisk air was laden with exquisite perfume from the locust trees, and seemed to instil into our legs, life and vigor, and renewed strength for the rough roads over which we would have to travel for a time. Three miles of rocky woodland roads brought us again on the bottom and to level roads leading into Homer twenty miles from home. Time two and one half hours. Here we were reinforced by some Sioux City parties in a carriage, and together we started for the agency. Never have I so much enjoyed a ride in, or any conveyance as I did this run from Homer among the hills, and vales of northern Nebraska.

After running along a level road we would pump laboriously up a sharp hill, on the other side of which would be a coast for sometimes two miles. How our wheels did fly down those grades! without a jar or break, and all we had to do was to "let her go." The scented air rushed past giving vigor to the body, and forgetfullness to the mind. What cared we for the past, or the worry of the left at home troubles. Business, friends, other pleasures and thoughts were crowded out, and we lived in the rushing present, filling our beings with all the best gifts of a lavish natures command. I have seen many beautiful farms, east and south, but it seems as though, those among the hills just passed were the finest in the land. Rolling hills, gentle slopes, and quiet valleys, made up of rich, black soil, with plenty of water at hand. The indians are judges of farm lands no doubt, and some of them are good farmers. Comfortable houses and barns are numerous along the way.

The bicycles reached the dancing ground far in advance of the horse, so we waited, (to chat with a talkable indian) and all went to the tent together. It was placed on a side hill just above a spring, and was built of poles, and platted reeds, about fifty feet long by eight in height, and fifteen in width. Before the dancing began we watched the indians assemble. Over the hills from all directions they came. First a dark spot would appear at the horizon, and soon outline itself. Rider and horse clear cut against the sky, then to disappear, and soon develop, grow bright red, as to man, and jet black as to horse, and in a few moments join their fellows in the camp resplendant in all the bright colors and trappings so much affected by the American. About one hundred arrived before two o'clock, and the beating tom-tom announced that the dance was about to begin. The squaws were seated around a fire above which were kettles suspended from a rack. The contents of the kettles suggested to me, dog stew, entrail soup and dried pumpkin mush, not at all inviting to a white man. The tom-tom (made of a nail keg with a pig skin stretched across the top) began to give out slow beats and the braves in the tent began a dreary chant. A chief with a Buffalo head gear took his place in the dancing path, gave a few whoops, and ten or twelve bucks and squaws of all ages lined up behind him. They all set their limbs and arms rigid, and the so called dance began. It was simply a shuffling drag of the feet made by moving the straightened body without lifting the feet from the ground. Half way around the circle the dancers were met by a brave with a large wooden bowl filled with a clear heavy concoction that looked like melted lard, and each took a sup. The dance went on in this manner for nearly an hour. None of the men were good looking indians and only one squaw could claim any beauty. She was the best looking squaw I have chanced to see, and was dressed as befitted her rank. Loose fitting jacket, and plain skirt cut short, and made of fine black cloth, edged and slashed with bright ribbons, beads and wampums. Her hair was combed straight back, and confined at the neck in a bark ring about four inches long, brightly colored, and covered with beads, leaving the rest of her hair to hang loosely below the waist. Her ears were pierced in four places and strung with fine silver chains from which hung a number of silver coins. Her features were regular, and teeth white, but her cheeks were so red that they suggested the paint pot. At the wrists, elbows and ankles were broad bands of silver, and her little feet were covered with buckskin shoes, beaded and laced with ribbon. All the rest of the women would stop a tower clock at the first look. One of the boys helped an old squaw at the spring to fill a water bucket, and carried it up the hill for her. She nearly fainted from surprise at the attention. While in the camp the indians paid no attention to us or the machines although they were perhaps the first bicycles that had been ridden into their reservation. An indian has as much curiosity as any one, but they wont admit their ignorance on any subject. Rather than do this they will preserve a stoic silence and keep their eyes open. But [illegible] got to the top of the hill fast enough in order to see how we rode the machine. The origin, and purpose of the Buffalo dance is unknown to me, but I could plainly see that it is a minor dance; and hardly worth the trip. On July 5th they celebrate the Sun dance at the agency building, and about fifteen hundred indians take part. This they say is of interest.

Our ride home was a repetition of the outward trip except that we rode through a driving rain for about a half hour, between Homer and Dakota City. Reached home at 6:30 p. m., having made the sixty miles in less than twelve hours, and this included stops for dinner at the agency, and for rest. That night in my sleep I had an unbroken line of whooping indians wh[illegible] bicycles, pontoon bridges and [illegible] pie, marching rapidly over the counterpane much to the discom[illegible] of the tired out

VANDERING JEW.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, June, 28, 1889.

The morning visitors at the White House Wednesday were Secretary Blaine and William Walter Phelps of New Jersey. Mr. Blaine carried a large official envelope which he gravely handed to the President who opened it and look out a smaller envelope, which he handed to the Jerseyman with the bangs. The envelope contained Mr. Phelps' Commission as envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Germany. Mr. Phelps tried to look as though the eyes of two continents were on him and singularly failed, and he and Mr. Blaine retired in good order.

This long expected appointment closes the chapter of the Halstead matter, and recognizes Mr. Phelps' valuable services in the Somoan treaty arrangements. His association with that treaty conference will save him the trouble of making himself acquainted with the Germans.

Mr. Phelps is well qualified for a foreign minister by his wealth, the most necessary adjunct to such a position. His wealth was inheirited. He is 50 years old, and was a practicing attorney up to 1868. He was several times in the House, where he attained some prominence as the leading Republican member of the Foreign affairs committee. His personal appearance, dress and manner are very peculiar. He was once before in the diplomatic service in 1882 being sent to Austria, where he remained only a year. At the last Republican National convention he was a prominent candidate for the Vice-Presidential nomination, and later refused a renomination for the House to make the fight for senator. The Senate is his ultimate aim, and he looks forward exultingly to the next opportunity. His home at Teaneck was recently destroyed by fire and several valuable paintings and a large library burned, causing a loss of $150,000.

The men in Congress who are good story tellers are few. The representatives on the other hand, who make lame job of telling commonplace and worn out yarns are scores. When you hear some blundering heavy-moving statesman begin the "that reminds me of a man down my way," that is the time for disappearing. There is Congressman Cannon of Illinois, for instance, who has about as much humor in his composition as an owl. He went down the river to Marshall hall, opposite Mt. Vernon, last week, with the Six o'clock Club. The club's hobby is afternoon speeches, and after a while it was Cannon's turn. It was evidently no time to talk of the speakership contest or the tariff. So the unfortunate legislature struggled through a few allusions to the beautiful scenery, the mansion at Mt. Vernon lying in the dusk of evening farcross the placid river. Thus far he was all right, but when he struck the "far across the river," he was forever lost. With a fiendish delight, and perfectly unconscious of his fate, he began to tell that club of well informed gentlemen, the story of the dollar that Washington threw over the river and that a dollar went further then, etc., etc. The story that Senator Evarts told Lord Coleridge, the tale that has been told so often on the river that it is generally suicidal to attempt it, met a response of howls and cat-calls and Cannon sat down a ruined man.

It seems strange that men of average intelligence will go on telling aged and hoary chestnuts all their lives, without recognizing their triteness, without realizing that they bore people. "I wish," says Lord Greville in his delightful diary, "that Tom Moore had a better memory, for he often inflicts pain by telling the same story to the same people twice. But then this is made more bearable in that the stories are comparatively fresh and selected with care."

The number of delegates who come here to secure quarters and make other arrangements on the part of Knight Templar commanderies for next fall's conclave is interesting. The triennial committee requests that it be distinctly understood that the accommodations of the city are not nearly exhausted and that over 1,000,000 more people can be accommodated than have applied. It is expected, however, that the crowd will be far larger than during the inauguration.

The local press is exercised over the civil service law; in fact, the regular summer discussion of the question has been resumed. The editors attack the system and zealous correspondents, in more or less ambiguous English, much to its defense. Inasmuch as the discussion can effect nothing, as the Washington papers are without weight or influence, the correspondents are wasting their ink.

A WO[illegible] OTHER PATRIOTIC [illegible]

Our Correspondent, "Vindex," Speaks of a Good One on a Wealthy Buffalo Traveler—The Queen City Alive to Its Great Exposition.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, July 2.—Summer has come at last. We had almost given it up in this locality, but it is here. For the past few weeks those fortunate people [illegible] and lots of them in Buffalo, the length of whose purses permits them to ramble whither so ever they please over the face of the earth in search of pleasure, have been threatening to go to the mountains or the sea shore, to get cool; now they are going to get cool. In my opinion they couldn't do better than stay right here where they are, for taken all around, the summer climate of this city is unexcelled.

But it is fashionable to travel and Buffalonians are fashionable. There is at least one Buffalonian—a wealthy resident of the Tenth ward with political proclivities—who within the last week has learned a point or two on travel for which he wouldn't take $100. He was a passenger on the fast vestibuled train, which leaves New York daily at 6 p. m. Not being sleepy he sat in the comfortable smoking room of his palace car while wiser men went to their berths.

Midnight found the train at Schenectady. The wealthy Buffalonian desired a "nightcap." A bright light in a corner store one hundred feet away suggested the means of gratifying his desire. He sprang from the train, rushed across the street, secured the coveted refreshments and regained the steps leading to the car he had deserted just as the train resumed its journey. Imagine his confusion when he discovered that the vestibule doors were locked upon the inside, and that he was locked out. Every moment increased the speed of the train and the traveler's alarm. In vain he kicked upon the glass-paneled doors, afraid to release his hands from the iron guard rails to which he desperately clung. Nobody heard him; everybody had gone to bed. He was a locked out tramp with a $2 bed paid for inside. The train quickened its pace and the traveler on the door-step was growing dizzy, when one of the train porters fortunately happened to pass through the vestibule, and hearing the alarm admitted the scared passenger. It has cost this gentleman much more than the price of his railroad fare to keep the above story from general circulation.

I wonder if any of your readers have as yet seen the remarkable lithograph which has already gone up in a few localities in this city, and which is, I am told, to ornament appropriate sites in neighboring towns during the summer? It has made a genuine sensation here, being the most costly piece of "show paper" ever produced in America. It is an exact copy in size, colors, and every other detail of the famous painting by Rosa Bonheur which hangs in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, entitled "The Horse Show." The original painting cost $60,000 and is considered the finest "horse picture" in the world. The lithograph I refer to is, in the opinion of critics, "equal to the original," and the consequence is that wherever it is put up it is making a tremendous sensation. The Buffalo International Fair is responsible for this bit of extravagance. The picture is so enormous and valuable that they have been compelled to make folding canvas frames upon which to exhibit it. I presume the outlay is warranted by the fact that the Exposition people propose to make the Horse Show a very prominent feature of the Fair this year, and have added to already extensive buildings several acres of additional stable and horse show quarters.

I think the saying that "nothing succeeds like success" is most wonderfully exemplified in the case of this same Buffalo International Fair. Last summer at this time, when the enterprise was new and untried, there was a striking apathy on the part of the citizens at large. As a stranger in the city I could not fail to notice that, in spite of the fact that gigantic buildings were being erected for the holding of an Exposition the magnitude of which must inevitably eclipse all state fairs, the average citizen did not appear to realize what was going on. Now it is all different. Buffalo like Paris has got a taste of what it is to be an exposition centre, and you can't find a man, woman or child who isn't already talking about the great fair which opens Sept. 3. I only hope cupidity will not assert itself under this condition of affairs, and the multitude which is bound to come here in September be thus frightened away from further attendance. To guard against any overcharging, however, the management of the exposition have already, early as it is, established a Bureau of Information and Public Comfort, and the secretary assures me that nobody is going to be allowed to fleece visitors.

Speaking of fleecing it strikes me that the tax-payers of Buffalo are being treated to a little of that under the plausible name of patriotism. Through the fine coaching of the board of aldermen the American eagle has been made to spread its wings over a $3,000 appropriation for all sorts of queer doings the day after to-morrow.

Oh! yes, there will be lots to see here on "The Fourth" and plenty of money to pay for it, so if you are looking for a huge, noisy time you had better come on.

The $3,000 is divided up so as to please the constituents of nearly all the wards in the city except the aristocratic Tenth. The people of that brown stone section might, I think, have been given an appropriation for lawn tennis, but they are evidently not represented in the board by a hustler. One of the German wards gets $500 to pay for live pigeons and other accessories of a shooting match. "Little Germany" itself gets $500 for fire works at the Parade House, a similar amount being spent for fireworks at The Front.

But it is the First ward, that stronghold of the Democracy, which is to have the biggest time of all. It only gets $250 out of the public purse, but it has raised another lump for jollification out of its own pocket and there is going to be lots of fun. Of course "the First" will have a balloon ascension, greased pole climbing, and all that sort of thing. The acme of 4th of July festivities will, however, be reached in a great and glorious pie-eating match. For this contest ten youthful competitors are entered. The rules of the tourney are beautifully simple. Ten raspberries will be placed on a clean wooden bench and the ten juvenile champions will kneel before the bench with their hands securely bound behind them. At the word go they will "sail in." Just bear in mind the ingredients of the pies and then picture to yourself the appearance of the contestants as the end of the struggle. The boy who first disposes of his pie will win a new suit of clothes. He will probably need it.

Out of all the militia in the city but one organization, Company D of the Buffalo City Guard, has signified its intention of celebrating the Fourth of July according to the good old fashioned way of marching with arms. For this unusual burst of patriotism the Common Council has allowed this company $100 to be used in securing a brass band. The national game has not been overlooked in the assignments for the day, $650 being divided between the four principle amateur baseball leagues of Buffalo, to make them play any way which shall reflect credit upon George Washington and the Constitution of the United States.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, July 1.

Salesmen were in hopes of getting a little more for cheese, to-day, but the result of the trading shows the same price for ruling, with rather more sales at the highest prices. Still there was no holding back. Milk is beginning to shrink quite perceptibly, in spite of rain and a thick growth of grass. There was considerable difference of opinion among buyers, and this difference influenced hier purchases. Some of the heaviest buyers would not pay over 8½c. for anything, being supicious of a decline this week, while others are willing to pay extreme prices for their pick of the fancy lots. It is probable, therefore, that factories will show up quite a difference this week in their returns, but thro' no fault of their salesmen or their cheese. Quality is now acknowledged to be good, but hot weather is affecting the present make somewhat.

Total.	19,869

Ruling price 8½c. Transactions one year ago 20,833 boxes; ruling price 9¼c. Two years ago, 15,317 boxes, ruling 9¼c. There were sales of 62 packages creamery butter at 16½@20c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 1.

Cheese—Our market has again changed front and to-day shows an advance of one fourth cent over last week's prices. Most of the cheese quoted at 8¼c. last week, which was the bulk price, received 8½c. when time for final settlement came. And so to-day many factorymen who were promised 8½c. are in strong expectation of receiving 8¾c. at settlement; this will of course depend upon how cheese goes out in the New York market. So, taken altogether, the market is in very much the same condition as last week, although somewhat firmer. Buyers would not generally promise over 8½c., and we find no cheese reported at above this rate except from two buyers. Factorymen continue their former policy of shipping freely and stocks are unusually light in the factories.

The transactions are:

6	363	8c.
61	4,518	8¼
48	3,950	8½

8	515	Com.
146	11,305
Farm dairy	825
Total	12,190

Farm dairies—Sales upon the morning market amount to 825 boxes, and prices range at 8¼@8¾c., the bulk sold at 8½c.

Butter—There were about 35 packages creamery butter sold at 16c. and 32 packages farm dairy sold at 15@17c., most at 15c.

AT FULTON.

Eighteen factories were represented at this market Monday night with 2,400 boxes of cheese. Only about 800 boxes sold at the ruling price 8⅛c. The balance was held over or shipped. A couple of factories that make a different kind of cheese in which it takes one tenth more milk are reported to have received 8⅜cts.

Three years later she returned to London to study at the London School of Medicine for Women and at the Royal Free Hospital. In 1882 she took her degree at the London university. Charles Thompson of Oswego Falls has invented a rotary hydraulic motor, from which he expects to realize a fortune. It is designed to be used in running street cars, the inventor claiming that it possesses power equal to that obtained from five horses. Dr. J. H. Jay Harrington will soon have on the Oswego river a fine yacht which is being built at Bernherds Bay and is nearly completed. It will be twenty feet long by five wide. The propelling power is furnished by an engine, (if it can be so called) different from anything in this vicinity. It is manufactured at Binghamton. Crude petroleum is used and there is no smoke stack. The power is made by compressed air and steamed vapor.

It is very easy to ride in and is similar in its construction to one used by Mr. Comstock while in China.

Dr. Marsh took the ground that diphtheria is a constitutional disease with local manifestations.

By a unanimous vote, it was decided to request the publication of Dr. Marsh's paper in the Journal of the American Medical Association."

Father Earley Suggests a Few Ideas on the Occasion of the Sad Death of Charles Johnson.

A LIFE—A DEATH—A LESSON.

The saying ever old, ever new is always true: "As you live so shall you die."—When a man spends his precious hours of life in idleness and sin, he cannot expect to depart from this world with hands full of meritorious deeds worthy of a crown from Him who rewards every man according to his works. At the last hour the sinner may repent sincerely and obtain from his heavenly Master pardon for the past, peace for the present and serene hope for the future, but that is an extraordinary favor and if despair be forbidden, presumption of God's mercy is also a crime. A man passes a few years on earth, lives for himself, enslaved victim of his passions, preferring the company of vicious associates to that of virtuous men, winding his way through the miry, sinuous, thorny path of iniquity with total disregard of the wounded feelings of parents and relatives and friends—truly hard is the way of the transgressor—unhappy, without peace of conscience and rendering others unhappy by his evil conduct.

We have such men in our villages—some have gone to their eternal home—some, through their own fault, fell asleep by the wayside and awoke only to stand before the tribunal of a just God—some we blame, others we pity—all we must leave in their silent grave and in the hands of their creator. But those who still live should learn a lesson.

Charles Johnson was unfortunate and spent a useless life—his death was more unfortunate and leaves a dark cloud over the hearts of parents who are not responsible for the waywardness of their son, some of our best parents have the worst children and few are the flocks without a black sheep.

On the occasion of such a death there are a few truths which I deem worthy of attention:

1st. Charles Johnson, were he to return to our village, could count by dozens the men, young and old, who are following in his footsteps.

2d. Some are perhaps better than he was but the rest more sinful.

3d. Several of our well-dressed citizens bear on their strawberry faces the stamp of the inveterate toper—some are young and jolly, others with silvered hair and tottering steps drag themselves to the bar and then to the grave.

4th. Too many young men are allowed to frequent saloons and little by little become the victims of an appetite which is not easily mastered and parents do not protest.

5th. Let me ask a few questions:

(a) What services have the saloons rendered Johnson and his family?

(b) Did they not encourage him to drink, take his few pennies, and cast him out a total wreck?

(c) What sympathy did they express at his death—he was their victim and looking upon his dead body they could and should say "behold our work."

(d) Do saloons exist for any other purpose than to bring unfortunate men to destruction?

(e) What other object have they in view with their vile music, their dice and cards, their obscene songs and impious language than to give their victims a foretaste of hell.

(f) If saloon keepers were obliged to care for all the idiots, lunatics, wrecked bodies and murderers they make would they not all fail in one month?

(g) If our citizens wished could they not close ⅔ of these places with the hope of closing them all at a later day?

(h) If our police force were worthy of the name would all our saloons and underground dens be open on Sunday?

(i) If our people had a healthful public spirit would we have such an Excise Board inflicted upon us? Their consciences are as pure as the adulterated liquors they allow their friends to sell.

(j) If we had a flood to sweep away a dozen of our politicians who keep up our saloons and to whom we may give credit for a great number of our drunkards, we might return thanks to God!

(k) If our Prohibitionists were more practical—would they caress their pet theories and allow liquor organizations to become a vast and dangerous power which in a short time no one can overpower while they could check their onward course, stop this awful tide and teach these men to fear!

In fine—let drunkards wallow in the mire, let our boys wear out the benches of grog shops and scratch their backs on the street corners and stagger around on Sunday, our people have not christianity enough to care for them. These street loafers are a public nuisance, their breath is a pestilence, their language contagion, their conduct scandal but nobody notices, nobody cares.

Charles Johnson as bad as he was, was a better man then dozens who hold their heads high and guzzle beer with butter milk to their hearts' content.

He was better than the polished fellows who gave him liquor and I say may his blood be upon their heads and may the penalty paid by them and their children be in proportion to the crimes of which they are the cause, the source, the occasion.

Young men, have a little pride and consider all these saloons as disreputable and blush for shame ever to be seen there. Boycott such dens where man gains nothing but losses all, house, fortune, virtue and respect.

REV. W. J. EARLEY.

WORTH KNOWING.

Provide a shelter for fowls where they can be kept dry during hard rain storms.

The Wyandotte fowls are highly prized as winter layers.

The State of Kentucky is credited with raising half of the tobacco crop of the United States, or 300,000 pounds every year.

If you want the pedigree of the scrub animal, set it down as ignorance prejudice and parsimony inbred for generations.

Parsnips are very nutritious, and in the islands of Jersey and Guernsey are considered excellent roots for dairy cows and are extensively grown for that purpose.

The department of agriculture reports the average condition of horses throughout the country as 98 4, a very high average.

Red pepper may be fed to poultry in moderate quantities with good results, but do not make their food so strong with it that you could not swallow it yourself, advises Poultry Yard.

In the New Hampshire Experiment station's test ninety-five pounds of mixed milk run through the separator yielded cream that made just as much butter as 100 pounds set in hollow pans.

According to Prof. Henry, combinations of Indian corn and skim milk afford a most economical ration for young pigs, shoats and breeding stock where good bone and muscle are essential to the highest results.

Seed clover is, year after year, one of the most profitable crops of the farm farm, where the conditions are favorable to its growth. The crop of the country is never so large as to glut the market.

Successive plantings of garden vegetables should be made so as to have a lengthened supply throughout the season. With sweet corn and peas this is especially necessary.

According to Prof. E. W. Stewart raw potatoes are fed to horses as a laxative, if fed to any considerable extent the laxative effect will be too great, and cause the horses to grow poor instead of improving their condition. Cooked potatoes may be fed to horses and they have about the same effect as corn meal.

For Best Results in Butter Making.

It is generally conceded that for best results in butter making, where the milk is set in deep cans, the milk should be placed in the creamer as nearly as possible at the temperature at which it was drawn from the cow, there being a considerable loss of fat in skim milk if the milk is allowed to cool to any great extent before being set. Of late there has been considerable controversy as to whether it is advisable under any conditions to warm the milk before setting, and as to the limit of temperature beyond which it is not safe to go.

Mr. I. P. Roberts concludes, as the result of investigations at the College of Agriculture at Cornell University, that, first, there is a loss of butter when the milk is allowed to cool much below the normal heat of the cow before being put in the creamer; second, while there may not be any very great increase of butter when the milk is heated, there is no risk of injuring the quality of the butter by incorporating an excess of caseine, even when the milk is heated as high as 135 degrees.

Admirable Advice.

Never press a favor when it seems undesired.

Men who do not know how to handle a gun should never "go out hunting."

Keep closet skeletons within their closets; don't open the closet door to the world.

Talk hopefully to your children of life and its possibilities; you have no right to depress them because you have suffered.

Teach boys and girls the actual facts of life as soon as they are old enough to understand them, and give them the sense of responsibility without saddening them.

As your daughters grow up teach them at least the true merits of housekeeping and cookery; they will thank you for it in later life a great deal more than for accomplishments.

If you are annoyed or vexed at people, just remember it is not the right time to speak. Close your mouth—shut your teeth to-gether firmly, and it will save you many a useless and unavailing regret and many a bitter enemy.

Avoid all boastings and exaggerations, backbitings, abuse and evil speaking, slang phrases and oaths in conversation; depreciate no man's qualities, and accept hospitality of the humblest kind in a hearty and appreciative manner.

Seek for a good school with a principal who cares more about character than about Greek and Latin, and about Greek and Latin chiefly as instruments in the developement of character; who loves boys, and whom boys love, and who maintains a kindly, gentle, not severe, but firm discipline, and put your boys under him.

We often here it spoken of why does Draper sell so many fine new goods in his new Jewelry Store? (the answer is:)—The patterns have been improved and the prices have dropped about one-third in the past 3 years—and he makes it a practice to sell at the lowest living rates, hence more and larger sales, even if smaller profits on each.

An Attack of Gravel.

The Terrible Suffering of a Woman at 60.—How She was Happily Cured.

There is nothing I now enjoy that I do not owe to having used Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. My troubles began in my kidneys and from which I never expected to recover. First there were pains in my back, I was feverish, with no appetite and could not sleep, I was compelled to use a cane, and finally got so weak that I could not stand alone. The distress in my back was terrible. I was burning up with a fever or constantly shivering as if cold. My physicians said which was alarming information. To add to my affliction after I had been ill about two years, I had a bad attack of Gravel. When this made its appearance my physician gave up my case, and I resigned myself to die. I had four doctors attend me, the best in the country, yet I constantly grew worse. Six years ago last June, how well I remember the time! I saw Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy advertised in our paper. After using one bottle I threw away my cane and went to New York on a visit, and three bottles cured me. I have never had a return of Gravel, nor of the pains or weakness in the back, and though I am over sixty years of age I am

I HAD BRIGHT'S DISEASE,

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders

Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after effect.

Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her head aches."

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent FREE to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at 25 cents a box.

Will deliver free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

Copper Cents in the South.

A Memphis bank teller is quoted as saying: "I can't understand why copper cents are not circulated here. One of our largest retail dry-goods houses tried to introduce them a year or more ago, and sold goods at prices that required their use, but people would buy enough to make the five-cent pieces come in for change. We ordered a big lot of cents, expecting to get them off, but it wouldn't work. Now, in the North they have use for copper all the while in trading, and let me say that the saving to the buyer of small articles amounts to a neat sum in the course of time. It's my belief that one reason why the Northern people are better off than we are is that they save the odd cents, which we give away in making change."

Ten Travelers and Nine Rooms.

Ten weary travelers, did you say?
And each one made demand
For a single room in that wayside inn,
And backed it up with sand.
Nine rooms were all the landlord had,
And yet he housed the ten;
So this it is that puzzles you,
"And many wiser men."

A, B, C, D, E, F, and G,
Nine rooms with H and I.
Two men in A the landlord put,
In B the third could lie;
The fourth in C, the fifth in D,
The sixth in E was closed;
The seventh in F, the eighth in G,
And the ninth in H reposed.

And now you say this landlord man
From A abstracted one,
And into I this tenth he put,
And so the deed was done.
The truth is this: That landlord man,
So, chanced his lucky star,
Behind the real tenth gentleman
Sneak softly toward the bar

And then he felt he need not fear
To put a man in I,
For well he knew the character
Of the stuff he sold for rye.
A dose or so was sure to kill,
And he had seen before
That man who dared partake thereof
Slept on the barroom floor

Not the house of wood, or brick, or stone, in which you live, but your bodily tenement may be in terrible danger from smouldering fire which you make no effort to quench. The great danger from impure blood is that it debilitates the system, and the digestive organs grow weak and inactive. Hood's Sarsaparilla combines the best kidney and liver, invigorators, with the best alteratives and tonics, all from the vegetable kingdom, carefully and understandingly prepared in a concentrated form. It purifies, vitiliates and enriches the blood, and tones up the system, giving the whole body vitality, and effectually guarding it against the attacks of disease.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

ODD WORK FOR WOMEN.

SOME OF THE WAYS THEY EARN THEIR BREAD IN CITIES.

How a Young Woman Made a New Industry of Caring for Expensive Lamps. The Duster and the Window Gardener and Their Work.

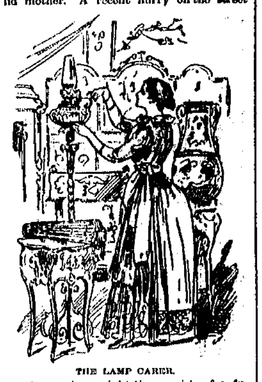
HOW shall a lone woman in a big city earn a livelihood? is a question often asked and practically answered daily by thousands and ten of thousands of the lone women themselves in the various big cities of the civilized world. The number of occupations open to women has increased greatly during the last two decades, but still the list, for many reasons, is much more restricted than the list of callings for men.

The ordinary field is overcrowded; hundreds of teachers, bookkeepers, stenographers and clerks of all descriptions jostle each other in the scramble for a vacant place.

It is of the extraordinary field the writer would speak—those holes into which some individuals slip by accident, and almost unconsciously, and which they fit to a nicety. Is there not in every family some want which the conditions of life do not exactly fill?

For many of those wants fashion is responsible.

The introduction of costly lamps into halls and drawing rooms has enabled the daughter of an old Knickerbocker family in New York to provide a shelter for her invalid mother. A recent flurry on the street swept away in a night the provision for future years, and charity or starvation stared them in the face



THE LAMP CARER.

What was to be done?

The daughter put on her bonnet and went to consult her bosom friend.

She found her dissolved in tears.

"It is quite too horrid, dear, I am awfully sorry, but— Just see, my new shade is perfectly spoiled. That servant chips everything she touches. My lamps smoked awfully last night. I was so mortified. If I could only get some one to do the work properly."

"Why not try me?" said her visitor, suddenly. "You know my lamps never smoke, and I am in want of work."

"Oh, but"——

"I should expect you to pay me a fair price, of course. There is to be no charity on either side."

"You dear!" embracing and kissing her. "It is just too lovely."

And so it was settled. The visitor had accidentally slipped into the very hole for which her careful hands fitted her. The news spread and brought relief to the heart of many a woman who had trembled at intrusting beautiful lamps of Royal Worcester or Satsuma ware to the ruthless hands of a hireling. The sense of security in the knowledge that the lamps are properly filled, the wicks evenly trimmed and the chimneys clear and bright, is productive of an evenness of temper not lessened by the fact that the lighting of lamps involves no soiling of the hands.

The expense of a lamp carer?

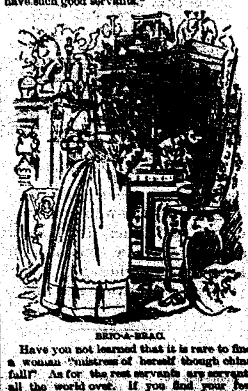
But calculate the amount saved in cracked shades (the present fashion is a decidedly expensive one), chipped lamps, the wholesale slaughter of chimneys, and last but not least, that good temper which is the chief charm of home.

Meantime the energetic little pioneer in a new industry flits from house to house, happy in the consciousness of a work which provides all necessities and many luxuries, while her numerous engagements leave no time for regret.

Have you ever entered a room so crowded with bric-a-brac that, if a man, you wondered what women wanted with all that gimcrackery, while, if a woman, you thought: "How pretty; but what a bother to dust!" You remembered your own treasured ornaments, and you shuddered at the idea of trusting them to Bridget's clumsy hands.

Yet here are articles double yours in number and perhaps quadruple them in value.

"But they can afford to replace them if they are broken," you say, "and the rich have such good servants."



BRIC-A-BRAC.

Have you not learned that it is rare to find a woman "mistress of herself though china fall?" As for the rest servants are servants all the world over. If you find your few etceteras so much care, do you imagine a fashionable woman whose nights and days are one continuous round of pleasure has time (if she has patience) to set her house in order?

Watch that house closely and you will see at stated intervals a woman, who is admitted without question. Sometimes she is young, generally middle aged, but never [illegible] keen sight is a necessity. Her dress and [illegible]

In short—she is the duster.

Ornaments never [illegible] [illegible] to pay in silence.

[illegible]

[illegible] part means annoyance, complaint, and perhaps dismissal.

Is she not paid to know?

Would you learn of still another occupation?

Last winter a New York teacher had a throat trouble which demanded complete rest. The doctor ordered change of air also.

Teachers are not generally overburdened with the world's goods, and this particular one was no exception; the only relatives who could receive her were in England, and she went thither.

Her voice was slow, very slow, in returning. Spring came and though no hint was given, she began to feel that she was taxing her cousin's hospitality. Yet, where to go? What to do?

In this predicament she paid a visit to the Botanical gardens at Kew, where her own fondness for plants had often previously led her.

The gardens had undergone no change since her last visit. Everything seemed to have stood still awaiting her return, even to the quaint, old fashioned gentlewoman of nearly half a century ago, whom she had often observed and who this time accosted her.

Miss —— returned to New York last September with health restored, debts discharged and a purse not quite empty to resume her old duties.

How had the miracle been wrought?

A casual remark about one flower had led to observations on others, and each felt she had met a kindred spirit. Miss —— had not the thorough knowledge of her new acquaintance, who had made botany her life long study, but her love for it was just as keen and her eyesight far better.

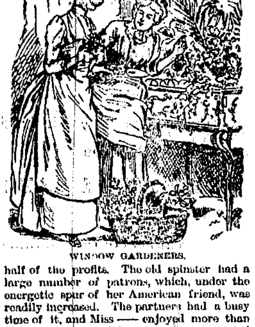
"And if I had but that," signed the spinster, "I would never give up my work."

"Work!" echoed the other. "If I could only get some to do."

And thus was struck the keynote which had led up to so successful a result.

The old spinster was a decayed gentlewoman who eked out a narrow income as a window gardener. But old age and its infirmities were bearing hard upon her, and what was once a pleasure had become a pain.

Exactly who proposed the arrangement neither could afterwards decide, and Miss —— declared that, like Topsy, it "growed;" but it ended in the teacher becoming the window gardener's assistant and receiving a half of the profits. The old spinster had a large number of patrons, which, under the energetic spur of her American friend, was readily increased. The partners had a busy time of it, and Miss —— enjoyed more than all her previous sightseeing the unexpected glimpses into the homes of the rich and aristocratic.



WINDOW GARDENERS.

The plants in the window boxes, conservatories and tiny gardens throve under their united efforts, while the taste of the younger and the skilled hands of the elder were so combined that the arrangement of the flowers about the drawing rooms gave great satisfaction.

When the 13th of August brought the close of the London season, the friends agreed to renew the partnership next spring, the spinster declaring that she had never known so prosperous a season. Miss ——, equally pleased, felt she had fully earned her three weeks on the continent, previous to a return to her native land.

The flower box craze, which was introduced in New York some years ago, was very pretty, very much admired, but soon died out, while other fashions, both ugly and senseless, have taken firm root.

Who will attempt to account for the vagaries of fashion?

But the flower craze had two great drawbacks. People found that, for the boxes to be ornamental, regular care and a slight knowledge of plants were requisite. Then, too, the flowers required light, and the sun faded carpets and furniture.

To the latter, English people who dislike newness do not object, while for the former provision is made as we have seen and a new industry created.

An Object of Interest.

"You should come," said the man from the Occident, "and take a look at our Yellowstone park, and see its geyser."

Philadelphian—Will some day; but we have a beautiful park of our own, and——

Westerner (interrupting)—But no geyser.

Philadelphian—Oh yes we have.

Westerner—Where?

Philadelphian—There, for instance (pointing to a passing dude), how's that for a guyser?—Philadelphia Press.

It is computed that there are 800,000 railroad employes in the United States who receive annually $400,000,000, an average of $500 each. It is probable that the number of employes now reaches 900,000, and that the amount of money paid them is correspondingly larger.

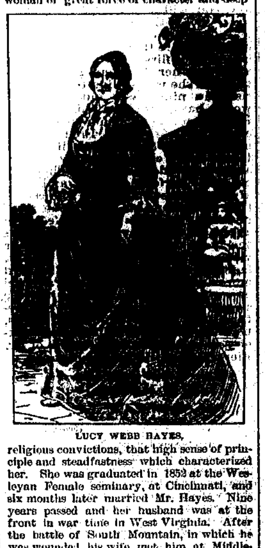
THE LATE MRS. HAYES.

Sketch of a Woman Whose Presence Once Adorned the White House.

The late Mrs. Hayes was born in Chillicothe, O., in 1831. The daughter of Dr. James Webb and Maria Cook Webb, Lucy Ware inherited from her mother, who was a woman of great force of character and deep religious convictions, that high sense of principle and steadfastness which characterized her. She was graduated in 1852 at the Wesleyan Female seminary, at Cincinnati, and six months later married Mr. Hayes. Nine years passed and her husband was at the front in war time in West Virginia. After the battle of South Mountain, in which he was wounded, his wife met him at Middletown, Md., and nursed him. During the war she was indefatigable in her efforts in behalf of disabled soldiers, spending much of her time in the hospitals. After the war she became one of the originators of the Ohio Soldiers and Sailors' home, and one of its directors.



LUCY WEBB HAYES.

Mrs. Hayes became familiar with Washington when her husband was a congressman. In 1877 she was called upon to play the part of first lady in the land. So far as culture and refinement were concerned no woman ever occupied that position who was better fitted for it. Notwithstanding all the antipathy excited by her departure from time honored customs in the White House, no one even intimated that Mrs. Hayes was not a refined and a superior woman. She was well adapted to entertain, was a good mother and wife, and was universally respected. When she left the White House she left hosts of friends. Senators and representatives vied with each other in compliments upon her grace as a hostess, and those who had been with her under the same roof tree felt deep regret at her departure, from the many kindnesses they had received at her hands.

Mrs. Hayes was a woman of medium height, with a slender figure. Refinement was marked in form and face. She was what may be called a beautiful woman, though not in the sense the term is applied to a society belle. Her apparel was always simple, and the plain manner in which she wore her hair was in contrast with the fashion of the times. Her expression was gentle and winning, yet full of moral strength; her eyes soft and dark, her features delicately cut.

Since leaving the White House Mrs. Hayes has been prominent in a more limited sphere. A member of the Women's Relief corps and President of the Women's Home Mission society, of the Methodist church, she found her duties as congenial as entertaining the notables of Washington. She was also made an honorary member of the Society of the Army of West Virginia. She had eight children, of whom four boys and one girl are living.

OKLAHOMA'S CAPITAL.

THE BOOM OF GUTHRIE, ITS COLLAPSE AND SECOND GROWTH.

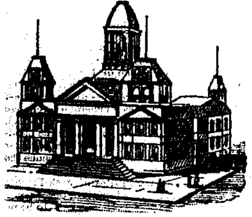
Booming Western Towns Is Now a Science. The Right Time to Buy Is When the Panic Is on, if You Are Sure of the Future.

"Lots sell, not for what they are really worth now, but what they are expected to be worth three, five or seven years from now."

Such has been the verdict of many a cool, clear headed man on each successive boom town of the booming west, and such must be such a one's judgment on Oklahoma's already overcrowded metropolis, Guthrie. It had one tremendous boom in the first week of its existence, then dropped for a fortnight to a comparatively dull village, then took the second growth, and is now inviting all the world to come and see its rapid rise—and incidentally to buy lots.

Some thirty years have passed since the system of booming western towns was brought to a science. All that was done previous to 1855 was merely experimenting; then each successive city from Keokuk to St. Paul was boomed a little higher, and at last the practice reached its maximum on the Union Pacific railroad. As each successive "magic city" from Omaha westward was built up, there were the same confident prophecies of its permanent greatness. Yet it is doubtful if any of them is now as big as it was in the third month of its existence, though many are more solid. In every such city there have come certain periods of depression, when property could have been bought for half its cost; the men who knew which city was to recover and grow on have made the money. In Guthrie the first depression is past, and no one can set the date of the next one.

On the morning of April 22 there was only a Guthrie station, and around it a vacant prairie, Cottonwood creek and the Cimarron river not far away. Early that day—the first that ingress was allowed—the immigrants began to come in swarms from all directions and in every sort of conveyance. Eleven trains from Arkansas City arrived that afternoon, all loaded with men who were land hungry. One man, so the story runs, jumped off the train, staked out a town lot, perfected his title, got on the next train, rode fourteen miles further south and there took a 160 acre claim. In seven weeks thereafter he had it all fenced, with fifty acres plowed and in crops, and has sold his Guthrie lot for $500.



NEW CAPITOL.

Of course nobody knows just what the population of Guthrie is. The citizens claim 10,000, as to which due allowance must be made for the expansive western idea. On the night of April 22, it is said, there were 15,000 people on the ground, in tents, in wagons, in blankets on the bare ground, under the open sky. Yet there was no fighting, no drunkenness, no disorder. In a few days the titles to lots were settled, and all fell to work building stores, offices and residences. Now the place has graded streets, waterworks, an electric light franchise granted and the plant contracted for, a street car line in the same inchoate state; with guarantee that the cars shall be running in sixty days; some fair public buildings erected, ten acres set apart and fenced for the state capitol, some tolerably substantial business houses, and every variety of dwelling from the "dugout" and tent to the handsome frame.

The city government is boasted as almost perfect, and the city has over 300 lawyers and twenty-five doctors. There has not been a murder as yet, and the only death in the first six weeks was from apoplexy. There is one big bank in a $20,000 bank building, there are two schools and places of meeting for nearly all religious denominations. Such are the results of a few weeks' growth in the proposed capitol of the designed state of Oklahoma. Of course, the people of the new city are frantic to have congress open some more Indian land to settlement. There is still a vast area of it. Indeed, immigrants to Oklahoma have to cross vacant Indian land by any route they choose. And the enthusiastic Guthrians claim that an area five times as large as Oklahoma might be opened and still leave the Indians more land than they need. Most of these Indians are civilized, but that will make no difference; they will have to give place. The pressure will soon be too strong for congress to resist; the Indian territory will soon be a thing of the past.

Some time next autumn there is to be a grand powwow and aboriginal show at Guthrie. Bands from all the Indian tribes in the territory and as many more as can be reached are to be there and give their various dances. There will be horse races, foot races, sham battles, bow and arrow practice, rifle contests, exhibitions of skill in throwing the lariat and tomahawk—in short, all the sights of many Buffalo Bill troupes. It will continue thirty days and during the same time there will be an exhibition of the products of Oklahoma. The result will be that Guthrie will be greatly advertised, and congress will have a few more reasons why the Indians should go.

Mrs. Hicks-Lord is another representative New York widow, and she is rich, still handsome and imposing, a perfect hostess, lavish in spending money so as to outshine all others, possessor of a wonderful array of beautiful pictures, statuary, works of art and jewels. It is not wonderful that she should be a very popular hostess and that her spacious rooms in the McClelland mansion should be thronged to suffocation in rain or shine, summer's heat or winter's blizzards. The history of her lawsuit with her late husband's family has not yet died out of public recollection.—New York Letter.

THE Sullivan-Kilrain prize fight which occurred in the state of Mississippi, about 100 miles from New Orleans on Monday, and which resulted in the defeat of Kilrain after seventy-five rounds has been the topic of animated conversation not only in bar rooms and sporting resorts where it should be confined but on the street, in places of business and even within the home circle.

Public curiosity created a demand for newspapers and on Monday extras were issued in hundreds of cities that did not give the first semblance of an authentic account of the brutal affair. The press almost everywhere deprecates the prize fight but caters to the demand and print details of the fight.

Distinctly against the law it is evident that as it now stands it is easy to be evaded and steps should be taken at once to enact laws making it illegal to sign articles or enter into training for such contests. It is doubtful if anything could occur that would attract more general attention. Degrading in its debasing effects every effort should be made to prevent frequent occurrence of such affairs.

SINCE the first of June seventeen and one-half million dollars in gold and nearly one and a quarter millions in silver have been shipped to Europe from the port of New York alone. The aggregate of circulation in this country is eight million dollars larger than a year ago. but if the outflow continues during July and August, a monetary pressure would result in September, when the fall trade will cause an increased demand.

Despite the parade of legal opposition the Sullivan-Kilrain prize-fight came off Monday at an out-of-the-way spot in Mississippi. Seventy-five rounds were fought and Sullivan was declared the victor. Mr. Kilrain showed a wholesome fear of Sullivan and devoted his athletic talents chiefly to keeping out of his way. This leaves John Lawrence Sullivan still the champion pugilist of the country and adorns him with a record such as no man of his age ever made in the line of prize-fighting. It is to be hoped that the gentlemen who love this style of pastime will be satisfied for a season and that it will be many months before the country is again agitated [illegible] a disgraceful event as that of [illegible]

The "Glorious Fourth" has been a blessed day in Washington, owing to the large number of excursions to here, there and everywhere, and since the cannon boomed and the church bells chimed national airs at daybreak, there has been reasonable quiet in this city. The small boy with the toy pistol and the nuisance adult with the cannon firecracker have alike hied away for the day and there is peace.

Holidays are less noisy in Washington than elsewhere because they are more common here, especially so far as the poor government wage-earner is concerned. What with the regular holidays, the Christmas week half-holiday, his thirty days annual leave, (of which he generally takes some advantage) the government clerk could afford to ignore the liberty of the Fourth. But he does not. The passion for holidays becomes a fierce flame. Everytime he reads of the critical condition of any ex-secretary of the particular department in which he is employed, he becomes solicitous. If the ex-official dies, be it in Washington or Persia, the department will be closed for the day. So the government clerk is charitably inclined to believe that so long as man is mortal, and this particular man is very old, and his work is done, he might do far worse than die, especially as it is now midsummer and the office is particularly close and hot.

The first of July did not, to any extent, bring about the revolution in the Departments that had been fondly predicted by the waiting office-seekers. The discharges were not unusually large for the end of the fiscal year, and were not even so numerous as those occurring in the summer after Mr. Cleveland's inauguration. The few Republican Congressmen whom I have talked with on the subject, bitterly denounce the tardiness of the administration in this regard.

Your Uncle Jerry Rusk is a picturesque figure, a sort of sportive rustic who plays his part as Secretary of Agriculture with considerable comic-opera spirit. When he left the State of Wisconsin to take care of itself, and came to Washington at the head of the seed distributing office, his friends bewailed his action as being a voluntary rush into obscurity. Some did not hesitate to say that it was a Hoosier trick to take Uncle Jerry out of the fierce light of active politics and prevent him from assuming a Presidential importance in 1892.

But Uncle is a man of original daring, within a month after arriving here he had installed himself into the good graces of all the newspaper men in Washington. It is just as easy to get a paragraph of him as it is to of a county justice of the peace. The Agricultural Department is a great news centre. Ancient jokes elbow personal anecdotes, and every correspondent must take his pick.

One day Secretary Rusk sets everyone laughing by swinging a scythe on the Department lawns and thereby giving lesson to the gang of slow workmen employed. In anyone else this would have been a freak, in this case it was an advertisement, as well prepared as the best of Mr. Wanamaker's Philadelphia announcements. Mr. Rusk followed this hit by mounting the wheel horse and driving a double team from the station to General Felix Angus' county place in Maryland. The hay wagon thus conducted, a score of newspaper correspondents who promptly spread the story over the country, to the good natured gratification of the majority of readers.

But all this time Uncle Jerry is on is on the outlook for something sensational in politics. Life has its stern duties, its serious obligations as well as its frolicsome relaxations. Everyone with a recollection of the details of the last campaign remembers Mary Ann Doughtery. This widow had a special pension bill passed for her benefit by Congress, and President Cleveland vetoed it on the grounds that Mary Ann was a disreputable character and not worthy of being classed among the humble widows of veterans. Though the widow thus lost her pension, she gained great fame, and her name was in the mouths of half of the campaign speakers. Fame, alas was too much for her girlish nature and her exuberance of feeling was several times checked by small fines in the police court, where she was charged with inhaling strong liquors. This week Secretary Rusk discovered her in poverty and wretchedness, and immediately appointed her as a seed packer at $1.50 per day. The picture of the gracious secretary handing $1.50 a day to the red nosed widow with the violent breath touches one to tears.

Apropos of the great Paris sale of paintings this week, the officials of the Corcoran art gallery gravely announce that they sent a secret commission to France with instructions to bid "The Angulus" up to $100,000.

The Sweetest Girl in School.

"She's the sweetest girl in school"! enthusiastically exclaimed one young miss to another, as they passed down the street together. "Edith is so kind, and gentle, and unselfish, everyone likes her. And she has lovely golden hair and pretty eyes. Isn't it a pity her complexion is so bad; it spoils her looks. And then she has such dreadful headaches"! The girls skipped along, but it happened Edith's mother had heard what they said. It set her thinking. What could be done for those headaches and the rough, muddy complexion, that was such a trial to her gentle daughter. She recalled what she had read of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and on the spur of the moment bought a supply. Edith took it faithfully, with the result that it cleared her disordered blood, relieved her headaches, made her skin soft, fair and rosy, and now she is not only the sweetest girl in school" but the most beautiful.

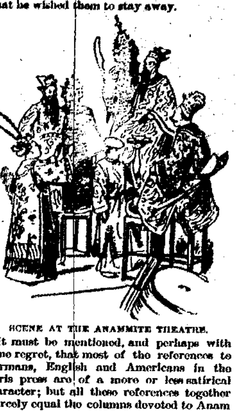
THE GREAT [illegible] TO BE A BRILLIANT SUCCESS.

French Enthusiasm About Anam, Cochin-China—Anammite Theatre—A Blacksmith Shop 1,500 Feet Long and 300 Feet Wide. A Remarkable Combination.

The Paris exposition is now almost at the maximum, and from dawn till near midnight the grounds and immediate vicinity are in a roar with the talk, laughter and movements of some 400,000 people. The fear that some countries, notably Russia and Germany, would not be represented has proved baseless; though the governments insultingly ignored the whole thing, the people have come in good numbers. The wits of the Paris press ironically congratulate their German visitors on having acquired more independence, and satirically suggest that they have come because Bismarck caused it to be understood that he wished them to stay away.



SCENE AT THE ANAMMITE THEATRE.

It must be mentioned, and perhaps with some regret, that most of the references to Germans, English and Americans in the Paris press are of a more or less satirical character; but all these references together scarcely equal the columns devoted to Anam alone. The French, as a rule, have most thought for those countries in which they have colonies—and this is but natural—but just now their enthusiasm about Anam amounts to a mania. Anam is all the fashion, the mode, the rage, the latest fad. The Anammite theatre is packed at every performance; the Anammite voitures (light two wheeled carriages drawn by hand) are sought by all the fine ladies; the Anammite open air restaurants and factories are constantly surrounded by enthusiastic Frenchmen.

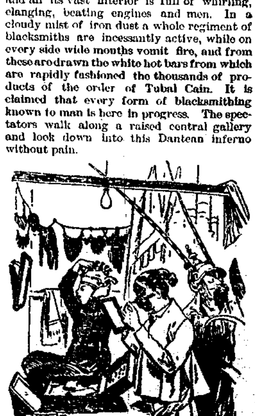
Not only does the Parisian press give elaborate pictures of the scenes in the Anammite theatre, but all the plays are analyzed and critiques given; the actors have as much space as the New York papers ever gave to Irving or Bernhardt, Forrest or Macready. And the names of the Cochin-Chinese "stars" are Tho, Cho, Qui, Thinh, Bueb, Rit, Thao, Phung and Dang. Part of the report of Le Monde Illustre is worth reading.

"There is," says the critic, "a grand swish and crash—it is the prelude. The melody is much as if a grand mass of kitchen utensils should be rolled down stairs. A door flies open and a man—no, a monster in an indescribably hideous mask—enters and goes through many contortions. A second enters and does the same—they are introducing the play, without words! Then come the armies and there is a battle. Anammite swords clash, spears and shields mingle ferociously, blood flows apparently (it is really red silk streamers), they tumble in every direction till the stage is covered with corpses. The uproar is terrible."

We can easily believe him. The few words spoken in the play indicate that the king, Ly-Tieng-Vuong, is defeated, and the succeeding acts show how he loses his followers one after another, until with a few faithful ones he hides in a jungle. Then in pantomime the enemy set the woods on fire to drive him out. He rushes to an opposite corner and sinks exhausted, but when about to be beheaded his long absent adopted son rushes to his rescue and puts the enemy to flight. Then follow the combats of the son, his success, the re-enthronement of Ly-Tieng-Vuong, the death of the villains and the triumph of virtue. So it seems the Anammites have some good ideas of dramatic art. But the important part of the show, from the standpoint of the exposition proper, is the richness and solidity of the silk robes, the elegance of the fans, the excellence of the weapons and general fineness of finish of the articles used by the actors.

There has been much criticism by English and Americans on the ground that the affair was a scenic show rather than an exhibition of arts, sciences and manufactures, but this defect is rapidly being remedied. The first edifice completed and filled was the hall of the iron works, and it is a wonder.

The hall is about 1,500 feet long and 300 feet wide (discarding the fractions of meters), and all its vast interior is full of whirling, clanging, beating engines and men. In a cloudy mist of iron dust a whole regiment of blacksmiths are incessantly active, while on every side wide mouths vomit fire, and from these are drawn the white hot bars from which are rapidly fashioned the thousands of products of the order of Tubal Cain. It is claimed that every form of blacksmithing known to man is here in progress. The spectators walk along a raised central gallery and look down into this Dantean inferno without pain.



BEHIND THE SCENES.

Behind this are the factories, next the halls of electricity and water works, then the show of agricultural implements and so on to the fine arts and elegant displays. The machinery of the smithy and smoky factories is necessarily given a corner to itself. The line in which this exposition excels all that have gone before is in the combination of light and airy building with immense strength. The Eiffel tower is such a wonder in this respect that it has caused the other specimens to be overlooked, but in reality almost every structure in the grounds is a triumph. The iron worker's hall above mentioned is so very light in seeming as to present a fragile appearance, yet it is absolutely safe, as shown by most thorough tests. Many of these buildings, seemingly so airy, vibrate less from the machinery than solid stone structures. It is all achieved by combinations of curves and cylinders—the greatest strength with the least motion.

One visitor, amazed at this combination, breaks into rhapsody thus: "The Eiffel tower and the machinery gallery are the lyricism of engineers, just as the Gothic cathedrals are the lyricism of architects glowing with genius. The daring curves of the tower shooting upward, the boldness of the trusses of the palace of machines leaning on the ground with the lightness of an eagle at rest, cause a giddiness which it is very difficult to resist. One feels amid these volitations of the iron work a peculiar kind of intoxication—the intoxication of iron." And on this point all visitors agree: the architects have made a marvelous success in combining strength and lightness.

Now we have it! Chocolate Egg Shake. Most delicious drink on the market at the Syracuse Drug Store. [illegible]

[illegible] A CONVENTION [illegible]

With the Governors' Private Secretaries—Amateur Editors Miss a Professional Chance of the Big Fair.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

BUFFALO, July 9.—By what should I think have been regarded as a [illegible] combination of circumstances, there occurred simultaneously in this city one day last week, a convention of the National Amateur Press Association, and a most mysterious murder. If it is the aim of these amateur editors to train themselves for a professional newspaper life, they should, in my opinion, have adjourned the convention immediately upon the receipt of the news of Lung Sing's murder, and turned in with tooth and nail upon an investigation of the mystery.

It may be years before they will ever again have such a golden opportunity to perfect themselves, as a body, in that branch of American journalism which is known as "Sleuth hound work," and which is generally admitted by Doctors of Journalism to have a most beneficial effect upon the circulation.

This murder of Lung Sing, Chinese laundryman, which occurred on Thursday last, has not only baffled the skill of the police but has successfully defied the detective ability of the Buffalo press. The fact that fifty young men who hope some day to be real editors, could sit calmly in a cool hall discussing the ethics of journalism, while the possibility of such a "scoop" as the unraveling of this murder mystery was lying around loose, would not seem to argue well for their chances of adorning the business in which they hope to engage.

That the National Amateur Press association had a good time here at their convention goes without saying. The people of Buffalo seem to be fully aware of the excellent reputation which Buffalo is making throughout the country as a desirable convention centre, and are doing what they can to maintain it. I might fill this letter with a list of the conventions which are scheduled for the remainder of the summer.

The most important of these, should it take place, is a convention which is, I am told, being very quietly arranged for the latter part of August by the handsome and accomplished private secretary of Governor David B. Hill. Col. Rice, who succeeded Col. Dan Lamont as confidential adviser of the governor of the Empire state, is said to be agitating the assemblage in convention here of all the gubernatorial private secretaries in the United States. The state which has raised a governor's private secretary to the private secretaryship of the president of the United States is clearly entitled to the first private secretary's convention. It is not understood that politics are to play any part (that is openly) at this gathering. The meeting is rather to be one of social importance. In 1883 Col. Dan Lamont, while secretary for Grover Cleveland, put in the opening wedge for a closer acquaintance among the private secretaries of the Union by addressing a personal letter to each of them requesting their autograph signatures. The idea struck the P. S.s of other governors as being a good one, and the result was a general interchange of autographs and photographs. Now Col. Rice, who is acknowledged to have the handsomest face in the collection, wishes a closer acquaintance with his colleagues, hence the convention idea.

As, among the perquisites of each Private Secretary is a large and picturesque assortment of railroad passes, there ought to be no difficulty in securing a general attendance. If a convention of the leading newspaper interviewers of the United States could be held here at the same time a harvest of political literature myth might be laid in which would last a year.

One of the most gorgeous buildings, outside and in, that can be seen upon Main street in these days is the Daily and Sunday News office. It has been entirely reconstructed, and as every inch of its five stories is devoted to its own uses the magnitude of the business of this popular afternoon penny paper can be readily perceived.

The press of Buffalo appears to be fully alive this year to the importance of the International Exposition. On Sunday last The Express devoted two pages to an illustrated description of the art pictures of the forthcoming Fair. According to these illustrations in The Express the Art Gallery is to be a much handsomer and more imposing building than anybody had imagined. In addition to that much discussed picture, "The Russian Wedding Feast," which I mentioned in one of my former letters and which has been locked up from public gaze ever since its arrival in America, there are two pictures either one of which worth a long journey to see. These are the "Last Hours of Mozart," loaned to the Fair by ex-Gov. Alger of Michigan, and Poore's picture "The Night of Nativity," which took the prize at the American Art Galleries at New York. There are to be over 400 paintings in the collection.

The Courier of Sunday has an interview with one of the officers of the Fair, from which, as many of your readers are doubtless coming here in September and will be anxious to know what new features they are to see, I venture to take a few points. The new structures this year are to consist of the completed art gallery, an extra horse show building 400 feet square, an enormous hall entitled the "Palace of Illusions," an amphitheatre for the exhibition of representatives of the curious tribes of earth, spacious executive quarters, leaving the Queen Anne cottage formerly used as offices for a superb cafe; additional sheep and swine buildings, and an acre or two of other live stock edifices. In a portion of the grounds best adapted to it, there is to be constructed a miniature Niagara. It will consist of a body of water falling down a heavy incline along the sides of which many inventors, who have been struggling with the problem of how best to harness the strength of Niagara, will be given an opportunity to test their inventions in a practical way.

Another most interesting and instructive feature of the Fair of '89 will be, I should imagine, the Tobacco Exposition. Singular as it may seem, there has never been an exhibition of the great tobacco industry of the United States, north of Mason and Dixon's line. The inaugural one promises to be a great success, the leading houses of the country being interested in it. One, and perhaps two, of the centre courts of the main building will be given up to the display, and each step in the cultivation and manufacture of the seductive weed will be picturesquely illustrated. Old plantation negroes with their banjos and fiddles will give life to the scene, and not less attractive will be the bevies of nimble-fingered cigarette rolling beauties who are to be brought on from the manufactories of the South and East.

The "Palace of Illusions" is to be a hall capable of seating a thousand people, where such romances as "Blue Beard and His Wives" and the Arabian tales will be enacted by actual flesh and blood by the aid of curiously deceptive vanishing scenes.

Buffalo seems to have gone wild on the musical question this year. The Music Hall is crowded nightly notwithstanding the fact that a season of light opera is in progress at the Star theatre. Realizing the musical taste of the community, the managers of the Fair have made an expensive bid for the patronage of music lovers by engaging Cappa's famous Seventh regiment band for open air concerts during the Exposition.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

"Don't Marry Him!"

"He is such a fickle, inconstant fellow, you will never be happy with him," said Esther's friends when they learned of her engagement to a young man who bore the reputation of being a sad flirt. Esther, however, knew that her lover had good qualities, and she was willing to take the risk. In nine cases out of ten it would have proved a mistake; but Esther was an uncommon girl and to every one's surprise Fred made a model husband. How was it? Well, Esther had a cheerful, sunny temper and a great deal of tact. Then she enjoyed perfect health and was always so sweet, neat and wholesome that Fred found his own home most pleasant, and his own wife more agreeable, than any other being. As the year passed and he saw other women of Esther's age grow sickly, faded and querulous, he realized more and more that he had "a jewel of a wife." Good health was half the secret of Esther's success. She retained her vitality and good looks, because she warded off feminine weaknesses and ailments by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, July 8.

Although the market was ¼c. lower to-day, and buyers held off until a late hour before making offers, the wind up was much stronger than salesmen had expected early in the day, and there was a very general disposition to let the stock go forward. It is feared that we are destined to experience a "heated term," and if so, that cheese will show the effects thereof; and there is no advantage in holding stock under such circumstances. Advises from New York were discouraging all the afternoon, and yet the market was fairly sustained. It is evident that orders were in hand for special factories, which must be had at any cost, and the competition for these was lively. Aside from these few lots, the cheese sold for what buyers could afford to give, and it is a good testimony to the strength of the market that prices are off only ¼c. on on the ruling and average, Following is our list of sales:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
7	700	7⅛
82	7,468	7⅞
21	2,119	8c
27	2,401	8⅛

Ruling price 7⅞c. Transactions one year ago 19,331 boxes; ruling price 8½c. Two years ago, 16,314 boxes, ruling 8⅛c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 8.

Cheese—The market has been quite dull and slow, but notwithstanding there has been a large sale of cheese. Buyers claim to have lost money on last week's purchases, although they bought considerable of the stock conditionally. Prices are ⅛ to ⅜c. off from last week. A few salesmen waited and stood off till quite late, hoping to get better rates, and there were rumors that 8⅜c. was paid for some of these lots. Some of these quoted at 8¼c were small cheese. Altogether the market has been a disappointing one to factorymen, for they had not expected the decline.

The transactions were as follows:

2	104	7⅛
49	3,435	7¾
49	4,833	8c.
6	750	8¼
5	605	p. t.
20	1,105	Com.
131	10,835
Farm dairy	970
Total	11,805

Farm dairies—There were 970 boxes, farm cheese sold at 7 to 8⅛c, the bulk sold at 8c.

Butter—Forty packages of creamery sold at 16c. and 18 packages of farm dairy at 16 to 17c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-one factories were represented at this market Monday night with 2,285 boxes of cheese which sold at prices ranging from 7½ to 8¼ cents.

They show every afternoon and evening for the balance of the week.

Come to the bridal chamber, Death!
Come to the mother, when she feels
For the first time, her first born's breath,
And thou art terrible!

The untimely death which annually carries off thousands of human beings in the prime of youth, is indeed terrible. The first approach of consumption is insidious, and the sufferer himself himself is the most unconscious of its approach. One of the most alarming symptons of this dread disease is, in fact, the ineradicable hope, which lurks in the heart of the victim, preventing him from taking timely steps to arrest the malady. That it can be arrested in its earlier stages is beyond question, as there are hundreds of well-authenticated cases where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has effected a complete cure.

The boys on the Third of July got the best of the janitor by tying a string to the M. E. church bell clapper and throwing the other end out into the lawn and climbing a tree in the neighborhood. This is how htey rang it at midnight.

Louis Emerick of Cornell University is home for his vacation. As coxswain of the university boat club he comes in for his share of credit for the wonderful record they have made. Their recent victory over Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania at New London, Conn. is augmented by their victory in securing the Sharpless prize on the Schuylkill river, Philadelphia, July 4th, and the Child's cup on the same river after a most exciting race July 5th.

Concerning the recent musicale of Mrs. M. R. Budd's pupils in Chatham, N. J. "The Madison, N. J., Eagle speaks of the entertainment in the highest terms, and pays Mrs. Budd the following merited notice: "The performance of all showed the exceptional training of Mrs. Budd, whose ability as a music teacher, is unequaled in this section, as is proven from the fact that she numbers among her scholars, pupils from Morristown, Madison, Chatham, Stanley and Summit."

The special reports of the weather bureau for last week give the following crop report of Oswego county: Hay is being cut, after a delay caused by the wet condition of the ground, which in many cases makes hand mowing necessary; with favorable weather the crop will be good. Oats look yellow and promise from one-half to three-fourths of a crop. There is no change in the condition of potatoes and corn. Heavy rain and wind have caused tree fruit to fall. Small fruits are in fair condition. Potato bugs are doing some damage.

Miscreants at Work.

As everyone knows a number of settees have been placed in the park the gifts of residents. These are enjoyed by many who seek this cool and delightful spot on warm days. One would naturally suppose that these would not be touched but such is not the case. On Monday night one of the settees was removed from the park and taken to the corner of Buffalo and Fifth streets, either by parties whose brains are so small that they consider it a cute thing or by some in whom pure cussedness is a predominating feature. In either case the parties should be ferreted out and public sentiment would call for their receiving the full benefit of the law for such misdemeanor. This is the second time that this has occurred and it is thought that the parties that committed the act Monday night are known. They should be taken as an example and dealt with accordingly.

Rev. Mr. Lynch Resigns.

After Rev. J. Hollister Lynch, pastor of Zion Episcopal church was ordained to the priesthood a short time since the vestry gave him a call to become rector of the church of which he had been in charge as deacon. Last week a letter was received from him declining the call as arrangements has been made for him to work elsewhere. The reason for the change is the fact that the climate does not appear to agree with Mr. Lynch and as he feels that it is necessary for him to become stronger before he can efficiently perform the arduous taxes of a clergyman's work, has decided to go to Guilford, N. Y., where he feels that the dry, pure air will benefit him greatly.

He enters upon his work at Guilford August 1st, and will carry with him the best wishes of his parishoners, friends and THE TIMES in his new field of work.

A Quiet Fourth.

The boys started in at midnight on July 3 to make it interesting for all who desired to enjoy a good night's rest. Their intentions were good and preparations excellent but rain fairly poured shortly after midnight, their spirits were dampened and sleep loving citizens enjoyed a good night's rest. Things were lively however when the great day was ushered in by the ringing of bells, firing of cannon and tooting of horns. From 1,200 to 1,300 of the Fulton people went to Oswego, 900 round trip tickets having been purchased at the O. & W. depot alone. The village streets for most of the day presented a Sunday like appearance only more so.

The Catholic church picnic on the fair grounds was largely attended and a handsome sum netted for the new church in process of construction.

The New Jewelry Store.

Osborne's New Store in the Grand Central Block, on Oneida street is a model store of its kind. For the past year Mr. Osborne has occupied a portion of Phillips' drug store, on First street. Want of sufficient room for his fast increasing trade induced him to rent the above mentioned store and he moved into the same last week. The side walls are lined with beautiful show cases where an excellent stock of silverware is displayed, a stock of jewelry and watches, larger than ever before and a fine line of stationery &c. fill up the other case. Call and see Osborne's new store and his new stock. Both must be seen to be appreciated.

S. of T. Installation.

Sudden Death at Mt. Pleasant

Rev. David Jackson, pastor of the M. E. church at Mt. Pleasant, died of apoplexy on Friday, July 5, at the age of 57 years. Mr. Jackson came from England to Utica about a year ago and resided with his brother in that city until a few months since when he was sent by the M. E. Conference to Mt. Pleasant. He, during his short time there, proved himself a superior man intellectually, morally and spiritually. He had a wife and family in England. His niece keep-house for him at Mt. Pleasant.

On the evening of July 4th, he retired at an early hour, not having been as well as usual for a few days. During the evening his niece, who was living with him, called at his room and found him sleeping and did not disturb him. The next morning she called again and he was still sleeping and she tried to awaken him and could not. She immediately notified the neighbors of his condition. A doctor was sent for, every means used to arouse him, but it was of no avail and he died in a few hours. His brother arrived from Utica about an hour before his death, expecting to find him in health, only to find him unconscious and dying.

Funeral services conducted by Rev. W. Dempster Chase of this village and Rev. Mr. Walton of Scriba were held at the house Sunday and the remains taken to Utica for interment Monday.

A. P. Davis opens his Fulton Steam Laundry on Oneida street in the building until recently occupied by Whitaker as a meat market, on Monday next. He has all the modern appliances for a laundry including boiler, starcher, &c. all of which are run by a four horse power steam engine.

The prospect is for a fairly good crop of hay.

Little pigs are said to thrive well on oats fed whole.

Excessive rains and floods have preceptibly reduced the condition and production of wheat in various localities in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

The advance in value of wheat has prevented reduction of area threatened by previous discouragement.

The question is discussed whether it is necessary to weight the silo or not.

Farmers report that horses like ensilage and hogs do well on it.

There continues to be an increase in the breath of oats fully equal to the advance in population. The general average condition is 93.8.

There is the usual breadth of barley, but no sign of such increase as would reduce the volume of importation. The average condition is 95.6.

The condition of rye averages high in the Northwest. It is lowest in Kansas, and considerably reduced in South Carolina. The general average for the country is 95.2.

Persons owning bees and not located near streams of water, are advised by Massachusetts Ploughman to furnish them fresh water daily, as it will save time, which to the bee means honey and to the person means money.

Never worry an honest, generous horse by putting a rogue or a sluggard in the harness with him, says the Northwestern Agriculturist.

The American Cultivator rightly thinks that the currant is a fruit far too little grown. The small number of persons who will take the trouble to dose the current worm with hellebore, it says, will long keep the currant at good prices for those who do.

Any sowing can be much better done when there is no wind, says S. M. Palmer in the Weekly Tribune, but oats especially cannot be sowed evenly when there is even a good breeze—in the ordinary manner. But by casting the grain all the time the same way, first with the right, and then, as you return, with the left hand, even oats can be nicely spread by throwing with the wind. This is not difficult; a little practice makes it feasible and easy.

Ground oats, corn and barley, with middlings and bran mixed in say half and half, make splendid feed for flesh and egg production. Cabbage is the leading vegetable, but carrots, turnips and beets are excellent if cabbage is not at hand. Fowls may do well by feeding them grain and vegetables in a crude state, but a cooked and warm mess seasoned for the morning meal will be better relished and do them more good after a long night's fasting than if fed to them raw.

Fattening Sheep.

On the subject of fattening sheep one of our wideawake farmers says: "A good grain for fattening sheep is shelled corn one half, barley or rye one quarter, and oats one-quarter. Years of experience satisfied us that it pays, unless the mills are very remote, to have all grain ground, even for sheep, and the finer the better. The process of resalivation will be just as well performed with meal as with grain. There is much grain that will escape the act of regurgitation and remastication, and, most important consideration of all, the particles of grain have to be reduced either by the mill, the teeth or the stomach, infinitesimally before they will lend themselves to the great work of nutrition. We would have cornmeal ground nearly as fine as wheat flour if possible; then the waste will be reduced to a minimum and the process of alimentation will be promoted."

On the Size of Apples

The size of apples is a more important consideration than is sometimes thought. A very large apple is not desirable, nor is a very small one likely to be demanded unless it has some very decided merit, as with the lady apple or some of the crabs used for decoration or making a superior conserve. An apple that under good culture is of full medium size will, other things being equal, be the most profitable to the grower, because the most satisfactory to buyers either as dealers or consumers. Two serious objections exist to very large apples—the loss incurred by defect or injury of a single fruit and the difficulty of disposing of them about the person, in pockets or otherwise. No dealer likes to handle a very large apple, unless some particular beauty or excellence enables him to get a very large price for it.

The Farmer's Business.

Here are some anonymous propositions as to the farmer's relations to the public which are worth heeding by rural producers: The public will eat butter in the Winter, and it is the farmer's business to make it; the public will have heavy horses, and it is the farmer's business to raise them; the public will have good, tender, marbled beef, and it is the farmer's business to produce it; the public will have sweet juicy mutton, and it is the farmer's business to provide it; the public is always prone to buy the best of everything, even if the price is high, and it is the farmer's business to respect this propensity. In short, farmers will find it infinitely easier to cater to the public's appetite and price than to teach it to eat differently or to change its tastes.

Something that will quiet the nerves, give strength to the body, induce refreshing sleep, improve the quality of the blood, and purify and brighten the complexion, is what many persons would be very glad to obtain. MARIA MITCHELL.

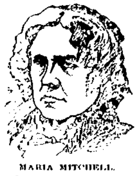
A Distinguished Woman Astronomer Whose Death Was Recently Recorded.

When Maria Mitchell, whose death occurred recently, retired from her professorship in Vassar college and announced that she realized the end of her life to be near, the statement brought grief to many hundred ladies of culture in the United States, for though she was not tenderly loved as many lady teachers are, all her students felt a deep and abiding reverence for her. It was then designed to give her a grand reception this year. Over 1,000 guests were invited, and the large salon of the nearest hotel was filled, there being 250 Vassar graduates among the guests. But at the last moment Miss Mitchell dispatched that it was impossible for her to attend, and soon after the papers announced that she was unable to leave her room.

At such a time the people first fully realize what an honor this woman has been to America. At the age of 11 she assisted her father by recording his observations of a lunar eclipse. At the age of 29 she discovered and calculated the orbit of a new comet, for which the king of Denmark sent her a gold medal, and at the age of 63 she was still the diligent professor of astronomy at Vassar, every day studying carefully the daily lesson of the class, diligent to see if some new light could not be thrown upon it. But days of diligence and nights of patient watch of the stars had worn out her originally rugged frame and she seemed to fail all at once, never to rally again.

Maria Mitchell was born at Nantucket, Mass., Aug. 1, 1818. Her ancestors had been among the first Quakers who went to that part of the country. Her father was William Mitchell, a bank cashier, who had a penchant for astronomy, and in his house telescopes and astronomical apparatus were in nightly use. When she was 11 years old the daughter recorded the instants of the beginning and the end of a lunar eclipse, her father looking through the glasses, she watching the second hand of the chronometer. Fifty-four years later there was a similar eclipse, and though then she might have stood at the glass herself, she preferred to celebrate the event of her girl time in 1829 by performing the service at the chronometer, while her students took her father's post.

At the age of 18 she was made librarian of the Nantucket athenæum, and, the duties being light, she had abundant time for study, and this she kept up for twenty years, often watching the stars from dark till dawn. In this work she rendered many minor services to astronomy, but her chief fame rests upon her discovery of eight comets and calculation of their orbits. During these years she visited the Old World, gazed through the large telescopes and was the honored guest of Sir John Herschel, Sir George Airy and other eminent scientists. After her return, and when Vassar was founded, she became its professor of astronomy. That she might study the heavens she did not marry. And her friends think that in any sphere she would have gone to the front as a woman remarkable in every way. Three institutions have given her the degree of LL. D., Columbia the latest.



MARIA MITCHELL.

It cannot be said that Miss Mitchell was a lovely woman, and to a few only did she seem lovable. She had a thoroughly Nantucket nature—strong, rugged and persevering. She was tall and rather angular, but, like most persons of that build whose lives are noble, she improved in appearance with age; the sublime nature of her science, the loftiness of her pursuits, stamped nobility upon her face. Her nature seemed to be neither wholly feminine nor wholly masculine; she was a "being apart." Even in religion she seemed to be apart from others. She made a point to arrive too late at faculty meetings for the religious exercises, and when expostulated with by the president ended the discussion at once by saying that she did not "pray to order."

It is quite likely that her real belief was much the same as that of Mrs. Somerville, Harriet Martineau and other ladies of eminence in what are called "men's pursuits," but she never intruded her views on any one. It was often said by the young ladies whom she taught that Miss Mitchell "seemed to be sufficient unto herself, and did not need love or sympathy or that sort of thing." If this be true, it is perhaps fortunate for some unknown man that she never married.

She was professor at Vassar from 1865 to 1887, but her fame was greatest before locating there. It is related that as she was making a railway journey the newsboy appeared very much struck by her appearance, and after long study of her face, brought her one of Mrs. Stowe's works. When she shook her head he said, "Sense me, but ain't you Mrs. Stowe?"

Not to be baffled by her refusal to accept the name he tried to fit to her face, he presently returned to the attack, saying: "Then, perhaps, you're Mrs. Stanton?" Receiving a second negative, he added respectfully: "Would you mind tellin' me who you are, ma'am?" It is not probable that the name, Maria Mitchell, was familiar to the boy, but he exclaimed, triumphantly: "I knew you was somebody."

And this is the correct view of her face—it was far from handsome, in the common acceptance, but it showed she was "somebody." The same may be said of her character; she was admired, highly respected, even reverenced; but she was not tenderly loved.

To expel mosquitoes, take of gum camphor a piece about one-third the size of a hen's egg, and evaporate it by placing it in a tin vessel and holding it over a lamp, taking care that it does not ignite. The smoke will soon fill the room and expel the mosquitoes, and they will not return, even though the windows should be left open all night.—Scientific American.

OH! MY HEAD!!

Suffering of a New Jersey Senator.—Dyspepsia, Sick Headache.—Terrible Things.

When the stomach is torpid it soon becomes clogged with half digested matters, the blood becomes vitiated and foul; the other organs fail to act normally, and induces a train of symptoms, such as dyspepsia, sick headache, dizziness, drowsiness, palpitation of the heart, pain in the back, loss of appetite.

"There are few things that I believe in with all my heart and it affords me pleasure to tell of one of them," The speaker was ex-Senator Albert Merritt, head of the large fruit firm, 83 Park Place, N. Y., and the scene his office. "I was sick and feared I had become fated to endure the

Tortures of Dyspepsia

and a dangerous affection of the kidneys. A relative said to me, 'Why don't you try Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y.' I did so. I grew steadily better. I could eat, digest, sleep and work with a clearer head, and the yellow color of my skin had given place to the tones that announce pure blood and every organ of the body in healthy action. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is entitled to the credit of saving my life. If any one has a doubt about the truth of my statements let him write to me. I can give you the names and addresses of fifty persons who affirm, as I do, that 'Favorite Remedy' has been to them a help and a blessing in time of need." Mr. A. DeRevere, Tarrytown, N. Y., says: "For a long time I was troubled with severe attacks of dizziness and due to impure blood and a disordered state of the system. I was advised to try Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. I did so and have been completely cured. It's the best thing I ever heard of for any disorder of that nature, and I have recommended it to many with like success." Mr. Daniel Fitts, Taunton, Mass., says: "I recommend Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy for dyspepsia and sick headache. I suffered for many years with these complaints, and was cured by Dr. Kennedy's

Blind Sick Headache

WHO WROTE "THE CHILDREN."

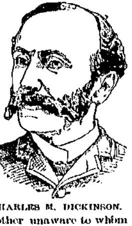
A Letter from the Son of Charles Dickens That Ends an Old Controversy.

There is scarcely a reader of English verse who has not read and admired the following poem, by Charles M. Dickinson, the editor of The Binghamton Republican. It has been printed again and again in American and English newspapers, in many school books, and in nearly all collections of verse. The poem has been invariably credited to the author in books, but for several years it has been widely printed in the newspapers over the name of Charles Dickens. Mr. Dickinson now gives to the public the following note from the son of the dead novelist:

Hotel Brunswick, New York,
Oct. 20, 1887.

Dear Sir—In reply to the letter which Mr. William Henry Smith has been good enough to forward to me, I willingly testify to the fact that the poem, "The Children," which has so often been erroneously attributed to my father, was not written by him; and that, far from having claimed it as his, I have written during the last seventeen years a large number of letters, and have many times inserted in my magazine, Household Words, answers to correspondents stating that the story about the poem having been found in my father's desk after his death was entirely apocryphal, and that I was altogether unaware to whom the credit of the authorship of the verses was due. I am, dear sir, faithfully yours,

Charles Dickens.



CHARLES M. DICKINSON.

Charles M. Dickinson, Esq., Daily Republican, Binghamton, N. Y.

Cassell & Co., New York, and Sampson Low, Marston & Co., London, have just issued a very handsome volume of Mr. Dickinson's hitherto unpublished verse. The poem, "The Children," over which there has been such a dispute, is as follows:

THE CHILDREN.

When the lessons and tasks are all ended,
And the school for the day is dismissed,
The little ones gather around me,
To bid me good night and be kissed;
Oh, the little white arms that encircle
My neck in their tender embrace!
Oh, the smiles that are halos of heaven,
Shedding sunshine of love on my face!

And when they are gone I sit dreaming
Of my childhood, too lovely to last—
Of joy that my heart will remember,
While it wakes to the pulse of the past;
Ere the world and its wickedness made me
A partner of sorrow and sin,
When the glory of God was about me,
And the glory of gladness within.

All my heart grows as weak as a woman's,
And the fountain of feeling will flow,
When I think of the paths steep and stony,
Where the feet of the dear ones must go—
Of the mountains of Sin hanging o'er them,
Of the tempest of Fate blowing wild—
Oh, there's nothing on earth half so holy
As the innocent heart of a child!

They are idols of hearts and of households;
They are angels of God in disguise;
His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses,
His glory still gleams in their eyes;
Those truants from home and from heaven—
They have made me more manly and mild;
And I know now how Jesus could liken
The kingdom of God to a child!

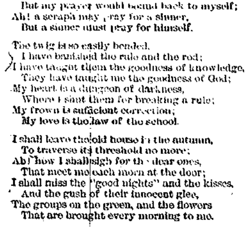
I ask not a life for the dear ones,
All radiant, as others have done,
But that life may have just enough shadow
To temper the glare of the sun;
I would pray God to guard them from evil,
But my prayer would bound back to myself;
Ah! a seraph may pray for a sinner,
But a sinner must pray for himself.

The twig is so easily bended,
I have banished the rule and the rod;
I have taught them the goodness of knowledge,
They have taught me the goodness of God;
My heart is a dungeon of darkness,
Where I shut them for breaking a rule;
My frown is sufficient correction;
My love is the law of the school.

I shall leave the old house in the autumn,
To traverse its threshold no more;
Ah! how I shall sigh for the dear ones,
That meet me each morn at the door;
I shall miss the "good nights" and the kisses,
And the gush of their innocent glee,
The groups on the green, and the flowers
That are brought every morning to me.

I shall miss them at morn and at even,
Their song in the school and the street;
I shall miss the low hum of their voices,
And the tread of their delicate feet.
When the lessons of life are all ended,
And death says, "The school is dismissed!"
May the little ones gather around me,
To bid me good night and be kissed!

The Virginia Railroad Accident.



The recent accident on the Norfolk and Western railroad in Richmond, in which a train ran into a wash out, was one of the most destructive to life and property of the year. The cut accompanying this is from a sketch made for The Philadelphia Press by George Masters, civil engineer, of Philadelphia, who was a passenger on the wrecked train.

Wonderful Popularity.

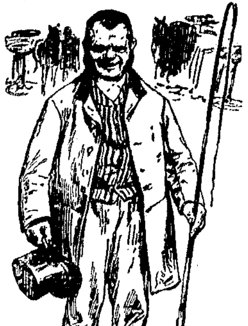
The fact that the sale of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets exceeds that of any other pill in the market, be it great or small, is on account of the fact that they are tiny, little, sugar-coated granules, and that in most cases one little "Pellet" is sufficient for a dose; that they are purely vegetable and perfectly harmless; and for constipation, billiousness, sick headache, and all diseases arising from derangement of the liver, stomach or bowels, they are absolutely a specific. A gentle laxative or active cathartic, according to size of dose.

ART AND NATURE IN PARIS

THE GREAT EXPOSITION NOW A WONDERFUL SUCCESS.

The Crowd Increasing Every Day—The Great Hall of Art—The Chinese Revive and Improve Their Manufacture of Colored Porcelain—All Races Represented.

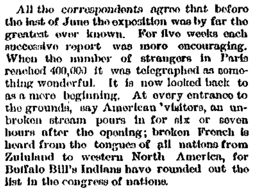
Paris is now only a lodging suburb—the real metropolis is the exposition grounds. Readers will remember that at the beginning Parisians, and especially government officials, were quite solicitous about the success of the great exhibit. The imperial governments of Europe were unfriendly, and Boulanger was agitating the people. Such fears seem laughable now. Germans, Austrians and Russians have come to Paris by tens of thousands, rather glad than otherwise that their governments have nothing to do with it, the great races drew a bigger crowd and there was more betting than ever before, the government is firm, and Boulanger is remembered only to be laughed at.



A STRIKING COACHMAN.

All the correspondents agree that before the last of June the exposition was by far the greatest ever known. For five weeks each successive report was more encouraging. When the number of strangers in Paris reached 400,000 it was telegraphed as something wonderful. It is now looked back to as a mere beginning. At every entrance to the grounds, say American visitors, an unbroken stream pours in for six or seven hours after the opening; broken French is heard from the tongues of all nations from Zululand to western North America, for Buffalo Bill's Indians have rounded out the list in the congress of nations.

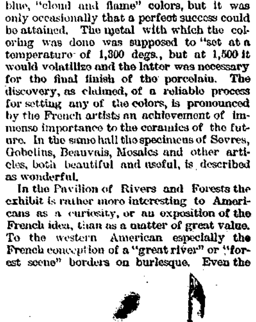
The great hall of decorative art is now complete in its sittings, and is, by common consent, the finest ever seen on earth. An enthusiastic artist in chinaware says a year would be scant time to study that section alone. The Chinese claim to have there some reproductions of what was once a lost art with them—the old style "clouded ware." For many years the Chinese artists produced a peculiar work, so rare and costly that it was used only by mandarins of a certain rank; but during the Tai-ping rebellion the rebels destroyed every vestige of the furnaces and shops, burned all the books in which the recipes were filed, and massacred without mercy every one of the working families in which the processes were handed down from father to son as family secrets.



PAVILION OF RIVERS AND FORESTS.

To restore this manufacture has been the ambition of the Chinese artists in that line. In 1884 they succeeded in making what is called the "new porcelaine," in red, white, blue, "cloud and flame" colors, but it was only occasionally that a perfect success could be attained. The metal with which the coloring was done was supposed to "set at a temperature of 1,300 degs., but at 1,500 it would volatilize and the latter was necessary for the final finish of the porcelain. The discovery, as claimed, of a reliable process for setting any of the colors, is pronounced by the French artists an achievement of immense importance to the ceramics of the future. In the same hall the specimens of Sevres, Gobelins, Beauvais, Mosaics and other articles, both beautiful and useful, is described as wonderful.

In the Pavilion of Rivers and Forests the exhibit is rather more interesting to Americans as a curiosity, or an exposition of the French idea, than as a matter of great value. To the western American especially the French conception of a "great river" or "forest scene" borders on burlesque. Even the French pictures in this line appear conventional. The non-artistic writer cannot tell what is lacking, but if one may so express it, the forest looks as if it were "dressed up to have its picture taken." It is worth noting, however, that the Parisian illustrated papers give some extremely realistic pictures of Buffalo Bill's "Injun Show." He is quite as great a favorite there as he was in London.



BRAZILIAN PAVILION.

The Mexicans, Brazilians and Chilians, indeed all the Spanish-Americans, appear to be making very creditable displays in the way of delicate silver work, saddlery and such ornaments as are made by hand. The chief feature of interest, however—the one point in which this exposition is immeasurably ahead of all previous ones—is the perfect panorama of nations. It is scarcely possible to search a geography and find a race or tribe but it has its representatives now in Paris. [illegible] most enlightened nations, if a people has any art it is always shown in close connection with its religion. Even the wildest Namyanger paints his god with a little finer finish than he does himself.

It is a sort of tradition with the coachmen of Paris that they are to strike, if at all, in the year of an exposition, and this year they struck with extraordinary vigor, but with rather poor success. They chose the moment when they thought themselves an absolute necessity and enforced their decree with military rigor. Here and there a "scab" or "blackleg," as he would be called in America, took a passenger, whereupon the strikers quietly stopped him in the street, cut his lines, assisted the passenger to alight and gently turned the vehicle on its side. But they don't allow that thing to go very far in Paris. Those who desired to go on their regular routes were protected in so doing and the rest soon had to come to terms.

In the meantime Parisians and visitors have amused themselves with all sorts of foreign vehicles. In the exposition grounds they have tested the Annamite voiture, the Japanese djinrickshah and the Chinese sedan chair, while in the streets they have heroically walked. A comparison with other capitals of Europe shows that the French coachmen are the best paid except those of London, so one may say that the net result of their strike was to leave everything as it was before, except that many foreigners were aggravated and the satirists of Paris had many a good laugh at them.

A FAMOUS EDUCATOR.

The Late Theodore Dwight Woolsey, Ex-President of Yale.

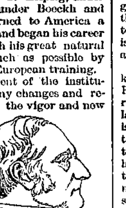
Three weeks before his death the late Theodore Dwight Woolsey slowly and painfully, and leaning heavily on the arm of his daughter, made a tour of Yale campus. He realized that the end was near, and gazed long and affectionately at the familiar college buildings wherein he had passed so many hours of his life, wherein he had achieved most of his many successes. A resume of his connections with the institution will be interesting.

In 1820 he graduated, and although he was only 18 years old, delivered the valedictory before the fifty-eight members of his class. Three years later he became a Yale tutor for two years. After three more years of absence he again returned to his alma mater and was chosen professor of the Greek language and literature. He held that chair for fifteen years, or until, in 1846, he was appointed president. For a quarter of a century he presided over the great institution. In 1871 advancing age caused him to resign, but he continued a member of the faculty.

Theodore Dwight Woolsey, D. D., LL.D., was born in New York city Oct. 31, 1801. His father, William W. Woolsey, was a prosperous merchant, and his mother, Elizabeth, was the daughter of President Timothy Dwight, of Yale, and granddaughter of President Edwards. Shortly after his graduation Mr. Woolsey began the study of law in New York, but without intending to take it up as a profession.

He then entered the Theological seminary at Princeton, N. J. It was 1825, however, when he was licensed to preach. In 1827 he went to Europe, where he remained for three years, staying most of the time in Germany and France. In Germany he devoted his time to bringing as near perfection as possible his already remarkable knowledge of the Greek language and literature, studying under Godfrid Hermann at Leipzig, under Welcker at Bonn, and under Boeckh and Ropp at Berlin. He returned to America a ripe and finished scholar, and began his career as a professor at Yale with his great natural abilities enhanced as much as possible by thorough American and European training.

After he became president of the institution he brought about many changes and reforms, and the effects of the vigor and new life which he infused into Yale will be apparent as long as the college exists. One of the most important acts of his administration was the beginning of a system by which scholarships were conferred upon those members of the freshman class who showed special ability. He gave $4,000 himself to establish four of these scholarships. During the first year of Mr. Woolsey's presidency a movement in behalf of special scientific instruction resulted in the establishment of the department of philosophy and the arts, in 1847. This led to the foundation of the Sheffield scientific school, and afterward in making a university of Yale. In 1865 President Woolsey originated a scheme for the organization of a Yale school of fine arts.



EX-PRESIDENT WOOLSEY.

In 1866 President Woolsey gave his Greek library, which comprised nearly 1,000 volumes and was one of the finest private collections in existence, to the college, and followed it by many other gifts, among them being a check for $8,000 toward the library building.

After his resignation, in 1871, Dr. Woolsey lived in New Haven, occasionally giving instruction in the Yale law school, but devoting most of his time to researches and studies, chiefly in political science. For several years he was one of the regents of the Smithsonian institution and was a member and chairman of the American division of the committee for the revision of the New Testament. In 1884 he resigned from the Yale corporation. He was at one time president of the American Home Missionary society.

Early in life Dr. Woolsey was favorably known by five excellent manuals, each containing the Greek text with his own English notes, of which there have been many editions prepared for the use of colleges in the United States. These are "The Alcestis of Euripides," (1834), "The Antigone of Sophocles," (1835), "The Prometheus of Aeschylus," (1837), "The Electra of Sophocles," (1837), "The Gorgias of Plato," (1843). In 1846 he published his inaugural discourse upon "College Education," in which he expatiated upon the value of a classical education. His next book contained the address which he delivered in 1850, which was 150 years after the founding of the college, before the Yale Alumni, entitled "Historical Discourse Upon Yale College."

His "Introduction to the Study of International Law," which was designed as an aid in teaching as well as in historical studies, was published in 1860. He was also author of many other writings.

A Modest Sensitive Woman

often shrinks from consulting a physician about functional derangement, and prefer to suffer in silence. This may be a mistakened feeling, but it is one which is largely prevalent. To all such women we would say that one of the most skillful physicians of the day, who has had a vast experience in curing diseases peculiar to women, has prepared a remedy which is of inestimable aid to them. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, and that it will give satisfaction in every case or money refunded. A BASTILE CENTENNIAL.

HOW THE 14TH OF JULY WILL BE CELEBRATED IN VARIOUS PLACES.

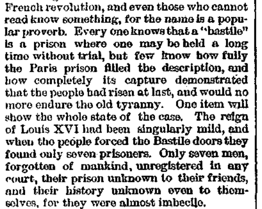
In France All Classes Join, but in New York the Anarchists Will Claim the Day. Frenchmen Generally Celebrate It as Independence Day.

This is indeed the year of centennials. It may be said in a broader sense that this is the era of centennials, beginning with that of the Declaration of American Independence, 1776, and ending with that (the Fourth) of the discovery of America in 1892. By an odd coincidence the momentous events appear to concentrate from both extremes towards the center of this era, but the year 1889 includes more noteworthy centennials, both in France and America, than any other in the century.

What a very remarkable year that of 1789 was. A devout mind might say that providence was instructing France and America that they should unite in the cause of freedom and good government. Early in the year the first president of the United States was elected and the royal mandates went out to collect the old French "parlement"—the states general, that had not met since 1614. April 6, the first American congress under the constitution met; April 30 George Washington was inaugurated; May 5 the states general met in Paris; June 20 to 25 the representatives of the French people declared against the king and the revolution began; July 4, the American congress passed its general revenue act, and July 14 the people of Paris stormed and captured the Bastile.

Wonderful year indeed. The United States is done centennializing for this time, and will not resume till 1892, but the French are but fairly begun, and the 14th of July is their grandest day. They have partially restored the old Bastile, as if for the pleasure of battering it again, but experience shows that it is difficult to maintain old national hatreds after all the old fears have passed away.

Of course all men of any reading whatever know a great deal about the Bastile and the French revolution, and even those who cannot read know something, for the name is a popular proverb. Every one knows that a "bastile" is a prison where one may be held a long time without trial, but few know how fully the Paris prison filled the description, and how completely its capture demonstrated that the people had risen at last, and would no more endure the old tyranny. One item will show the whole state of the case. The reign of Louis XVI had been singularly mild, and when the people forced the Bastile doors they found only seven prisoners. Only seven men, forgotten of mankind, unregistered in any court, their prison unknown to their friends, and their history unknown even to themselves, for they were almost imbecile.



THE BASTILE.

Consider, American reader, who thinks the French were unduly severe in their revolution, consider these cases: The first prisoner brought out was the Count de Solage, who did not know how old he was or what year it was, but distinctly remembered that he was 11 years old when first immured. And so it proved when a few surviving friends were found. The next man dragged to the light was Tavernier, who quivered like an aspen in the sunshine, covered his eyes and cried with pain. He could not speak—his tongue was atrophied for want of use. He could not understand what was said, it was so long since he heard words. He had spent thirty years in a dungeon of the Bastile, and before that ten years as a convict at the Marguerite islands, and no one knew his offense. The other five were "ordinary cases"—that is, they had suffered only a few years and could still talk and smile and understand what was said to them.

And this, be it noted, was but yesterday as it were, in an enlightened age, under the mild rule of that king who was the patron of Franklin, the admirer of Jefferson, the ally of Washington. It was in the reign of Louis XIV, and just previously that the Bastile was such a place of horror. And so well were its black secrets guarded that the horrors of it were not known till a short time before its destruction. The building was begun in 1369 by Charles V, and completed in succeeding reigns; it was situated at the gate St. Antoine and consisted of eight huge round towers connected by solid masonry. By degrees it became a sort of "catch all," a prison in which could be confined, by a mere order and without examination, any man suspected of treason, any enemy of any powerful courtier, any one who gave offense to or stood in the way of the powerful—in short, any one who could not be convicted in the regular courts.

July 14, 1789, it was garrisoned by a governor in command of eighty-two invalid soldiers and thirty-two Swiss when the people, who looked on it as the embodiment of arbitrary power, made their attack. The defense was not very vigorous and there was little loss of life. The next day the towers were rased and the lower dungeons filled with the debris.

The French are not the only ones to celebrate; the radicals in many parts of the world will jubilate and the Anarchists of the United States will "demonstrate." They propose on that day to hold in New York a grand anarchical congress and revolutionary centennial, and say that 15,000 Anarchists will be present. They expect to make a "red hot demonstration" and hint that they will make it unpleasant for those who interfere.

CHICAGO HAS 1,100,000.

Size and Population of the Annexed Districts—Marvelous Growth of Chicago—Site of a Fort in 1683—A Town in 1837—A City in 1840.

Chicago now claims to be the second city in the United States in population and the largest in area, and envious rivals say that if it had been a little more moderate in the annexing business it would still be behind Philadelphia, if not Brooklyn. And yet the recent annexations appear to be justified, for the suburbs annexed are continuous with Chicago proper, and their citizens voted to become Chicagoese by large majority. Nor is the addition so great, comparatively, as it seems. Here are the areas and population of the places annexed:

	Area Sq. Miles.	Population.
Hyde Park	48	73,000
Lake	36	85,000
Lake View	14	53,000
Jefferson	31	10,000
Cicero	2	1,000
Total annexed	131	220,000

THE NEW CHICAGO.

As Chicago previously covered 42½ square miles and had (they claim) 880,000 people, it follows that the present city covers 174½ square miles and has 1,100,000 people. Such is the "conservative estimate" of The Chicago Tribune, but more aggressive local papers put the total at 1,200,000. They at the same time estimate the population of Philadelphia at something less than a million, while the papers of the latter city raise this estimate 10 per cent and lower that of Chicago. As to Brooklyn all admit that its total does not greatly, if at all, exceed 800,000.

But in the matter of rapid growth, long sustained, Chicago so far exceeds all other cities, ancient or modern, that there is scarcely a basis for comparison. San Francisco grew much more rapidly for a short time, New York has maintained a steady growth for a much longer time, New Orleans had its great boom much earlier, and Philadelphia was much more solidly built from the start, but Chicago is the only city which has enjoyed a "phenomenal growth," right straight along for a third of a century. Not only did it increase every year, but since 1876 there has been a rapid increase in the percentage of increase—a constantly greater ratio on a constantly greater base. It was probably the only city in America which was proved by the exact Federal census to have more people in 1880 than its own sanguine boomers had claimed.

And yet it was a long while getting started on this phenomenal growth; there was a time when Calumet was its rival and Alton its superior, while Nauvoo laughed at the pretensions of all three of them. The first mention of the place was as "Fort Checagou," in 1683, and it remained a French trading post about ninety years. In 1804 the United States built Fort Dearborn there, and on Aug. 15, 1812, the garrison was massacred by the Pottawattomies. In 1816 the fort was rebuilt, and remained a post till 1837, and this fort created the germ village of the present Chicago. The town was organized Aug. 10, 1833, covering 560 acres and having 550 inhabitants and property valued at $60,000.

March 4, 1837, the place was incorporated as a city, having 4,170 people, and William B. Ogden as first mayor. In 1840 the federal census gave the city 4,853 people; 29,963 in 1850; 112,172 in 1860; 298,977 in 1870, and nearly twice as many in 1880. Nor is it easy to disprove the claim of the more enthusiastic that the per cent. of increase has been greater since the last census than ever before, for all the industries of the city indicate it. Though a vast army of builders push construction with Aladdin like rapidity, aided by the best appliances of modern engineering, they never succeed in outrunning the demand for stores and residences, and if there is a "strike in the building trades" even for a fortnight, there is a loud outcry that the existing accommodations are overcrowded, that the strike must be settled in some way and building resumed.

At each successive review of the city's growth since the revival of 1878–80 many of the cautious have said: "The maximum is reached; Chicago's day of rapid growth is over," yet the succeeding growth has been still more rapid. A few facts explain it. Take a radius of 800 miles and describe a semicircle from a point that far north of the city westward, southward and eastward again, and there will be an area of nearly a million square miles containing more raw material for the comfort and sustenance of man than any other equal area on the globe. Of over half this area Chicago is the natural gateway and entrepot; add its railway extensions into still more distant territory, and it does not seem unreasonable that the city should maintain its present rate of growth till the close of this century.

Most of the great cities of the country, however, cannot imitate Chicago's method of adding suddenly some 220,000 to their population. Natural boundaries forbid. New York city may grow a little more till she covers the remnant at the north end of Manhattan island, then she must stop—or grow up in the air, or dig deeper into the rock. Little by little, however, East river is being reduced from a combined obstruction and convenience to a convenience only, and when two additional bridges are built and a tunnel constructed, Brooklyn will be socially and commercially annexed, and the political tie will soon follow.

The growth of cities is the great latter day problem. The founders of the republic never imagined such aggregations as those already seen, and he would be a bold man who should say that either New York or Chicago (with annexed suburbs) would stop short of five or ten millions each, with St. Louis, Philadelphia and a few others lingering at from one to three millions each.

Melodious sounding electric whistles are a novelty, and are said to be taking the place of electric bells in France. The whistle is made by fitting a small brass tube with suitable apertures, so that it opens against the spring of a suitably formed communicator.

[THACKERAY.

THE representative of the negro race "Fred" Douglass who is familiar to people in Fulton and vicinity having delivered a political address here during the last Presidential campaign and previously, has been made Minister to Hayti. He is well fixed financially, his wealth being estimated at $300,000.

REPORT reaches this country of a terrible disaster near Kwanting, China in a which 6,000 lives were lost and 10,000 people rendered homeless and destitute. It was caused by the bursting of a waterspout, and the water in the flooded district was thirty-six feet deep. Will these floods ever end?

THERE seems to be a fatality connected with the name of Johnstown in regard to floods. The flood at Johnstown, N. Y., last week did $100,000 worth of damage to the town and five people are reported to be drowned. The water during the flood was six feet higher than it was ever know to be there before.

A COMBINE of the leading school book publishing houses in the United States has gone into effect. There is much that will probably follow in the track of this trust and when it becomes a monopoly the people who pay the exorbitant price will find a way to remedy the evil. School books should be as cheap as any class of publications.

FROM present indications Mr. Assemblyman Ainsworth, of the second Oswego district, will have a hard row to hoe if he succeeds in getting a renomination. Mr. Selleck of Williamstown is after the place and is hustling every day. Mr. Ainsworth is husbanding his strength and holding back for a final rush. The contest promises to be of the liveliest description.—Palladium.

ERICSSON'S REMAINS.—The Swedish Government has decided to send a man-of-war to New York to bring home the body of Captain Ericsson, who expressed a strong desire to be buried at Langbanshyttan, in Vermeland, the place of his birth. In his will no directions are given as to the disposal of his valuable collection of medals but Swedish journals state that the executors will present them to the Smithsonian Institution.—Nature (London.)

THE appointment of H. H. Lyman of Oswego to be Collector of the port of Oswego was made the latter matter part of last week. It had been generally conceded for some time that the choice would fall to Mr. Lyman although many held to the last the opinion that Senator Hiscock would insist on Mr. Howe's receiving it. The appointment meets with general favor among the active politicians of the county and it is almost universally acknowledged that the right man has been appointed.

Large quantities of wood ashes are going to waste at the Acid Factories in Sullivan and Delaware counties. The Agricultural Commissioners analysis show that these wood ashes are worth $7.53 per ton for a fertilizer, and the same can be purchased from these factories at a nominal charge. The farm lands in this section can be largely enhanced in value by the use of these ashes. It is estimated that 50 barrels put on three acres will show a productiveness continuing for twenty years, of at least 100 per cent. over lands not similarly treated. Farmers in this vicinity would do well to look into this matter, and give these ashes a trial.

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by Catarrh) that we cannot cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure.

MARY S. TUCKER, Omro, Wis.

Honor our brave defenders,
Heroes who wore the blue;
Valiant and firm and fearless,
Trusty and tried and true.
Never their footsteps faltered,
In the path where duty led;
Cheers for the soldier living!
Tears for the soldier dead!

Bright on the roll of honor,
Sacred be every name;
They who preserved the nation,
Won an undying fame.
Nobly they faced the danger,
Freely their blood was shed;
Cheers for the soldier living!
Tears for the soldier dead!

Whether they sail the ocean,
Or whether they walk the land;
Keep them, oh grateful Nation!
Safe in thy sheltered hand,
Never to lack for raiment,
Never to want for bread;
Care for the soldier living!
Honor for the soldier dead!

They haste to the final bivouac,
Like a swift out-flowing tide;
As the muster roll of the army,
Is called from the other side.
But high and wide in the heavens,
The banner they bore is spread;
Cheers for the solder living!
Tears for the soldier dead!

As long as we boast of freedom,
As long as the old flag waves,
A shrine for the loyal-hearted
Shall be our heroes' graves.
And tender tribute of flowers,
Garland each lowly bed;
Honor the soldier living!
Honor the soldier dead!

WASHINGTON, July 1[illegible], 1889.

The climate of Washington has again shamelessly disgraced us all, the thermometer recklessly plunging into the nineties. With few exceptions, the capital has been during the past week the hottest town in the United States. Those able to go, have made haste to leave the city. The President is numbered among the unfortunate, and will not be able to join his family at Deer Park before next week. The number of ultra fashionable people in official life that have followed the Harrison's to that charming mountain resort is surprising. Mrs. Commodore and Mrs. Rear-admiral that are there in full force. The Elkins family carriage is drafted into the service of Mrs. Harrison, and the babies and Rev. Mr. Scott, her father, and the schemes that the naughty spoilsman have concocted to get possession of the President when he goes to Deer Park are deep laid. The seat of government will practically be in the mountains for the next month.

During the Sullivan—Kilrain fight this week the departments were practically deserted by employes and the telegraph bulletin boards became the centers of attraction for everyone, high or low. Probably $15,000 changed hands here on the result, though no heavy gambling was done. Authentic news of the fight arrived about 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The excitement reminded one of that common a few years ago in receiving election returns from the October states. For some reason, the white house telegraph operator considerately remained on duty all the evening and his wire being in direct connection with the Western Union line bearing the news of the battle, he could not help receiving the account. Uncle Jerry Rusk innocently meandered over from his lonely quarters at the Ebbitt and Secretary Tracy also found business at the Executive Mansion. Secretary Noble, though the hour was rather unusual for a cabinet meeting in time of peace, somehow happened to drop in, and was shocked to hear that his colleagues were deep in the mysteries of the forty-fourth round. Post-master General Wanamaker was there, determined to see what brutes men can make of themselves. In fact the feeling throughout the city was one of intense interest. There was general satisfaction in the result, although Washington is so close to Baltimore that it was favorably influenced by the stories of Kilrain's wonderful staying qualities and thereby lost a neat little sum of money.

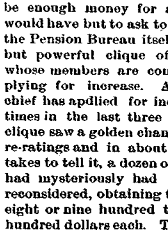
Commissioner Tanner is tasting the sorrows of official life. The inevitable reaction which follows a too pronounced success, has set in, and the Commissioner's life is not a happy one. The removal of his private secretary by Secretary Noble has been followed by an order from the Interior department prohibiting the promiscuous making of claims "special." This, in its turn, was followed during Mr. Tanner's absence on Monday, by the discharge of three members of the medical corps of the Pension Bureau. Commissioner Tanner refuses to acknowledge that his relations with the Secretary are strained or that these discharges are intended as a rebuke. One of the discharged employes, a Dr. Carpenter, alleges that he was discharged because he was too liberal in allowing big re-rating of pensions.

Re-rating as a system, was discovered by General Black as a very neat means of showing that former administrations had not dealt liberally with the soldier. These re-ratings were however not allowed to greatly deplete the Treasury by their size and were generally restricted to the doubtful states. They attained their greatest number during the campaign of last fall.

Corporal Tanner's accession to power was regarded by a vast number of ex-soldiers as an unalloyed blessing. The cry was "the old flag and appropriations." There was to be enough money for all, and one would have but to ask to receive. In the Pension Bureau itself is a small but powerful clique of pensioners whose members are continually applying for increase. An assistant chief has apdlied for increase seven times in the last three years. This clique saw a golden chance to obtain re-ratings and in about the time it takes to tell it, a dozen of the crowd had mysteriously had their claims reconsidered, obtaining thereby from eight or nine hundred to thirty-five hundred dollars each. They literally passed on the merits of each others claims. The game finally attracted the attention of the Secretary, with the result described.

The muttered threats heard against the Secretary, from a small circle of these people, he does not heed.

Hon. Charles L. Knapp.



CHARLES L. KNAPP.

The Hon. Charles L. Knapp, who was recently appointed consul general from the United States to the dominion of Canada, was born in Harrisburg, Lewis county, N. Y., and is about 41 years old. He was graduated from Rutgers college, New Brunswick, N. J.; also from the law school of Hamilton college. Since 1873 he has practiced law with good results. In 1886-87 he was a member of the New York state senate, and took an active part in the campaigns of 1884 and 1886, being a very good stump speaker. The diplomatic relations of the United States and Canada are carried on through the foreign office in London. Still Mr. Knapp will have plenty to do and many delicate matters to attend to, all the way from the seizure of fishing vessels up to the extradition of criminals.

There was a [illegible] meeting held at our Town Hall Tuesday July 9, to consider the expediency of forming a Presbyterian society and building a church. The sentiment was favorable. The meeting adjourned four weeks.

Miss Minnie Kenyon of this town sued Trustee Mellan of Kasoag for teacher's wages and the suit was tried here Tuesday of last week. The Justice took ten days to decide. It is an important and unlucky suit, and when it is decided we will give THE TIMES some particulars of the suit.

Hon. Willard Johnson of Fulton has been in our place several times of late. He had supposed our type writer factory had collapsed but on visiting it he decided otherwise. It is a factory the county of Oswego has reason to be proud of and it will not be a great while before some of the best writers made will come from this factory. It is universally the case that type writer factories are slow in developement—most of them five years or upwards.

We learn that our teachers are engaged for the coming year. Prof. E. E. Scribner is principal, he was educated at the Oswego Normal school and Cornell university. Miss Alma Blanchard a graduate of the classical department of Cortland Normal school is the preceptress. Our faculty will be an able one.

R. H. Avery of Hastings died last Saturday. He is a brother of Judge Avery of Phœnix and a very excellent citizen.

Last fall the Presbyterian society of Hastings elected three persons for trustees and since that time two of them have died, Messers. Sill and Avery, and one left.

Circulars and invitations are being sent all over the country inviting all the Palmers in the world and all descendents of Palmers to a Palmer reunion to be held at Stonington, Conn. Sept. 4-5, 1889. This appears to be the place where the Palmers first settled in this country. The Palmers are quite a noted race. Perhaps there is no other name that has so many clergymen and deacons as they have. It will be a good time to see all the Palmers to-gether. Elisha H. Palmer of Montville, Conn. is the president and Noyes F. Palmer of Brochfort, N. Y. secretary to whom communications can be addressed.

BUFFALO IN MID-SUMMER.

THE HOTEL MEN'S CONVENTION AND A BIG RACING EVENT.

Our Correspondent "Vindex" Stumbles Upon a Prize Fighter and a Giant in the Queen City—All Manner of Attractions Promised at the International Fair.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

BUFFALO, July 16.—The city is full of hotel men. They have been pouring in from all parts of the state for the last twenty-four hours to attend the New York Hotel-men's Association convention, which was called to order in Concert Hall at 11 o'clock this morning.

Nobody knows just what revolutionary action, if any, these gentlemen who hold the keys to the comfort of a very large portion of the traveling public in the hollows of their hands, propose to take, but from the significant gleam in the eyes of Boniface Ashman of the Sinclair House, New York city, and other delegates, as they stepped from the train last evening, it is evident that something of much importance is to be sprung upon the convention.

Mr. Press Whitaker of the Mansion house intimates that the main effort of the convention will be to fix a precise and unchangeable date upon which strawberries shall be served in shortcake, there being a ruinous tendency on the part of some hotels in the eastern portion of the state to begin the service of this delicacy before the frost is out of the ground.

The popular belief that a hotel register is the unfailing index of the guests of the house is some times erroneous, as was made evident at the Mansion House in this city on Sunday evening when a gentleman whose shoulders were about a yard wide, whose black hair was closely cropped, and whose hands were about the color of raw beef, swaggered into the supper room and took a seat at a conspicuous table. The name of the individual appeared on the hotel register Rev. Edmund Edwards of Westminster, Eng., but he hadn't got as far as the third bite in his piece of broiled white fish before the news had spread through the dining room that his name was Charley Mitchell of England. It was indeed the pugnacious companion of Kilrain and erst while plaything of John L. Sullivan. He had arrived in Buffalo suddenly from the Canadian border and was bent upon smuggling himself in cog. to New York, from which point, he announced, he would take the first steamer for the other side. He left here on the evening train, accompanied to the depot by an admiring throng. Great indeed is the glory of a prize fighter in this generation.

One of the characters of Buffalo who seldom makes himself visible on the streets, but is nevertheless actively engaged in that line of business most commonly affected by New York aldermen, is an individual known as Col. Cooper. The peculiarity of this gentleman is that he is seven feet eight inches in height. It is commonly reported that on more than one occasion people of temporarily disordered nerves, who have accidently strayed into Col. Cooper's "place" on Main street, have been so startled at the extraordinary spectacle of this human telescope unfolding itself, as to flee from the sight in terror. When the Colonel sits at his bar he has the appearance of an ordinary sized man with an abnormally large head, his nose being about four inches in length. When he rises to wait on a customer he seems to come up from the cellar, and before the startled customer knows what has happened, a gruff voice from the region of the roof roars down the inquiry as to what he will have. This Col. Cooper is a retired member of the Congress of Giants, which Barnum carried around the country a few years ago. He has taken up his abode here permanently with his equally distinguished wife who was formerly the $10,000 prize beauty of circus fame.

The sight of this retired giant, if I may use that expression, bending himself nearly double to get into a barber shop this morning, recalls an announcement which I have recently seen to the effect that there are to be a curious lot of human beings on exhibition at the International Fair this year. I don't mean freaks or people of the dime museum order, but genuine representatives of remote and unfamiliar tribes. For example there is to be a band of Fijiis, some Hottentots, Samoans and a most interesting quartette of musical Gautemalians. I once had the pleasure of listening to this Gautemalian orchestra and I have never forgotten it. The instruments (or rather the instrument, for they all perform on a single contrivance) upon which they play, was called, if I remember correctly, an "ahmiramba." I never saw or heard anything like it before or since. It is built upon the patern of a xylophone, but it is about ten feet long and is at least three feet deep at one end. From this peculiarly constructed affair these native Gautemalians, by the use of drum sticks produce a volume of sound which is simply astonishing and really beautiful. There is nothing of the tom-tom order about their music. They play a class of melodies which I should say were of Spanish origin and which are simply captivating.

I was talking with the Secretary of the Fair the other day and asked him if it were not rather a new departure for an Exposition such as is held here, to go into this line of attractions. His reply was to the point. "Our aim," said he, "is to have something to amuse and instruct all possible varieties of visitors. A fair which is simply agricultural and industrial does not meet our requirements. We propose to have an exposition of as many curious, amusing and instructive features as it is possible to obtain, and while we are giving even more attention than we did last year to the live stock exhibition, we are branching out in every other direction as well."

The inventors' exhibition, about which I hope to tell you at length in a subsequent letter, promises to be a most deeply interesting feature of the Fair. What could possibly be more interesting than a comprehensive collection of curious patented models in operation. Already the ambitious inventors who hope some day to harness the power of Niagara to the uses of manufacture are, I am told, applying in large numbers for space along the banks of the miniature Niagara river, which is to be constructed on the Fair grounds. This river is to be several feet wide and will obtain its rapid current from a supply of water in a huge elevated reservoir.

Just at present the chief topic of interest in Buffalo, not only among the lovers of horse flesh but among the public at large, is the great race between the two leading lights of the Wilkes and Almont families, which it is reported will occur during the grand circuit meeting here in August. Harry Wilkes and Belle Hamlin have been matched to trot the race, and although I cannot find out that it has been absolutely settled that this important event will take place here, the indications are that the Buffalo Driving Park will be selected as the place for this great contest. I will doubtless be able in my next letter to give you positive information on this point. If the race is trotted here, hotel men predict that the crowds in Buffalo will be almost as great as they were during the Fair last year. There is no doubt that there is a great public interest in the question of superiority between the Wilkes and Almont strains of blood, and horsemen will be attracted here from all parts of the country. Indications are that Buffalo is going to have a very lively season.

David Ramsden Dead.

We regret to learn of the decease of David Ramsden. He was for years a leading factor in Fulton's growth. He came here as superintendent of the Oswego Falls Woolen Mills after the sale of the Sprague estate and after they had been idle for some time. It was through his able management that these mills made large money and were able to double and treble their capacity. His strict business principles and warm heart made him loved and respected by his employees and associates. All who knew him here will feel sorrow at his death.

He died at 175 Sigourney street Hartford Conn., Thursday, July 11, 1889 in his 81st year. He was a native of Bradford, England.

Against the R. W. & O.

ALBANY, July 10.—The State board of railroad commissioners to-day in the complaint of J. Hoose of Mexico, Oswego county, against the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad company decided that the road's proportion of the through rate on cheese from Mexico to Philadelphia, Pa., via Syracuse, should not be greater than its local rate on cheese from Mexico to Syracuse. They also decided that its proportion by the through rates should be the same whether cheese should be shipped to New York or Philadelphia.

From "The Society" a London publication we find an account of a benevolent entertainment given recently at the Hospital of Paralysis Soho-square, London for the enjoyment of the sufferers of that institution. Among those that took part were M. du Chaillu the well-known African traveller who related some interesting reminiscences of his discovery of the gorilla. Miss Leigh, an actress who has achieved considerable fame in this country, recited several selections and Miss Clara Conger formerly of this village sang exquisitely a bolero and "Una Voce" by Rossini. Miss Conger made her debut as a public singer in opera in Italy last season and is achieving considerable success in this as she also has in her painting.

Oswego County Crops.

The following is the special crop report for Oswego county sent out from Washington Monday:

The acreage of wheat is small, but the crop is looking well. Oats are in good condition on high land, but on wet ground there is only half a crop Some potatoes have been replanted and are now up and ready for hoeing; they are looking finely. The weather has been favorable for curing the hay, which has bottomed up well and is being cured in good condition. The crop is heavy and of very good quality. All hoed crops show a decided improvement since last week, but the condition of tree fruits remains about the same. The apple crop will be from one-half to three-fourths short. Cherries are rotting badly. Red raspberries and black caps will be marketed the coming week. Grapes are growing well, but are late. Potato bugs are numerous.

In his remarks he made but a passing reference to his absence and it is probable that his work as pastor will be resumed.

A gentleman calling one morning last week on one of our well-known lawyers, at his rooms on First Street, expressed his astonishment at his choosing so unpleasant a situation. 'Why?' added he, 'you have no prospect whatever.' 'No prospect!' rejoined the lawyer, jumping up to the window; 'come here, my boy; and I'll show you a most delightful prospect' The lawyer then pointed to A. Norman D. Knight Commits Suicide.

The badly decomposed body of a man was found on the bank of the Mohawk river in Utica, Saturday forenoon. From appearances it was evident he had been there some time. Two bottles were found in his pockets, one labeled poison and the other morphine. The body is undoubtedly that of Norman D. Night, of Fulton, Oswego county. The man was not drowned, but came to his death from poison, probably self administered. He was released from the asylum July 4th, against the advice of the physicians, but upon a bond executed by his friends for his care and safekeeping.—Associated Press Dispatch.

Norman D. Knight was a native of Dexterville, but about three years ago bought the Leston LaDu farm near the Cone school house on the Whitaker road, in Volney which he owned at his death. His wife is the well known spiritualist.

Teachers' Classes.

Last year there were about 150 schools appointed in the state to form and give instruction to teachers' classes. This year there are but 58. Fulton Academy is among the number having received the notification of its appointment yesterday. Phœnix is the only other place in the county that was favored. Sandy Creek, Pulaski, Mexico, Central Square and Parish that last year were favored are out this year. The instruction of teachers' classes brings quite a revenue to the school that is appointed, a certain amount being received from the state for each person that joins the class.

This year examinations for second grade teachers' certificates will include methods as given in the teachers' class.

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self destruction. We know of no remedy for dyspepsia more successful than Hood's Sarsaparilla. It acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, tones the stomach and other organs, removes the faint feeling, creates a good appetite, cures headache, and refreshes the burdened mind. Give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial. It will do you good.

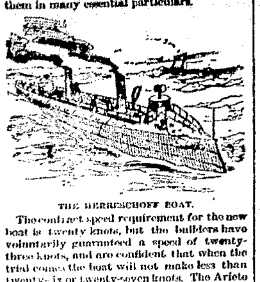
UNCLE SAM'S NEW TORPEDO BOAT.

It Is Being Built by the Herreschoffs at Bristol, R. I.—Description.

The torpedo boat which the Herreschoffs, of Bristol, R. I., are building for the United States government is not like any other vessel in Uncle Sam's fleet. It is, to a certain extent, similar to the Ariete type of torpedo boats turned out by Messrs. Thornycroft & Co., of England, although it differs from them in many essential particulars.



THE HERRESCHOFF BOAT.

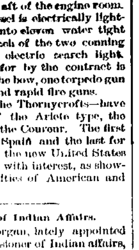
The contract speed requirement for the new boat is twenty knots, but the builders have voluntarily guaranteed a speed of twenty-three knots, and are confident that when the trial comes the boat will not make less than twenty-six or twenty-seven knots. The Ariete made twenty-six knots on her first official trip.

The American boat is of less draught and less length than her English built prototype, but her tonnage displacement is 99 tons, to the Ariete's 98.75 tons. This means that while she is smaller than the Ariete, her hold upon the water will be a trifle greater than the English built boat's.

The Herreschoff boat is of the deep sea type, has twin screws, and her dimensions are follows: Length, 138 feet; breadth, 15 feet; depth, 10 feet; draught, 4 feet 8 inches; displacement, 99 tons. The horse power is estimated at 165. The engines in developing this power will to make from 300 to 350 revolutions a minute. The shafts are 5½ inches in diameter and solid. The coal capacity 25 tons, with not an inch for a spare bag. Her engines are of the fine cylindered quadrupled expansion type; her two boilers are of the latest Herreschoff pattern and protected by coal bunkers fore and aft of the engine room. The interior of the vessel is electrically lighted and she is divided into eleven water tight compartments. In each of the two conning towers is a powerful electric search light. The armament called for by the contract is two torpedo tubes in the bow, one torpedo gun aft, and three 37 pound rapid fire guns.

The English firm—the Thornycrofts—have built three boats of the Ariete type, the Ariete, the Rayo and the Couronr. The first two were built for Spain and the last for France. The trials of the new United States vessel will be watched with interest, as showing the relative abilities of American and English builders.

Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

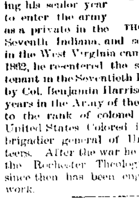


THOMAS J. MORGAN.

Gen. Thomas J. Morgan, lately appointed United States commissioner of Indian affairs, has always identified himself closely with the Indian work. He has been a professor in an Indian college, and during the past five years has been principal of the Rhode Island State Normal school at Providence.

He was born in Franklin, Ind., August, 1839. He entered Franklin college, but left during his senior year to enter the army as a private in the Seventh Indiana, and served three months in the West Virginia campaign. In August, 1862, he re-entered the service as first lieutenant in the Seventieth Indiana, commanded by Col. Benjamin Harrison. He served three years in the Army of the Cumberland, rising to the rank of colonel of the Fourteenth United States Colored infantry and brevet brigadier general of United States volunteers. After the war he was graduated from the Rochester Theological seminary, and since then has been engaged in educational work.

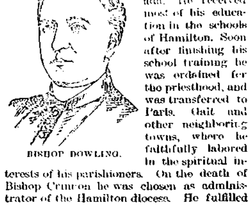
Bishop of Hamilton.



BISHOP DOWLING.

The Right Reverend Dr. T. J. Dowling is the new Catholic Bishop of Hamilton, Ont., who was removed from Peterboro to Hamilton after the death of Dr. Carberry. He was born in the town of Newcastle West, County Limerick, Ireland. He left his native land with his parents, when a mere boy, and went to Canada. He received most of his education in the schools of Hamilton. Soon after finishing his school training he was ordained for the priesthood, and was transferred to Paris, Galt and other neighboring towns, where he faithfully labored in the spiritual interests of his parishioners. On the death of Bishop Crinnon he was chosen as administrator of the Hamilton diocese. He fulfilled the duties of this office with care and zeal, and remained in this position until the appointment of the late Dr. Carberry as bishop took place. After the death of Bishop Jamot, the Catholics of Peterboro being left without a leading ecclesiastic, he received noteworthy distinction by being elevated to that post of honor. Wherever he has labored, priests and people alike have learned to love and admire him for his many ennobling qualities and his labor in their behalf.

The Great Pennsylvania Flood Explained.



This topographical map was furnished by the Pennsylvania state weather service, and it shows where the rainfall was unprecedented forty-eight hours before the flood.

In the black districts the rainfall exceeded eight inches in places.

The check lines cover the district in which the rainfall was from four to seven inches.

The diagonal lines denote a rainfall of from one to four inches in the districts so marked.

In the counties printed in white, including the entire eastern part of the state, the rainfall was less than one inch, showing how Philadelphia entirely escaped the flood, which was heaviest in the valleys of the Susquehanna and Conemaugh rivers.—Philadelphia Press.

He was gazetted secretary of legation to Florence in 1870, and was transferred to Rome when the capital of Italy was changed. Before leaving Rome for the United States M. The TORTURES OF DESPAIR

Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.

Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?

Because they have never discovered the right thing!

Have they tried?

Yes, for hundreds of years.

But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.

Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."

The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."

A SAMPLE

of these wonderful Powders will be sent Free to any sufferer from this terrible affliction, or they can be procured of all reputable druggists at 25 cents a box.

Will deliver free of charge, show cards and samples to any druggist who will keep the card in his window and give the samples to the most desperate cases.

The Old Sexton.

Nigh to a grave that was newly made
Leaned a sexton old on his earth-worn spade;
His work was done and he paused to wait
The funeral train through the open gate.
A relic of by-gone days was he,
And his locks were white as the foamy sea;
And these words came from his lips so thin:
"I gather them in, I gather them in."

"I gather them in! for man and boy,
Year after year of grief and joy:
I've builded their houses that lie around,
In every nook of this burial ground.
Mother and daughter, father and son,
Come to my solitude one by one;
But come they strangers, or come they kin,
"I gather them in, I gather them in."

"Many are with me, but still I'm alone,
I'm king of the dead—and I make my throne
On a monumental slab of marble cold,
And my sceptre of rule is the spade I hold.
Come they from cottage, or come they from hall,
Mankind are my subjects—all, all, all;
Let them loiter in pleasure or toilfully spin,
"I gather them in, I gather them in."

"I gather them in—and their final rest
Is here, down here in the earth's dark breast."
And the sexton ceased, for the funeral train
Wound mutely over that solemn plain;
And said to my heart when time is old,
A mightier voice than that sexton's old
Will sound o'er the last trump's dreadful din,
"I gather them in, I gather them in."

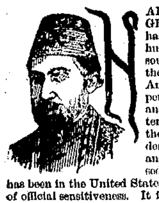
THE REVIVAL OF PERSIA.

HADJI HASSEIN GHOOLI KHAN'S MISTAKES ABOUT AMERICA.

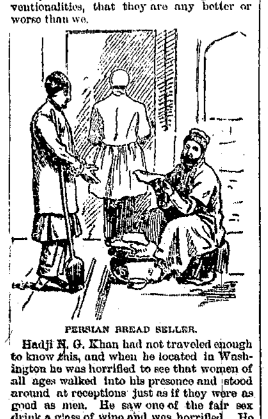
Persia Has Been a Great Nation at Three Different Eras and May Soon Be Again. The People Are Aryan or Caucasian, and Furnish and Interesting Study.



HADJI HASSEIN GHOOLI KHAN has gone home in a huff. His sensitive soul could not bear the remarks of the American newspapers on his serene and sublime master, the shah. Since the days of President John Adams and the "alien and sedition laws" there has been in the United States no parallel case of official sensitiveness. It is well, therefore, to inquire who Hadji and-so-forth is, what he is vexed about, what the shah is liable to do about it and what sort of a country Persia is, to the end that we may know what damage the shah could do the Yankees if that way inclined.

Hadji Hassein Ghooli Khan is the late Persian minister to Washington. He is a man of wealth, learning and refinement, as refinement goes in Persia, and among Orientals was considerable of a personage; but he had had no experience in the social life of western nations, and, like too many travelers, he undertook to measure the morals of America by Persian standards. Americans, and still more Englishmen, make this mistake so constantly that they should be charitable to H. H. G. Khan.

Let us illustrate. If the average modest man from Ohio, for instance, should go to Japan and see whole families and neighborhoods bathing together in nature's costume, his first impression would be that the Japanese were licentious barbarians; but he would be wrong. And in general it does not follow because a people wear but a single garment, or are total abstainers from intoxicants, or veil their women, or disregard conventionalities, that they are any better or worse than we.

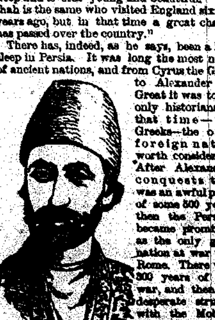


PERSIAN BREAD SELLER.

Hadji H. G. Khan had not traveled enough to know this, and when he located in Washington he was horrified to see that women of all ages walked into his presence and stood around at receptions just as if they were as good as men. He saw one of the fair sex drink a glass of wine and was horrified. He met some of them in "decollete" costume at a reception and went home sick. He asked his interpreter what these indignities meant, and that official intimated that the Americans had not shown him any of their "good women." It appears that he acted on this theory at the next reception and—well, he was suddenly undeceived.

About this time the shah of Persia, Nasr-ed-Deen, entered Europe, and the papers described him as he was on his former visit. Hadji H. G. Khan could not stand that, and so he has gone home. Americans who have resided in Persia fear serious consequences. They intimate that Americans may be expelled from Persia, and that the missionaries there may have to stop their work; but Englishmen, much better acquainted with the country, say nothing of the sort will happen, because Persia has improved wonderfully in the last twenty years. "The sleeping beauty," says Cecil Smith in The London Graphic, "is rubbing her eyes after her long sleep and is still young and beautiful. This shah is the same who visited England sixteen years ago, but in that time a great change has passed over the country."

There has, indeed, as he says, been a long sleep in Persia. It was long the most noted of ancient nations, and from Cyrus the Great to Alexander the Great it was to the only historians of that time—the Greeks—the only foreign nation worth considering. After Alexander's conquests there was an awful pause of some 500 years; then the Persians became prominent as the only great nation at war with Rome. There were 300 years of this war, and then the desperate struggle with the Mohammedans began. All this time, be it noted, the Persians were Aryans—some people prefer the word "Caucasians"—that is, they were of the same general stock of "white folks" as the Greeks, Romans, Germans, English, etc. But are they now?

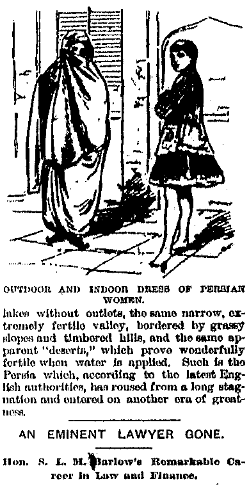


A SECRETARY.

Well, the last English inquirers agree that in the south and center the Persians are still chiefly of the race of Cyrus and Darius; but in the north the Tartar blood has prevailed. "The truest type," says Cecil Smith, "is found in Fars, and a handsome type it is, [illegible] and Darius had come to life, so little has this type changed. * * * In many respects the Persians are totally unlike Orientals—that is, such Orientals as the wild Hindoo and the unspeakable Turk. * * * They are of a restless, active disposition, and their culture, intelligence and imagination have earned them the title of the 'Frenchmen of the East.'"

In other words they are "white folks just like we 'uns, except that they are not well bred up yet." The Mohammedan invasion did not exterminate the people; most of them accepted the new faith; those who could not—a select few—are known as Parsees, and have largely emigrated to India. The sad, lovely narration by Tom Moore—"The Fire Worshippers"—is historically correct, but the great Tartar invasions of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries practically rooted out the Aryans of the north. In the Eighteenth century the Afghans overran the country and their rule was horrible, but the present dynasty is substantially Turcoman—that is to say, Tartar. The prevailing faith is Mohammedan, but there are large local populations of Nestorian Christians and the American missionaries, of the Presbyterian board, are assigned to duty with these. Their principal seats are at Urumiah and Tabriz.

In the old caravan days Persia was a central land; modern traffic has left it to one side, and the peculiar topography has aided to isolate it. On all sides it is walled by lofty mountains, and so the interior is a great plain, from 2,000 to 6,000 feet above the sea, with many lower valleys and fertile slopes. In general formation it is wonderfully like Utah territory—the same interior basins and lakes without outlets, the same narrow, extremely fertile valley, bordered by grassy slopes and timbered hills, and the same apparent "deserts," which prove wonderfully fertile when water is applied. Such is the Persia which, according to the latest English authorities, has roused from a long stagnation and entered on another era of greatness.



OUTDOOR AND INDOOR DRESS OF PERSIAN WOMEN.

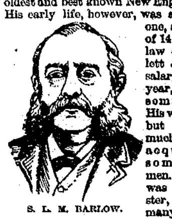
AN EMINENT LAWYER GONE.

Hon. S. L. M. Barlow's Remarkable Career in Law and Finance.

Samuel Latham Mitchell Barlow, recently deceased in New York, was long the equal of the late Leonard Swett in his perfect mastery of special lines of law, and even exceeded Mr. Swett in the number of enormous fees received. He fell far behind him, however, in brilliant successes with bad cases, and lost heavily by swindles. Indeed, it would be hard to find another instance of so acute a lawyer so thoroughly swindled by men of intellect far inferior to his own.

On the one hand he gained an international reputation by organizing and directing the "Erie revolution" and overthrow of Jay Gould and successful management of the "French arms" case, and on the other he lost, it is said, half a million dollars by the great diamond fraud of a decade or so ago, and his death was hastened by the Bedell forgeries, which caused his firm a loss of about a quarter of a million dollars. On many occasions he received fees in excess of $20,000 in a single case, and in more than one speculation lost much larger sums. His fortune, however, is estimated at $3,000,000, and he was quite liberal in all the walks of life. He was a rather prominent man in society, was noted as an epicure and giver of good dinners, had a splendid home at Twenty-third street and Madison avenue and a very costly library and art collection.

He was born June 5, 1826, at Granville, Mass., being descended from some of the oldest and best known New England families. His early life, however, was a rather hard one, and at the age of 14 he entered the law office of Willett & Greig, at a salary of $52 per year, "payable semi-annually." His work was hard, but he learned much and made the acquaintance of some prominent men. Among these was Daniel Webster, who spent many hours talking with the office boy. He was admitted to the bar before coming of age, and soon made money. The railroad fever of 1852-56 seized on the country, and in one year Mr. Barlow made $50,000. Thereafter he dealt only with large cases. From the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad company he received fees exceeding $30,000. He reconciled the interests of Aspinwall and Vanderbilt in the Nicaragua and Panama business; they united, the stock at once rose above par, and they each paid him $5,000.



S. L. M. BARLOW.

At the close of the Franco-Prussian war Commodore Garrison held $1,600,000 worth of arms for the French, which their new government refused to accept. Mr. Barlow sent an agent to Paris and secured the sale and payment, for which he received $25,000. His greatest feat, however, was the expulsion of Jay Gould from the control of the Erie railway, Mr. Barlow being employed by the English stockholders. It was in fact a forcible revolution; the Barlow forces held the Grand Opera house by arms against the courts, then in the interest of the other party, till the people declared against the courts, and Gould compromised by paying $9,000,000.

All this time Mr. Barlow was tolerably active in politics as a Democrat, but held no political office. He was at various times in law partnership with Jeremiah Larocque and his son Joseph, with ex-Judge Shipman, ex-Judge Choate and others not so well known. In nearly all his interests he was very successful, which makes the fact of his losses by swindles the more remarkable. Last autumn James E. Bedell, real estate clerk of the firm of which Mr. Barlow was a member, swindled them heavily by means of forged mortgages. Mr. Barlow, then in delicate health, was completely prostrated by the trouble and never recovered.

Aiding Agriculture.

Sir John Bennett Lawes, the eminent agricultural scientist, of Rothamsted, has, it is stated, completed arrangements for bequeathing to the cause of agricultural science the sum of £100,000, together with fifty acres of land and the laboratory and museum at Rothamsted. In the latter are stored more than 45,000 bottles of experimentally grown produce, of animal products and of soils. The income of the fund will be handed over to a committee of nine persons, including the owner of Rothamsted for the time being.—Science.

Impurities of the blood often cause great annoyance at this season; Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and cures all such affections.

A ROYAL FARMER.

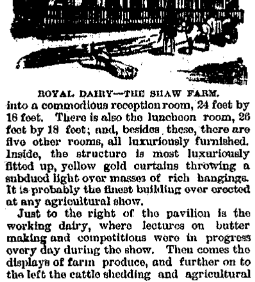
THE INTEREST QUEEN VICTORIA TAKES IN AGRICULTURE.

The Queen's Two Farms in the Great Windsor Park—The Finest Dairy in the World—Recent Exhibition of the Royal Agricultural Society.

The great interest which Queen Victoria has in agriculture is undoubtedly due in a great measure to the influence of the prince consort. When the German prince married Queen Victoria he brought to England a mind devoted to the interests of science, and it is well known that his experiments in agriculture and other useful arts have been a great aid to England. One of the most noteworthy of his plans had its outcome in the two great farms, which together occupy 1,120 acres of the great Windsor park, just outside of London and adjoining Windsor castle. These farms, which are called respectively the Shaw and Flemish farms, have been attracting much attention lately in England, owing to the Royal Agricultural show which was recently held in the great park. This year the queen is president of this society, which dates back for fifty years, and this has attracted throughout her majesty's dominions attention to the fact that the queen is a farmer—not only that, but she is declared to have the finest farms in the world.

This year's exhibit is the largest ever known. The show embraced everything which comes under the head of agriculture. The Great Windsor park is a beautiful place to visit. The long drive goes directly through the two farms and the show grounds adjoined, occupying 125 acres. From different parts of the grounds, where the sight is not obstructed by the trees, a magnificent view of Great Windsor castle is obtained. The show was arranged in the shape of a fan. Entering the handle of the fan, to carry out the illustration, the first thing which presented itself was the great seed department. Passing this and following the main road is the Queen's pavilion. The pavilion is a tastefully designed structure built for the use of her majesty and the royal family. The building has a frontage of 64 feet and a depth of 54 feet.

In the front is a fine porch, over which was a panel containing the royal arms of England, handsomely executed. At the sides are verandas, from which her majesty can obtain views of the show in every direction. The porch leads into the hall, and the hall into a commodious reception room, 24 feet by 16 feet. There is also the luncheon room, 26 feet by 18 feet; and, besides these, there are five other rooms, all luxuriously furnished. Inside, the structure is most luxuriously fitted up, yellow gold curtains throwing a subdued light over masses of rich hangings. It is probably the finest building ever erected at any agricultural show.



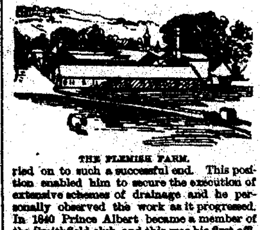
ROYAL DAIRY—THE SHAW FARM.

Just to the right of the pavilion is the working dairy, where lectures on butter making and competitions were in progress every day during the show. Then comes the displays of farm produce, and further on to the left the cattle shedding and agricultural implements.

In addition to the $60,000 given by the Royal Agricultural society for prizes the queen gave gold medals for the best stallions and mares exhibited and for the best bred animals in the first classes, and a gold medal for butter making. The queen herself had four entries of horses, seventeen of cattle and three of pigs, and took several prizes. The Prince of Wales had eleven entries of horses, thirteen of cattle and eight of Southdown sheep. Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, whose name appears as an exhibitor for the first time, sent four pens of pigs from Cumberland lodge, and among the other exhibitors of horses are Prince Henry of Battenborg, who sends two ponies picked up in the Pyrenees during the queen's recent visit to Biarritz.

It will be seen from this brief description that the show was a big one; indeed, it is claimed to be the largest agricultural show ever known, there having been exhibited no less than 1,637 cattle, of which 434 were Jerseys and 222 shorthorns. Let us now pass from the show grounds and take a look at the queen's farms.

Soon after his marriage the prince consort began to turn his attention to the farming operations at Windsor, in reality himself becoming their tenant, and when the rangership of Windsor park was conferred upon him he officially directed the work of improving the park, which has since been carried on to such a successful end. This position enabled him to secure the execution of extensive schemes of drainage and he personally observed the work as it progressed. In 1840 Prince Albert became a member of the Smithfield club, and this was his first official connection with agriculture. In 1843 he became an exhibitor at the show of that club and then onward every year since that time the farms in his or the queen's possession have been represented more or less at the leading agricultural and fat stock shows. It was not until two years after the formation of the Royal Agricultural society that Prince Albert became a member, which he did in 1841 by taking the position of life governor.

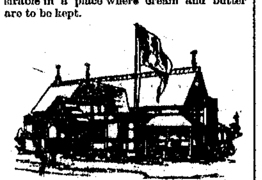


THE FLEMISH FARM.

The Shaw farm, so called because it was at one time held, before the estate was purchased by the crown, by a Frenchman, M. de Shawe, was more lately an appanage of Frogmore, and was occupied by the Princess Augusta; but on her death in 1840 the prince consort took it in hand, continuing as the tenant till his death in 1861, since which time it has been in the occupation of her majesty.

It includes the management of some 730 acres, of which 130 are arable; 600 acres being occupied by the home or dairy farm and the home park.

Here are the splendid farm buildings which form one of its chief characteristics. The cost of the buildings erected by the prince must have been enormous and with those on the home farm must have absorbed a very large sum of money. They are adapted for the breeding of stock, and at the present time there are upwards of 300 head of stock on the place, besides a large number of sheep and pigs. The principal herds are those of shorthorns and Jerseys, but there are also a number of Herefords and Devons. The object [illegible] watched by members of the royal family, and at the residence of Mr. Tait, the manager, who succeeded to this position on the death of his father in 1883, there is a suite of apartments devoted to the use of her majesty, from which she can privately go through the entire range of buildings. It is the dairy farm, near which is the magnificent range of poultry houses, where in days gone by members of the family were wont to walk in the morning, and, in the comfortable room which forms the center of the block, partake of new laid eggs, that will attract chiefly the attention of visitors. The magnificent dairy was built according to the directions of the prince consort, and it embodies all that is desirable in a place where cream and butter are to be kept.



THE QUEEN'S PAVILION.

The site is on gravel, the floor being laid on brick arches, which have an under vacant space of three feet. The external walls are hollow with ventilation. The roof is prepared to secure coolness. The floor is laid with tiles of an incised pattern, with a rich majolica border, not unlike a Turkey carpet in appearance. The tables are of solid marble, and below, extending to their full length, are tiled reservoirs, through which, when required, a stream of water can be kept constantly flowing. The walls are covered with tiles bearing a mauve colored star on a white ground, the whole having a green and white running border. Majolica bas-reliefs, emblematic of agriculture and the four seasons, are introduced on the walls, together with medallions of the royal family, supported by sea horses, etc. The ceiling is exquisitely made in keeping with the walls, and a fountain of majolica stands at each end of the dairy, the form being a shell supported by a heron and bulrushes.

A water nymph, pouring water from a jar, worked in statuary marble, forms a third fountain, and is placed at the south side of the room. The windows have double casements, the inner being filled with stained glass to represent daisies and primroses. Supporting the roof are six ornamental pillars, on which are clusters of small twisted shafts, carrying the ornamental arches in connection with the ceiling and roof, all being richly decorated in color and highly enameled. Externally the dairy is built in the renaissance style, bearing the legend, "Erected in the twenty-first year of the reign of her majesty Queen Victoria." The roof is covered with alternate rows of red and blue tiles, surmounted by an octagonal turret ventilator, on the sides of which are elaborate perforated panels bearing the royal arms. The cow house which supplies the milk for use in the dairy is very handsome, and the records kept of the production of each animal are most complete.

Recognizing the importance of helping the workers on the estate, amongst the various improvements effected have been the dwellings of the laborers, which are now worthy of the whole place. And in the first year of his tenancy Prince Albert established an evening school for his workpeople, which is continued still, and has been the means of doing a large amount of good. Both these examples have been followed by the Prince of Wales on his Sandringham estates, for the heir apparent has the same tastes as have been so strongly shown in his progenitors, immediate and remote.

It has often been a matter of speculation as to whether the queen's two magnificent farms pay for themselves. One thing is certain: the queen pays rent like any ordinary tenant, but whether it is high or low no one outside of the pale of royalty knows. One thing, however, is clear: the queen is quite a farmer.

Doctors, Give Heed!

A request is sent out from the census office to the medical profession of the United States urging co-operation with the government for the furtherance of a most important branch of statistical inquiry. Dr. John S. Billings, surgeon of the United States army, takes charge of the report on the mortality and vital statistics of the United States, as returned by the eleventh census. The census affords the only opportunity of obtaining near an approximate estimate of the birth and death rates of the larger part of the country, which is entirely unprovided with any satisfactory system of state and municipal registration.

In view of this the census office issues to the medical profession throughout the country "physician's registers" for the purpose of securing more accurate returns of deaths than is possible for the enumerators to make. The record should be kept from June, 1889, to May 31, 1890. In 1880 nearly 26,000 of these registration books were filled up, returned to the office and used for statistical purposes. It is hoped that double this number will be obtained for the eleventh census.

Physicians not receiving registers can get them by sending name and address to the census office.

Physicians are earnestly requested to lend their assistance, so that the mortality and vital statistics of the eleventh census will be more complete than heretofore. The circular is signed by Robert P. Porter, superintendent of census.

SHILOH'S COUGH and Consumption Cure [illegible]

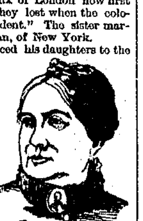
A PRESIDENT'S WIDOW.

DEATH OF ONE WHO ONCE LED "OFFICIAL SOCIETY" IN AMERICA.

Julia Gardiner, a Long Island Girl, Who Married John Tyler, Then Chief Magistrate of the United States—She Was Famous, Beautiful and Generally Admired.

Julia Gardiner Tyler, who recently died at the Exchange hotel, in Richmond, was once the most famous and probably most admired woman in the United States, and the peculiar circumstances of her marriage with President Tyler gave her a romantic, though melancholy, interest in the minds of the people. Though John Tyler's administration was politically stormy throughout, the White House during his term was socially brilliant, and for the last few months she presided over it. She was ardently admired and her society sought by all the great men of that era, even the most savage opponents of the president being her personal friends.

Julia Gardiner was born on Gardiner's island, near East Hampton, N. Y., in 1820, and educated in the Chegary institute, New York city. Her father, Col. Gardiner, was a prominent supporter of President Tyler, and her mother was a granddaughter of the Scottish chief Maclachlan, who led a part of the Scotch army at the battle of Culloden, where he was killed. Julia traveled extensively in Europe with her sister, and both ladies were so popular that an English writer remarked: "The beaux of London now first fully realize what they lost when the colonies became independent." The sister married John H. Beekman, of New York.



MRS. TYLER.

The father introduced his daughters to the president, and on his part there seems to have been a case of love at first sight. The talented and beautiful Letitia Christian, his first wife, had died early in his administration. While his courtship was in progress the president invited Col. Gardiner and his daughter to accompany him upon that fatal excursion down the Potomac on the United States vessel Princeton. On it was then the immense gun called the "Peacemaker," which fired a ball of 225 pounds. The order was given to fire it while passing Fort Washington.

"I rose upon my toes and opened my mouth," says Thomas H. Benton, who was on deck, "to lessen the shock and the next instant was as dead as I ever shall be."

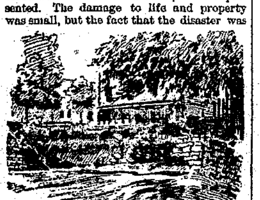
He heard no report, saw no flash—all was vacancy till he revived. The gun had burst, and on the deck lay the mangled remains of Mr. Upshur, secretary of the treasury; Mr. Gilmer, secretary of the navy; Commodore Kenyon, Mr. Maxey, minister to Holland; Col. Gardiner, a colored servant of the president and three or four sailors. Many others were injured. The widespread mourning may be imagined. The orphaned Misses Gardiner were taken to the White House, and since that time it has been a part of the unwritten law of Washington that president, vice president and cabinet shall never travel in a group.

When the period of mourning had passed, President Tyler and Miss Julia Gardiner were married in New York city, June 26, 1844. That she was a Catholic in religion was a fact much commented on at the time, that being the year of "Nativism" and the anti-Catholic riots. She lived and died in that faith, a consistant Christian. She retired with her husband to Sherwood forest, his estate on the James, and remained there till after the civil war, when she removed to Richmond.

She was at one time an active correspondent, and her letters are very interesting. She wrote to the Duchess of Sutherland, Viscountess Palmerston, Lady John Russell and other English ladies, defending with warmth and marked ability the constitutions of Virginia. Ex-President Tyler died early in 1862, and she was afterwards, with other widows of presidents, granted a pension of $5,000 per year. She leaves three sons and a daughter, one son, Lyon G. Tyler, being president of William and Mary college. Another son, who had served with distinction in the German army and received a medal from Emperor William, died in Santa Fe while engaged as a surveyor. One daughter also died before her mother. At the close of the war all the Tyler papers and mementoes were burned in Richmond, an irreparable loss and a great grief to Mrs. Tyler.

Johnstown, New York.

A cut from a photograph taken at Johnstown, N. Y., which recently suffered from a cloud burst and broken dams, is here presented. The damage to life and property was small, but the fact that the disaster was a repetition on a small scale of the awful catastrophe at Johnstown, Pa., gives interest to the matter.



PERRY STREET BRIDGE.

On the Lawn.

A quaint seat for the lawn is the toad stool, which make a good bit of color amongst the green. The toad stool is a wooden seat of the milking stool order, only shaped exactly like the fungus from which it takes its name. The upper part is shaded from red to orange, whilst the light colored base is painted with grasses, arranged as though they were growing. These stools look very ornamental on a lawn, or in a conservatory, and are extremely useful at afternoon tea. The newest milking stools are painted with Egyptian designs, which should be executed in dark red on a cream colored background.

A pillow is an addition considered necessary to make the hammock a complete success. As it must be stout and serviceable as well as gay, a hammock pillow is covered with the brightly striped ticking used by the manufacturers of awnings, and may be filled with down, hair or odorous twigs of the pine.

Insuring Against Burglars.

A Scottish assurance company has worked up quite an extensive burglary insurance business. The premiums charged vary from 1-8 per cent. on goods in terrace or attached houses to ¼ per cent. in banks and jewelry stores, and Glasgow and Edinburgh papers say it is getting quite fashionable to take out insurance against losses from midnight thieves.—Detroit Free Press.

[THACKERAY.

ONLY six states elect governors this year. They are Iowa, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Mississippi, Ohio and Virginia. The others are "November states."

THE Mexico Republican celebrated the first year of its existance with this week's issue. It is the latest addition to Oswego county papers and has been constantly improving since it was launched a year ago.

THE great "boodle aldermen" trials are probably at an end. McQuade who was tried in Ballston last week has been acquitted and it looks as though the ex-New York aldermen who have exiled themselves and live in Canada could safely return.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN arrived in New York Friday last very drunk. If reports are true and they doubless are in this case the great and mighty slugger has been in the same condition nearly all the time since his mill in Mississippi. It seems hard to find a human brute that can knock him out but whiskey can and will. All it needs is a little more time.

THE London Whitechapel murders which have mysteriously occurred during the past year with such frequency may possibly be limited in number now as a man has been caught with knife in hand near the body of a woman whose throat was cut and body mutilated. These murders known as Jack-the-Ripper class have caused more sensation in the police circles then anything in London for years.

THE contest for the nomination on the Republican side of the house for Surrogate will be a triangular one as there are "three Richards in the field" and all are hustling in great shape. Francis David of Phoenix, the present incumbent, stands the best show from the present outlook but in a three-cornered political fight it is hard to tell who will "get there." The other two who are working all the wires that they can lay their hands on are L. J. Carrier, of Phoenix and N. B. Smith of Pulaski.

JUST OUT—"Robin's Farewell," Caprice for Piano, by Fisher. Brilliant, not difficult and easy to commit to memory. A capital piece for young progressive pianists. Mailed on receipt of 50 cts. in 2-ct. postage stamps, by any music dealer or Ign. FISCHER, the publisher, Toledo, O.

Assault in the Second Degree.

On Friday at Pulaski was finished the trial of Andrew Hageny, William Putnam and Michael Donovan, union sailors charged with a murderous assault upon Jesse Josephs, mate of the schooner John Scheutte of Toledo at the dock in Oswego, on the night of April 26th. Josephs was dragged a mile into the suburbs, pounded with belaying pins and thrown into the cellar of a burned house. He managed to crawl to an adjoining house. The jury came in at 3 o'clock with a verdict of assault in the second degree, and recommended Putnam to mercy. There was no evidence that Putnam, although present, struck Josephs, The same three with four other union sailors, are also to be tried for coercion and conspiracy in forcing the crew of the Scheutte, who were "scabs," to leave her. Donovan and Hageny each got four years and five months and Putnam four years in state's prison.

England's Government Income.

Editor FULTON TIMES:

In "The London Pall Mall Gazette" of late date, I find the following enormous figures, that are worth examination by those who grumble at taxes in this country; when it is understood that the actual wealth of al England, is less than that of the United Staes:

Tariff or Custom duties yield	$97,131,280.00
Excise,	123,904,000.00
Stamps,	59,386,800.00
Property and income tax,	61,468,000.00
From other sources,	80,525,330.00
Total income,	$423,408,410.00

In view of these figures as taxes to be paid by the people, it is well to ask how we like a Monarchy beside a Republican form of government; remembering the while, that the above immense sum is the more governmental income and has nothing to do with the local taxes in any way. If this is all expended, it gives a fraction over one million, one hundred and seventy-one thousand dollars a day, Sundays and all, to run the English government.

The village park was alive with humanity last evening the occasion being the festival given by the Sharp Hose boys. The Fulton Band was there and rendered some fine music. The weather was all that could be desired and the affair a success financially and otherwise.

Dear sympathizer, can you feel for the gentle youth who was recently walking in the country clothed in his white tennis suit and chanced to pass a farmer; and the good hearted farmer said to the youth, "My boy, who has been so mean as to steal your pants, come with me and I will let you take and an old pair of overalls—you can't go home that way."

There is considerable excitement in Hannibal over the mysterious disappearance of William Walker. He left his house July 9th, with a milk pail for the purpose of milking the cows. He did not milk the cows and has not since been seen or any trace of his whereabouts discovered although every effort has been made to find him.

A fire alarm sounded about 5:45 yesterday afternoon which brought out the department. It proved to be the house of Washington Matison on Second street just above Academy. The fire department responded promptly but their services were not required as the flames were extinguished with pails of water. The fire was on the roof and is supposed to have been caused by a spark from a passing locomotive.

A gentleman calling one morning last week on one of our well-known lawyers, at his rooms on First Street, expressed his astonishment at his choosing so unpleasant a situation. 'Why?' added he, 'you have no prospect whatever.' 'No prospect!' rejoined the lawyer, jumping up to the window; 'come here, my boy; and I'll show you a most delightful prospect' The lawyer then pointed to A. Bristol's store, where the farmers were just crowding each other to get some of the bargains he was offering, in wagons, carts, buggies, harnesses, &c.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

Jim Coggins, the same person that some time ago was knocked down, jumped on and otherwise roughly handled at "Race" Vicory's saloon on Wall street, came into town yesterday afternoon from his home near the Reynolds school house and filled up with "benzine." Officer More attempted to gather him in but he was pugnacious and officer B. G. Clark had to assist to drag him to the lockup.

Jack McHale, a party that has previously figured frequently in our local police court, went to Menetto with some friends on Sunday on a drunk. Early Monday morning he was found by Officer Poole dead drunk. In the Police Court, Justice Sharp gave him his choice between $10 and 60 days. He raised the money and paid up.

Literary Notes from the Century Co.

Mr. Joseph Pennell and Mrs. Elizabeth Robins Pennell have respectively illustrated and written an article for the midsummer, (August) number of the Century Magazine, describing a rowing trip down the Thames river from Oxford to Richmond. The article which is called "The Stream of Pleasure," is illustrated with twenty-three of Mr. Pennell's pictures—most of them small engravings.

Joel Chandler Harris has written a new novelette for the Century,—"The Old Bascom Place," which will begin in the August number, and will be completed in three installments. It is a "re-construction" story, and is said to be in Mr. Harris's most delightful vein. The Century company will shortly bring out as a holiday book for young folks "Daddy Jake, the Runaway, and other stories," by Joel Chandler Harris, illustrated by Kemble.

The August Century will contain a "symposium" on wood-engraving, including a number of papers written and illustrated by a group of well-known engravers. The articles are, "Wood-engravers in Camp," by Frank French; "Originality in Wood-engraving," by Elbridge Kingsley; Painter-Engraving," by W. B. Closson; and "The New School of Engraving," by John P. Davis. Fourteen wood-engravings, of unusual interest are contributed to the series.

[illegible] today and made a [illegible] balloon ascension from the gas well. The balloon was inflated with natural gas from the gas well and Professor Meyers made the finest ascension ever witnessed in this section of the country. The afternoon was damp and misty. At about 2 p. m. the piping from the gas well was attached to the balloon. In thirty minutes the great balloon was completely filled, containing eleven thousand, five hundred cubic feet of the natural gas. Professor Meyers attached the basket, and, placing his little daughter in it, let the balloon, with a rope attached, several feet in the air. Photographs of the balloon, derrick and surroundings were taken. After the balloon had been lowered Professor Meyers stepped into the basket and was borne heavenward, receiving the hearty applause of the crowd. The professor soon disappeared in the clouds, but soon lowered himself and landed about one mile from the gas well. Everyone was delighted with the ascension. Nearly a thousand people assembled, although the appearance of Professor Meyers had not been advertised. Professor Meyers was invited to come here by the directors of the gas well for the purpose of testing the supply of gas at their well. The experiment proved eminently satisfactory. The capacity of the balloon being eleven thousand five hundred cubic feet, and filled in just thirty minutes, would show at present an average flow of over one-half million cubic feet per day. According to the present showing, the well is a very valuable one, altho' the prospects are very flattering for a much larger flow as the drilling continues. The rock still remains very favorable, as the experts say a much larger vein of gas is looked for every day. Many thanks are due Professor Meyers for his novel experiment.—Syracuse Standard.

How to Scatter a Crowd.

A new way to scatter a crowd has been discovered. He had the entire sidewalk to himself in less than a minute. —Chicago Tribune.

[illegible] Deer Park Wednesday and will probably go back to the [illegible] for a long vacation. Even the few days visit from which he has returned seems to have immensely benefited him, bringing a bronze tinge to his generally pallid face. During the two or three weeks vacation which he will take, any necessary business will be transacted at Deer Park. It has not been decided whether or not official announcements of matters decided upon by the President will be made from Washington or from Deer Park. The probilities are that the appointments at least will be announced from the White House. This visit, together with the promised stay at Bar Harbor as the guest of Secretary Blaine, will likely constitute the President's entire vacation, although he may thereafter take short trips from the city until the heated term is over, which in Washington does not end before the middle of October.

Such of the candidates for the speakership of the next House as come here from time to time and talk with the President, express themselves as confident of an early extra session. Judge Perkins who is just at present the only candidate in town, says that from conversation with General Harrison he believes that the session will be called for the early part of October. He thinks that very little time will be consumed in organizing the House. He differs from nearly all Congressmen who have been interviewed on the subject in anticipating only a short fight over the rules. He believes that the extra session will have some time to devote to the teriff, as well as to discuss a national election law. The contested election over, will not in his opinion, receive imediate attention.

The Indiana politicians who come here so frequently have much to say about Mr. Harrison's partiality for Indianapolis people and cite numerous examples to show that the only first class positions he has bestowed upon Indianians have been given to Indianapolis. The comments are very bitter. The same conduct cost Mr. Cleveland a good many votes in New York. There was a Democratic association of New Yorkers here that was by no means a unit. Nearly a fifth of the total membership and nearly all the really influential people were from Albany and Buffalo, of course, the New York city Democrats never recovered from the mortification and the "Albany association" as it was termed by them, fell into the soup. Extreme favortism of any locality of his own State, is dangerous to any President.

The naming of children after contemporaneous great men is a weakness that many parents have cause to regret, Charles Sumner, replying to a Boston constituent who thought of naming his boy after him said that while Charles was always a substantial and respectable name. Sumner might yet become a very bad one. Besides, is there not something supremely ludicrous in finding some dunder-head butcher named Virgil? People who ought to know, say that Ex-Senator Bruce, who is about as close a political trimmer as one cares to meet, has never ceased to kick himself for naming his boy Roscoe Conkling, being always afraid that the naming might make him unpopular with some Republican opposed to the great New Yorker's wing of the party.

I accidently met an old friend with his wife and a son of about four, the other evening. The father has been in the Departments so long that the people of his own Illinois home have quite forgotten him. He has not even been home to vote for ten years. His wife is the niece of a prominent republican Senator, and he depends upon that relationship to retain him in office, and just at present to obtain him a substantial promotion. He is a great republican now, but four years ago was a howling democrat though before Mr. Cleveland's election he had been a republican.

Cheese Market Report.

AT UTICA.

UTICA, July 22.

Salesmen were very well satisfied with the result of to-day's market, inasmuch as they expected to see it go considerably lower than it really did. There seemed to be some influence at work to sustain it, and some salesmen declare that they had ceased to believe in New York quotations since Utica buyers were willing to pay week after week as much as they could get for the goods in New York, providing the quotations were correct. The secret seemed to be that buyers pay a fancy price for a few factories to laven the poor stock they have on hand, and make the whole batch saleable. Sales to-day were mostly of July cheese, although in many instances they comprised two or three days of June. We heard only two or three men express any intention of holding banck a part of their week's make, but we believe they sold the whole offerings before the day was over.

The transactions were as follows:

Lots.	Boxes.	Price.
7	664	7¾
83	8,589	7¾
4	1,038	7⅞
32	3 412	8c
15	1,515	8⅛
25	2,436	8¼
6	520	8⅜
178	18,174
	1,788	Com.
Total.	19,962

Transactions one year ago 20,040 boxes, uling price 8c. Two years ago, 18,220 boxes; uling price 8¼c.

There were sales of 60 packages creamery butter at 15½ to 20c.

AT LITTLE FALLS.

LITTLE FALLS, July 22.

Cheese—Prices are a little lower to-day, hardly one-fourth cent, which caused a very slow market. Much the same condition of things exist as last week, buyers still claiming a poor business for themselves, and darirymen accepting the situation and taking the best obtainable prices, and sending the stocks steadily forward. Buyers made the same distinction between colored and white stock as heretofore, preferring colored by one-fourth cent a pound. The the last of the June make sold to-day, and in a few instances a little July stock. The factories are quite uniformly sold out, none of them holding stock that is sufficiently cured to ship and stand the heat. It is not thought that there will be much improvement in prices till the July cheese is sold, and it is also the belief with many that present rates will hold for this stock. Following are the transactions:

Lots	Boxes	Price.
45	3,245	7¾
43	2,995	7¾
27	2,301	8c.
2	191	p. t.
9	538	Com.
126	9,270
Farm dairy	730
Total	10,000

Farm Dairies—The cheese sold at 7½ to 8c. most at the latter price. 730 boxes changed hands.

Butter—Creamery butter sold at 16c., the only price paid for the three lots of 27 packages sold. There were 23 packages of farm dairy butter sold at 16 to 17c.

AT FULTON.

Twenty-one factories were represented at this market on Monday night with 2,250 boxes of cheese, most of which sold at 7¾ and 8 cents. Four factories sold on commission.

A Spaniard insists upon his horse or arms not being taken in execution; a Frenchman, according to the ancient laws of France, has his dress privileged; a Scotchman is content if his working tools are left to him; but let an American, if he lives in the town of Granby or Volney, insists that his piano or organ shall be exempt for it, as invariably happens, he has bought of A. Bristol, he knows he cannot replace it for double the money anywhere else.

There is a habit in some of our churches of the choir singing a hymn to music different from that set for the hymn and the congregation are obliged to stand and listen and not take part. It is a poor policy for it discourages congregational singing and is a disappointment to the people. When a hymn is announced and different music is used from that written for the hymn, the music used should also be announced that the congregation may sing. Part of the joy in devotional exercise consists in union singing and it should be encouraged by every effort possible.

It is feared that Daniel Shattuck has permanently lost his eyesight. He has been blind in one eye for some time. On Thursday last while eating his supper the food before him suddenly changed color and then vanished from his sight. This was caused by hemorrhage in the sound eye and since he has not been able to see images although he is able to distinguish between daylight and darkness. Dr. H. L. Lake, specialist on eye diseases, was summoned and treated him but fears that his sight will never be recovered. On Monday with Putnam Allen he went to New York to receive treatment.

[illegible]

A little late one evening this week, long after the gentle dew had made stern protest against the pasty bangs and stove polish shines of the park lounger, there were seen crawling along in shady places, keeping from view of passers by as though the mark of outlawry were against them, two slump gaited, wet haired, sunken eyed, muddy panted, gravelly shod mortals, stoop shouldered with a weight of care or sorrow mortals, dragging footsteps nerveless from some dire calamity mortals—wending their way to, if by chance it might be found, some downy bed.

Ah! rash explorers into the unknown, take heed from these dejected bipeds, and do not try the Horse Shoe—the dam called Horse Shoe--it might be by a mill site or——

Why should these brave youths who had braved all the dangers of the stormy canal—who had proved themselves courageous seamen—skilled to every maneuver in the handling of their bark—why should they, covered with glory, after having night after night rolled up in their blankets made horrible grimaces at the moon's subdued smile, finally lulled to sleep by her changeless expression, having conquered both fleas and flies lived on milk toast and air and donned the sandwich called Syracusean—why we say with true Socratic arm flourish should they, after a whole week's ceaseless round of victory on field and water, with gun and stomach, on their proud glide homoward (boats glide) tempt the danger of the Horseshoe. They did—down into the raging torrent shot the frail craft—in came the water, over rolled the boat, out went guns, tents, blankets, shoes, pants, all into the depths of the deep—never more to rise, but where, O! where, were the heroes. Kind friends they were last seen wending as the dew was falling.

Skipped the Town Lively.

S. Driffres is the name of a fresh individual with a white hat who was in town last week and represented himself as an agent for Armour of Chicago. He made a point of insulting women on First and Rochester street Thursday afternoon and on complaint of some ladies whom he had insulted, a warrant was sworn-out for his arrest Friday morning. He also had trouble with a commercial traveler at the Lewis house Friday morning and the aforesaid commercial traveler proceeded to thump him in a lively manner. He also was thrown around by William Sever whose wife he had insulted and had it not been for Officer Poole would have been roughly handled. He cried like a two-year-old youngster and showed conclusively that his only forte was to insult unprotected females. He proceeded to the court room for the purpose of procuring a warrant for his assailants' arrest but in some way discovered that a warrant was being made out for his own arrest. So he "made out." He went to the Clark house, out the back door and up Second street, but Officer Poole was after him and it was discovered that he possessed another quality, that of a a sprinter, and escaped. It is believed that a farmer drove him to Phœnix, where he took a train for Syracuse. He will probably not be seen in Fulton again in many a day.

Illness of Hon. H. C. Howe.

It has been known for some time that the physical condition of Hon. H. C. Howe of this village was precarious. For several weeks he has been in Syracuse receiving medical treatment at the hands of Dr. Didema who last week advised that he should go to Clifton Spring. He went there on Saturday and a council of physicians after consultation on his case adviced that he return to his home in this village at once where absolute quiet and rest could be obtained.

Mr. Howe and his wife returned Monday evening. The Clifton Springs physicians pronounce his trouble to be progressive paralysis. He is in a very weak condition but his wide circle of friends hope that his illness will take a favorable turn.

[illegible] of the Late David Ramsden.

To the Editor of THE FULTON TIMES—

A friend of the late David Ramsden while fully appreciating the generous notice of him in your last week's paper find that his position on coming to Fulton, was not quite understood and believes that a short account of his life and work will be acceptable to the people among whom he lived and labored for fifteen years.

Previous to his settling in Fulton he was well known to all the leading business men in New York, having been for many years in the dry goods commission business in Bradford, Yorkshire. He began the Bradford branch of Messrs. N. & S. Henry of which firm he was a member and afterwards the firm of Firth & Ramsden of Bradford, both of which were the leading concerns in the commercial trade.

Having realized a handsome fortune he withdrew from the merchant business and commenced manufacturing, for which he had always retained a predilection from his early years—his father having been a manufacturer. This undertaking [illegible] unfortunate as a year of fearful commercial [illegible] set in—his bank broke and he was overwhelmed in the deluge of disaster—only however to rise again with unsullied reputation—working indefatiguably for years to meet his liabilities. Having done this he formed a PROFIT partnership with Messrs. Hoyt, Sprague & Co. to commence the manufacture of WOOSTED not woolen goods at Oswego Falls. With the loose woolen goods made there by another man he never had any connection.

He brought from England a few men and some machinery and from a small beginning, as all the country knows he made a phenominal success. His shoe lastings, Italian cloths and later dress buntings taking good rank with the best productions of the old country. After the failure of Messrs. Hoyt, Sprague & Co. the business was sold at public auction and formed into a stock company called the Oswego Falls Manufacturing Co. Mr. Ramsden was a stockholder and was appointed Managing Director in which position he remained until five years ago when he retired. His character was earnest, unassuming, genial and upright. He knew no greater pleasure than to help in spreading prosperity around and if the man is blessed who makes two blades of grass grow where only one had grown before, surely the man whose industry and skill causes hundreds of comfortable homes to be built where all was bare will not be left without his reward. He inexorably required good work, and in return, liked his people to be well employed and well paid. He was not worldly wise, but careless about written agreements in business--thinking that like himself every man might be trusted to do right.

With all his faculties unimpaired—without ache or pain—with a clear conscience and a firm faith he passed away peacefully in charity with all mankind. Who would not pray—"May my last end be like his?" ⁂

Evanelistic Services.

On Tuesday, August 6th, the "Madison University Gospel Band" will begin a series of evangelistic services at the Baptist church. The "Band" is composed of three young men, who are students in the University and who spend their vacations in this work. Mr. A. F. Erdman, of Brooklyn, is the leader of music and a soloist; Mr. F. H. Divine of Binghamton and Mr. W. J. Sholar, of Raleigh, S. C., are the preachers. Mr. Devine has attended two seasons of Mr. Moody's summer school at Northfield, Mass. These young men come highly recommended. Last summer they labored at Sandy Creek and at Pulaski and the pastors in each of these places speak with enthusiasm of their work. The result of their work last summer was 325 reported conversions.

WORTH KNOWING.

A noted English agriculturist advises farmers to try ensilaging instead of haymaking in securing the hay crop.

The key which unlocks the mystery that lies hidden to many poultry-keepers is natural devotion and personal perseverance.

Never drive a colt so far or so fast that it becomes leg weary. It might stop and refuse to go. This is a bad lesson.

According to a recent estimate, in Oregon the public lands still indisposed of aggregate 60,795,360 acres; in Washington 44,796,160 acres.

Not more than fifty per cent. of the chicks that are hatched are raised to maturity. Figure up and see how many millions of dollars poulterors lose annually by carelessness.

Josiah Hoopes says that the experience of the last few years has taught him that August is a better season than spring for transplanting evergreens.

It is important that newly planted trees be shaded from the sun. Straw wrapped around the trunk up to the lower branches is successfully used for this purpose.

It has been demonstrated that horses can be fed on ensilage with advantage, and that where they are required to do service, as in winter, an allowance of thirty pounds of ensilage per day will keep horses in good condition.

There will be no danger of a variety of potatoes "running out" if the best tubers are saved for seed every year. Everyone who plants potatoes can improve the variety by carefully selecting the seed and giving good cultivation.

The many and various wants of fowls are synonymous with necessities, and no better word can be used in expressing them, nor a better meaning understood in supplying them. Any one want left unsupplied will be sure to be heard from unfavorably in one way or another.

Build a Silo.

Every farmer who has forty head of cattle to winter should build a silo, declares a Western writer. He lately saw a herd of dairy cows that were fed on corn ensilage the past Winter, and which came through as fat and sleek as if they had been kept on Summer grass. It is one of the best and most economical foods that can be used under all conditions. A full-grown cow will consume thirty pounds of ensilage per day; if a few pounds of corn meal are sprinkled over each feed the cattle will keep fat, and milch cows keep up the flow of milk almost as well as they do on grass. The butter holds its golden color. Sheep also grow fat when fed ensilage, and keep remarkably healthy. The cost of putting up ensilage is about $1 per ton. If a cow eats a thousand pounds per month, that makes it cost for ensilage for the four Winter months only $2. The ensilage and meal not only make good, healthful food, but it is cheap withal, which is another recommendation.

Curing Cheese

Dr. Reynolds, of Maine, observes that in curing cheese certain requisites are indispensible in order to attain the best results. Free exposure to air is one requisite for the development of flavor. Curd sealed up in an air tight vessel and kept at the proper temperature readily breaks down into a soft, rich, ripe cheese, but it has none of the flavor so much esteemed in a good cheese. Exposure to the oxygen of the air develops flavor. The cheese during the process of curing takes its oxygen and gives of carbonic acid gas. He also says that the development of flavor can be hastened by subjecting the cheese to a strong current of air. The flavor is developed by the process of oxidation. If the cheese is kept in too close air during the process of curing, it will be likely to prove deficient in flavor.

10 Dont's For the Farmer's Garden

1. Don't deprive yourself and family of fruits and vegetables.
2. Don't depend upon wild berries
3. Don't depend upon the markets or your neighbors.
4. Don't set aside your poorest land for the garden.
5. Don't plant in a restricted area closely fenced in.
6. Don't plant in little beds.
7. Don't plant in an old orchard.
8. Don't plant largely of anything which demands greatest attention when farm work is most pressing.
9. Don't get plants or seeds of neglectful neighbors or from old plantations.
10. Don't put implicit faith in novelties.—L. H. Bailey, in Country Gentleman.

Gilt-Edged Butter.

Various modes of making this desirable commodity have been recommended. A. L. Grasley, of Maryland, writing to the Mirror thus sums up in few words the "art of making feed; the cow well and kindly treated; the milk kept clean and set in a pan, pot or deep can; the cream properly ripened and churned in a dashless churn; the butter washed and salted in the granular state, worked by mechanical means, printed by the same and sent at once to customers. Practically, this is all there is about it. Anyone can make fine butter if he has the right "plant," and part of this plant must be in the head and must be of the kind that will grow.

Surviving Presidents' Wives.

The death of Mrs. John Tyler, once the young bride of a President who was even then almost venerable from old age, leaves Mrs. Polk, Mrs. General Grant, Mrs. Garfield and Mrs. Cleveland as the only surviving wives of former Presidents of the Republic. Mrs. Tyler's wedding, nearly half a century ago, created something like the same feeling of sentimental interest which was attached to Miss Frances Folsom's becoming the wife of President Cleveland in 1886. All parties will join the Press in hoping that it will be long before we lose any more of the ex-first ladies of the land.—Press.

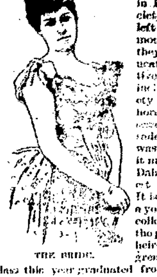
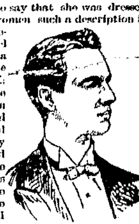
Portraits of the Principals in a Recent Notable Wedding in New York Society.

There was a wedding in high life recently in New York which filled St. Patrick's cathedral with thousands of spectators, and Archbishop Corrigan had the satisfaction of uniting two noted American families. John V Dahlgren, son of the late Admiral Dahlgren, was married to Elizabeth Drexel, daughter of the late Joseph W. Drexel, the Philadelphia banker.



THE BRIDE.

For some years the Drexel sisters were regarded especial matrimonial prizes in Philadelphia society. Their father left them enormously rich, and they are highly educated and attractive. Their only inclination to gayety is a love for horses. Each possessed an Arabian saddle horse, which was used daily by it mistresses. Mrs. Dahlgren is the oldest of the sisters. It is not often that a young man leaves college to step into the possession of an heiress. Mr. Dahlgren was one of the class this year graduated from Georgetown college.



THE GROOM.

At a wedding the most important thing after the bride is the bride's costume. For men it is enough to say that she was dressed "in white;" for women such a description is entirely inadequate. Miss Drexel was attired in a dress of thick white satin, en train, with front draped in rare point d'Alencon lace, 150 years old (Mark Twain would wonder if the lady couldn't afford some nice white lace), the dress costing in all some $5,000. The corsage was square cut, and edged with heavy white braided cord, with long tassel ends. The neck was trimmed with white point d'Alencon lace, and the veil, of the same material, floated from a tiara of diamonds—a gift of the bride's mother. Her feet were incased in white satin slippers, and her hands in white Suede.

Among the wedding gifts was one from the bride's mother—the Martin Luther engagement ring, with which he betrothed Catherine von Bora, a curious silver ring with a ruby, which has been in the Drexel family since 1825.

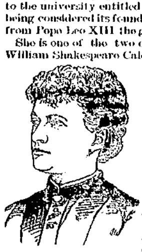
With his wife's princely fortune young Dahlgren will be able to keep up the name so honorably acquired by his father in improving the armament of the United States; but whether the young man will invent a new gun or content himself with the enjoyment of the luxuries to which he succeeds is a question for the future to determine.

TO MARRY A PRINCE.

Mary Gwendoline Caldwell, Who Gave $300,000 to the Catholic University.

Miss Mary Gwendoline Caldwell, founder of the Catholic University at Washington, is soon to marry Prince Murat, grandson of the Murat who was an officer of Napoleon Bonaparte. It is only in name that this marriage will make her an "American princess;" for, in fact, she has long been more truly a princess than any foreign title can make her—a princess by nature and fortune, and still more by princely gifts. Her gift of $300,000 to the university entitled her to the honor of being considered its founder, and she received from Pope Leo XIII the gold medal of honor.

She is one of the two orphan daughters of William Shakespeare Caldwell, of an English family located at Fredericksburg, Va. His father, an English actor and enterpriser, introduced gas into Cincinnati, Louisville and New Orleans, and acquired a large fortune, further increased by his son, until the estate left the young ladies was estimated at $5,000,000. Her mother was a sister of Vice President John C. Breckinridge. The grandfather was a Protestant, but both her parents were converted to Catholicism. They both died several years ago. The fortune was put in charge of trustees during the minority of the daughters, and their first use of it was to found the university, the younger sister giving $50,000.



MISS. CALDWELL.

Miss Gwendoline was educated in the convent and academy of the Sacred Heart, in Manhattanville, now a part of New York city, which has of late years been her home, though she lives much abroad. She is called beautiful, having extremely regular, in fact, classical features, with dark brown hair and bright blue eyes. Energy and decision show in her face and movements, and her friends say she is amply able to take care of her large fortune and a French husband, too. Most American ladies who have tried the latter experiment have made sad failures of it, but it is to be hoped Miss Caldwell will do better. Of course she will maintain control of the larger part of her fortune, but young gentlemen on this side must regret that so much cash is to go to France.

Health Resorts Below the Sea Level.

The therapeutic value of regions below the sea level, for asthmatic or consumptive patients, who have there continuously higher atmospheric pressure than at the sea level, has of late been a subject of investigation by Dr. Lindsey. He finds that excellent effects have been thus obtained in the valley of Conchilla, near Los Angeles, Cal., about 272 feet under the sea (barometric pressure only about 7 mm. higher). The most noteworthy place of the kind on the earth's surface is probably the Dead sea district (1,289 feet), and the following are some others: Lake Asal in East Africa (689 feet), the oasis of Araj in the desert of Lybia (270 feet), the Arroyo del Muerto in California (230 feet), the oasis of Siwah in Lybia (123 feet), the borders of the Caspian (86 feet).

A Wise Saying.

The author of the sentence "Not every one who has the gift of speech understands the value of silence" was John Caspar Lavater, born in Zurich, Switzerland, in 1741 and died in 1801. He was a celebrated Swiss Protestant theologian and physiognomist, and a worthy and benevolent man. He was shot by a soldier at the capture of Zurich by Massena in September, 1799, and suffered from the wound till the time of his death.

The TORTURES OF DESPAIR
Can be no worse than the agony of a man or woman troubled with Sick Headache. The terrible pain; the nausea; the lack of all interest in life; the disgust with everything and everybody; the world can afford no pleasure to any one when suffering from Sick Headache.
Why have Doctors never been able to cure this fearful trouble?
Because they have never discovered the right thing!
Have they tried?
Yes, for hundreds of years.
But a Chemist of Troy, N. Y., discovered the remedy, and the remedy that will cure in EVERY CASE arising from a deranged stomach.
Sawyer's Sick Headache Powders
Go right to the Seat of the trouble—the Stomach. They are purely vegetable, and contain no narcotics. They act with wonderful promptness and never leave any bad after-effect.
Phillip Phillips, the "Singing Pilgrim," says of them:—"I cannot tell you how glad I am to get something that relieves my wife of her headaches."
Rev. George F. Pentecost, D. D., says:—"I have received many benedictions from those to whom I have given these powders."
The late Rev. C. P. Sheldon, says:—"They are a wonderful remedy, and all they claim to be."
A SAMPLE

RENEWS HER YOUTH.

Mrs. Phœbe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town. "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I'm free from all pain and soreness and can do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain. Try a bottle, 50c and $1, at R. E. Phillips' drug store.

A Woman's Discovry.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this county. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed eminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for the Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz. Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co. of Shelby N. C.—Get a free trial bottle at R. E. Phillips' drug store

Whatever you dislike in another person, take care to correct in yourself by the gentle reproof.—Sprat.

Avoid him who, from mere curiosity, asks three questions running about a thing that cannot interest him.—Lavater.

Any one may do a casual act of good nature, but a continuation of them shows it is a part of the temperament.—Sterne.

Affectation is certain deformity; by forming themselves on fantastic models, the young begin with being ridiculous and often end in being vicious. —Blair.

Nothing more impairs authority than a too frequent or indiscreet use of it. If thunder itself was to be continual it would excite no more terror than the noise of a mill.—Colton.

Great talents for conversation should be attended with great politeness. He who eclipses others owes them great civilities; and whatever a mistaken vanity may tell us, it is better to please in conversation then to shine in it.—Swift.

Cato, being scurriously treated by a low and vicious fellow, quietly said to him: "A contest between us is very unequal, for thou canst bear ill language with ease, and return it with pleasure; and to me it is unusual to hear, and disagreeable to speak it."

To be ambitious of true honor, of the true glory and perfection of our natures, is the very principle and incentive of virtue; but to be ambitious of titles, of place, of ceremonial respects and civil pageantry, is as vain and little as the things are which we court.—Sir P. Sidney.

Down where the meadows are smiling in clover,
And each blade of grass holds its own drop of dew,
Where fairy-like cloud-ships sail dreamily over
Across the fair sea of etherial blue;
Where the wild bees incessantly hum in their gladness,
The honest old farmer is making his hay.

At sly back room meetings where the slate*

In ways that are dark and too numerous to mention,
Where money for ballots is freely exchaged;

This that and the other designed to betray,
By promises this way, those that way he hedges,
The sly politician is making his hay.

Don't torture the body with heavy clothing in summer.

Don't pick the teeth with pins or any other hard substance.

Don't neglect any opportunity to insure a variety of food.

Don't sleep in a room provided with stationary wash stands.

Don't eat or drink hot and cold things immediately in succession.

Don't pamper the appetite with such variety of food that may lead to excess.

Don't read, write, or do any delicate work unless receiving the light from the left side.

Don't direct special mental or physical energies to more than eight hours' work in each day.

Don't neglect to have your dentist examine your teeth at least every three months.

Don't forget that moral defects are as often the cause as they are the effects of physical faults.

Don't allow your servants to put meat and vegetables into the same compartments of the refrigerator.

Don't keep the parlor dark, unless you value your carpet more than your children's health.

Don't delude yourself into the belief that you are an exception as far as sleep is concerned: the nominal average of sleep is eight hours.

Don't endeavor to rest the mind by absolute inactivity; let it seek its rest in work in other channels, and thus rest the tired part of the brain.

Don't neglect to constitute yourself a public protector by thrusting into the gutter every banana or orange peel you may encounter on the sidewalk.

Don't wear a shoe the sole of which is not broader than the outline of your sole when pressed by your full weight upon a piece of paper marked with a pencil.

Don't wear pointed shoes, which have a tendency to dislocate the second toe upward and to produce ulcerations, sometimes so severe that they demand amputation.

Don't hesitate to avail yourself of every opportuniiy to rest at midday during hot weather. Follow the example of the denizens of hot regions, who quite naturally indulge in the needed "siesta."

Don't eat pork. When it is absolutely unavoidable to do so it should be rendered harmless by being exposed to strong heat long enough to be converted into a decided gray color, even to its innermost part.

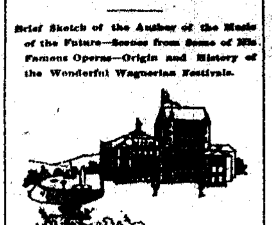
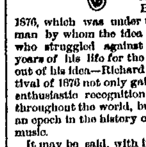
THE MUSIC OF WAGNER.

IT IS NOW BEING SUNG AND SUNG WELL AT BAYREUTH.

Brief Sketch of the Author of the Music of the Future—Scenes from Some of His Famous Operas—Origin and History of the Wonderful Wagnerian Festivals.



THE musical festival which began at Bayreuth in July and will close on Aug. 18 will be as notable as any that has occurred since the first great Bayreuth festival of 1876, which was under the direction of the man by whom the idea was conceived, and who struggled against adversity for many years of his life for the successful carrying out of his idea—Richard Wagner. This festival of 1876 not only gained for Wagner an enthusiastic recognition that has extended throughout the world, but it clearly marked an epoch in the history of the development of music.

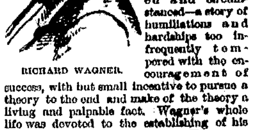


RICHARD WAGNER.

It may be said, with little fear of contradiction, that not since the marvelous harmonies of Beethoven first amazed and delighted Europe, or the revolutionary teachings of Gluck aroused a discussion, the echoes of which, after an interval of more than 100 years, have scarcely yet died away, has a composer exercised such a marked influence upon the works of his contemporaries and upon the musical ideas of the world as did the late Richard Wagner. The story of his early life is not unlike that of many other great men similarly constituted and circumstanced—a story of humiliations and hardships too infrequently tempered with the encouragement of success, with but small incentive to pursue a theory to the end and make of the theory a living and palpable fact. Wagner's whole life was devoted to the establishing of his theory. It was a life of protest. He was one of the most berated men of his time.

Not until the great wave of approval which swept over Europe in the early part of the '70s did the critics do him justice. It was a great reaction. Wagner societies were organized in every large city of Germany. Men who from sheer pertinacity, mingled with a fanatically conservative disinclination to accept anything that was new and swerved from established criterions, became the most ardent enthusiasts over what was then known as the "music of the future," but what is now more aptly termed the music of all time. Wagner never composed anything for the mob. When he first went to Paris, friendless and absolutely without any tangible future before him, he was well qualified to compose any number of florid, tinselish operas that would have captured the town and put money in his purse. But the idea was revolting to him. He preferred to live in a garret and perform for a pittance such musical drudgery as the adapting of comic opera scores for the cornet a piston. Nearly all of the music that he wrote while in Paris was rejected as being too fantastical.

When Wagner had composed "The Flying Dutchman" (to which he was inspired by an intense appreciation of the wonders of the sea), an opera which, although morbidly gloomy, contains some of his most noble music, the public was so bewildered by the composer's daring departure from all established rules that it was undecided as to whether the innovation should be strangled or applauded. So it remained passive. But when Wagner offered to it the splendid harmonies allied to the sonorous and significant poetry of "Tannhauser," when it had listened to the marvelous "Lohengrin," teeming with haunting strains of mystical meaning, and when he composed "Tristan and Isolde," a profound work which deals with conditions of human life that have passed away many centuries since, and the music of which is an absolute defiance of all rules and traditions—when these great operas were fairly thrust upon the notice of a public whose palate was becoming jaded with the mechanicalness of the existing opera, they inspired an appreciation and an enthusiasm not paralleled in the annals of music.



WAGNER'S VILLA.

Wagner's theory of the true mission of opera was the development of a vague idea which he conceived when but a boy. The vast influence which the works of Byron exercised upon continental Europe during the first half of this century had the effect of creating an interest in English literature, and Shakespeare particularly was carefully studied. When Wagner was still in his twelfth year he was an enthusiastic admirer of the Bard of Avon. His two heroes were Beethoven and Shakespeare. He resolved to compose an opera, the music of which should be as great as Beethoven's, and the poetry as great as Shakespeare's. He set to work and produced a tragedy that was a sort of combination of "King Lear" and "Hamlet." There were over forty deaths in this remarkable tragedy, and in order to have enough characters to finish the story Wagner says he was obliged to bring back upon the scenes the ghosts of the dead characters! But this half represents the first crude formation of his theory, which, briefly stated, is that there must be a perfect union of the music with the action of the drama.

The drama must not be a mere auxiliary of the music—simply a thread upon which to hang a certain number of arias and duets for soloists. Any one who reads the libretto of one of Wagner's operas will recognize the masterful touches of a poet. And the music is in exact accord with every variation of the story. Every passage, almost every bar, when taken in connection with the development of the drama, has a meaning of its own. When the curtain falls on the first scene of "Tannhauser," for instance, the music, instead of ceasing until the beginning of the next scene, is continued without any intermission, and when the curtain rises on the splendid Wartburg [illegible] the way for the progression of the story by [illegible] who died and was buried in Bayreuth in 1886, is in the gymnasium-platz, and an inscription in gold letters marks his house. It is a picturesque little town, with a population of about 20,000. The quietness of the place was probably its chief attraction for Wagner, and it was here that he saw the completion of his life's work. He had long been possessed of a desire to have an opera house of his own, where his works could be produced under his personal direction. He wished to have the four operas comprising the great Nibelungen Tetralogy rendered to his own satisfaction, and he would not entertain the idea of having them produced anywhere but in an opera house of his own.

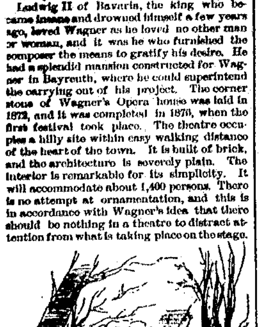
Ludwig II of Bavaria, the king who became insane and drowned himself a few years ago, loved Wagner as he loved no other man or woman, and it was he who furnished the composer the means to gratify his desire. He had a splendid mansion constructed for Wagner in Bayreuth, where he could superintend the carrying out of his project. The corner stone of Wagner's Opera house was laid in 1872, and it was completed in 1876, when the first festival took place. The theatre occupies a hilly site within easy walking distance of the heart of the town. It is built of brick, and the architecture is severely plain. The interior is remarkable for its simplicity. It will accommodate about 1,400 persons. There is no attempt at ornamentation, and this is in accordance with Wagner's idea that there should be nothing in a theatre to distract attention from what is taking place on the stage.

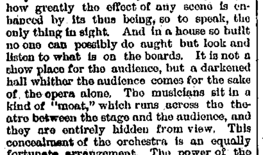


FUNERAL OF SIEGFRIED IN "GOETTERDAEMMERUNG."

There are no proscenium boxes, no visible footlights or orchestra, no prompter's hood. Those who are accustomed only to the distracting architectural accessories of an ordinary theatre can hardly conceive, perhaps, how greatly the effect of any scene is enhanced by its thus being, so to speak, the only thing in sight. And in a house so built no one can possibly do aught but look and listen to what is on the boards. It is not a show place for the audience, but a darkened hall whither the audience comes for the sake of the opera alone. The musicians sit in a kind of "moat," which runs across the theatre between the stage and the audience, and they are entirely hidden from view. This concealment of the orchestra is an equally fortunate arrangement. The power of the music is increased by its thus seeming the work of invisible agents, instead of piping, puffing gentlemen in non-dramatic garb. And the whole volume of sound comes to the ear with far more unity and precision of effect.

The stage is 100 feet wide by 103 feet in height and 83 feet in depth. Back of this is another stage of 50 feet in depth that is only used on extraordinary occasions. The scenic arrangements, as is necessary in the production of Wagner's operas, are probably the finest in the world. Many novel effects are introduced. For instance, in "Parsifal," the old knight and the boy Parsifal appear to be walking through a deep forest to the castle of Montsalvat. But in reality it is the scenery that is moving past them, sometimes entirely hiding them from view, and they are finally seen to emerge from the wood and enter the grand hall of the castle, although they have not once left the stage. The shifting is marvelously well done, and the illusion is complete.

Lovers of music from all over the world assemble at Bayreuth during the summer to hear Wagner's operas. The price of seats is twenty marks, or $5 each, regardless of location, so those who apply first get the best seats. There are usually fourteen or sixteen performances, spreading over a period of four or five weeks. The performance begins at half past 4 in the afternoon, and continues until half past 10, with two intermissions of an hour each, during which the audience leaves the house and walks around the spacious gardens, or dines at the nearby restaurant. When the tetralogy is given the performance lasts for four days, one opera each night. Leaving aside certain passages in "Tristan" and "Die Meistersinger," which Wagner never surpassed, the tetralogy is considered his most complete and in many respects his greatest work.



WAGNER'S LIBRARY.

Many regard the first act of "Die Walkure" as the most finished of his creations; and certainly it has a wonderfully impressive climax. But grand as this is, there are many who consider the last act of "Goetterdaemmerung" the supreme achievement of Wagner. The exquisite trio of the Rhine maidens swimming and singing in a picturesque forest scene; the death of Siegfried and the procession that slowly carries his body, by the light of the moon, up the hill; and the burning of the funeral pyre, at the end, until it is put out by the rising waters of the Rhine bearing the maidens on the surface; these scenes, with the glorious music accompanying, cannot be matched by any act of any other opera. Nevertheless, it is the opinion of the best critics that, as a whole, "Siegfried" is the grandest part of the tetralogy. In no other work of Wagner's is there such a minute correspondence every second between the poetry, music and scenery. Every action and gesture on the stage is mirrored in the orchestra. A great musician once said that "in 'Siegfried' we hear for the first time music such as Nature [illegible] herself would make if she had an orchestra."

The tetralogy (more commonly known as the trilogy, on account of the fact that the first opera, "Das Rheingold," merely serves as an introduction to the other three) was first produced at the first Bayreuth festival of 1876 as it will probably never be produced again.

Wagner left in his will a stipulation that "Parsifal," his great religious opera, the last of his composition, should only be produced in Bayreuth. Mrs. Wagner still holds this right, and derives a considerable income from the annual productions of the opera. Mrs. Wagner, by the way, is the daughter of the late great pianist, Franz Liszt, and was first married to Hans von Bulow, from whom she secured a divorce and was married to Wagner. She is a woman of many accomplishments, and was Wagner's idol. Her father, Franz Liszt, assisted Wagner many times when he was in sore distress, and they were the closest of friends.

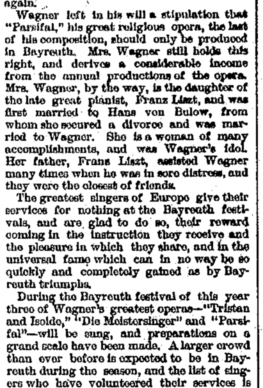
The greatest singers of Europe give their services for nothing at the Bayreuth festivals, and are glad to do so, their reward coming in the instruction they receive and the pleasure in which they share, and in the universal fame which can in no way be so quickly and completely gained as by Bayreuth triumphs.

During the Bayreuth festival of this year three of Wagner's greatest operas—"Tristan and Isolde," "Die Meistersinger" and "Parsifal"—will be sung, and preparations on a grand scale have been made. A larger crowd than ever before is expected to be in Bayreuth during the season, and the list of singers who have volunteered their services is scarcely less than a list of the pre-eminent vocal artists of the world.

FRITZ REUTER'S STATUE.

Germans in Chicago Propose to Put It Up in Lincoln Park.

The name of Fritz Reuter is at present occupying the attention of the German population of Chicago. They propose to put up a monument to his memory in Lincoln park, but it seems there is some opposition to the plan. The monument, however, a cut of which is given with this article, is in the process of manufacture, and it seems probable that the Germans will have their way. The great question of Who is Fritz Reuter that there should be a monument erected to his memory in Lincoln park? has been asked many times by the American population of Chicago. Well, Fritz Reuter was a German poet. He was born in Mecklenberg in 1810 and died in Saxony in 1874, and his specially was the Plattdeuttsche dialect. He stands in Germany in about the same rank that Will Carleton, James Whitcomb Reilly, Bret Harte and John Hay do in this country. He is the poet of the common people, and some of his characters are acted by the German comedian, Junkermann, who was on this side of the water last year and entertained numerous German audiences. Well, it seems that in Chicago there are a great many admirers of the German people's poet, and they have got together and raised a subscription and propose to put up the monument whether or no.



FRITZ REUTER'S STATUE.

The people who are opposed to it argue that it would be just as sensible for a lot of Americans over in Berlin, for instance, to put up a monument to the memory of James Whitcomb Riley. But there is one thing that perhaps they haven't thought of, and that is that there are a good many more Germans in Chicago than there are Americans in Berlin, and, in fact, Chicago is in large part a German city. At any rate it seems likely that the Germans will carry the day, and that by and by people who walk through Lincoln park will, after they have taken a good look at the statue of Schiller which stands there now, pass on to that of Reuter, and wonder "who in the mischief that fellow is."

Cement for Broken Iron.

By a new method of cementing iron the parts cemented are so effectually joined as to resist the blows even of a sledge hammer. The cement is composed of equal parts of sulphur and white lead, with a proportion of about one-sixth of borax. When the composition is to be applied it is wet with strong sulphuric acid, and a thin layer of it is placed between the two pieces of iron, which are at once pressed together. In five days it will be perfectly dry, all traces of the cement having vanished and the work having every appearance of welding.—New York Telegram.

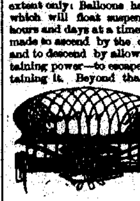
CAMPBELL'S AIR SHIP.

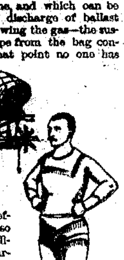
Something About the Queer Craft and the Man Who Went Up in Her.

The mythological stories of Dædalus and Icarus show that the first attempts to navigate the air were made in prehistoric times. As far back as records go mention is found of the efforts of man to soar above the earth. Even after the peculiar properties of hydrogen gas were discovered, however, in 1766, it was seventeen years before any practical result was obtained in the line of aerial navigation. In 1783 the Montgolfier brothers succeeded in sending up a balloon made of linen cloth, lined with paper and filled with air rarefied by heat. From that time to this the subject has been one of absorbing interest to inventors, and some of the greatest minds of the world have grappled with it.

These efforts have been successful to this extent only: Balloons have been constructed which will float suspended in the air for hours and days at a time, and which can be made to ascend by the discharge of ballast and to descend by allowing the gas—the sustaining power—to escape from the bag containing it. Beyond that point no one has gone, and it is to the effort to overcome the so far unsurmounted difficulty that Dr. Peter Carmont Campbell, of Brooklyn, has devoted the greater part of the last thirty years of his life. After hard study and many experiments he perfected a model of a machine which he named the Campbell Air Ship and which was a year or two ago copied in the construction of a craft of sufficient size to carry four persons.



THE AIR SHIP.



PROF. HOGAN.

It consisted of an egg shaped balloon, under which were hung a basket and a system of propellers and rudders with which, he argued, the navigation of the air could be accomplished. With these rudders and propellers Campbell thought his ship could be caused to move forward and backward, up and down, even against a moderately strong wind if necessary. A somewhat successful test of the machine was made in 1887 from Coney Island on a very still day. After that no practical trial was made until the last, the result of which is known to the entire newspaper reading world.

Edward D. Hogan, the unfortunate aeronaut who attempted to navigate the air in Campbell's air ship, was born in Moretown, Canada. He made his first balloon ascension from Jackson, Mich., when he was 16 years old. It is estimated that after that he went up in the neighborhood of 200 times. He had a wide reputation as a daring aeronaut and had some thrilling adventures. Last summer he made periodical ascensions at Rockaway Beach, L. I., leaving the balloon at an altitude of 5,000 feet and descending to earth with the aid of a parachute. The parachute looked like a great umbrella. Ropes took the place of the ribs, and suspended beneath it was a hoop for Hogan to hang to. When he reached the desired height Hogan would grasp the hoop and leap from his seat.

The parachute was attached to the top of the balloon by a slender cord. Hogan's weight would break this, at the same time overturning the balloon and opening a valve which allowed the gas to escape from the balloon, which would slowly float to earth. As Hogan and his parachute dropped, the folds of the latter would open and he would reach the earth so gently as to hardly jar him. Once he dropped into the sea and was barely rescued alive.

He once gave an exhibition at Auburn, N. Y., which included one of these parachute descents. He left his balloon, but there was some hitch in the parachute ropes, and it failed to open. For 2,500 feet he dropped like a piece of lead, while the breathless crowd below looked on horrified, expecting to see him dashed to pieces in a moment more. Finally the parachute slowly opened, just in time to prevent Hogan from striking a house top with terrific force. He toppled from the roof and fell on a picket fence, receiving a severe wound in his thigh. Although he was unable to walk, he crawled to where the parachute lay, folded it up, lay down beside it and waited calmly for somebody to turn up. His friends carried him to a physician, who sewed up the gash, and Hogan proceeded to Rochester, where he made another ascension the next day.

AN IOWA ENTERPRISE.

The Blue Grass Palace That Is Being Built at Iowa.

Corn palaces, spring palaces, summer palaces, ice palaces, all serve their purposes. Creston, Ia., is to have the next structure of this nature in the shape of a blue grass palace, work on which has just been commenced.

Creston is in the center of the blue grass region of southwestern Iowa, a region in which, though not so well known as the blue grass region of Kentucky, the graceful blue grass flourishes most delightfully, and which is noted among those familiar with it for its pretty girls and its whole souled, hearty hospitality.
